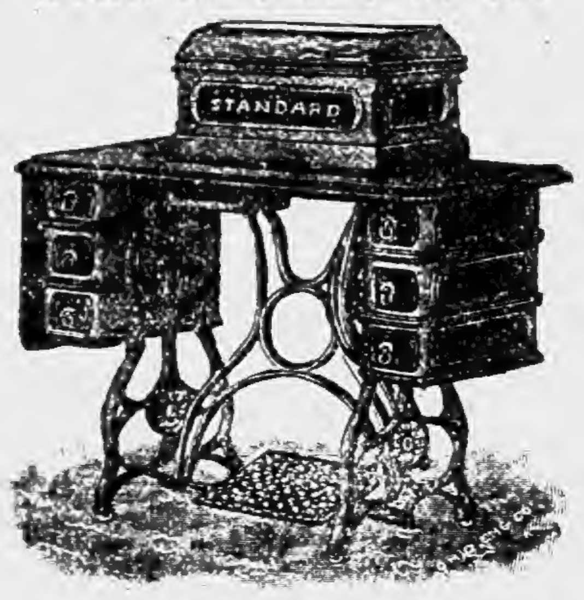
Last week we promised to tell you more about the

"STANDARD" SEWING MACHINE.

HERE IS A CUT OF IT.



ARE YOU AWARE

That Twenty-Five Years Ago the inventors of the "Stand-d" Rotary Shuttle Sewing Machine invented the first high m machine?

Twenty-Five Years Ago the inventors of the "Standard" vented the first reciprocating shuttle or lever motion machine. ll family shuttle machines, except the "Standard," are made n that principle to-day.

Twenty-Five Years Ago the inventors of the "Standard" invented the first drop af table for a sewing machine.

Twenty-Five Years Ago the inventors of the "Standard" invented and made the nly machine with adjustable and hardened bearings.

TO-DAY they manufacture the first and only successful Rotary Shuttle, the tandard".

The above are facts.

The world's ablest veterans in sewing machine invention and manufacturing are the head of the Standard Sewing Machine Co.

The "Standard" is twenty years ahead of anything else in sewing machines.

AUBURN AND VICINITY.

Some Reminiscences of its Early Days and Pioneer Citizens.

The Independent Order of Odd Fellows was introduced to this country from Manchester, England. and the first regular lodge opened in Baltimore, Maryland, in 1819.

The order is widely extended and strong in numbers, is fast increasing everywhere as it keeps pace with growing population. Their successful efforts for relief of members, aid to widows and orphans, the education of the latter and the burial of the dead, fittingly exemplify the good intent of this grand organization.

A lodge was early opened in Auburn, but its initial history is invoved in obscurity from loss of charter, and the record book prior to 1856 was not returned to Grand Lodge.

A charter was granted to Bradford G. Cosgrove and others July 21, 1852, for a lodge to be located at Auburn. At the session of Grand Lodge, Jan. 18, 1853, Joseph L. Silcox Grand Master, appointed P. G. Jeffords special deputy to institute Auburn Lodge No. 116, on July 21st 1853.

This date may therefore be taken as the time of founding the lodge. The first officers and probable charter members were: W. Park, N. G.; W. H. Straight, V. G.; W. W. Griswold, Sec.; and S. W. Ralston, Treas.

In 1854, Straight was N. G; John Ralston, Sec.; and J. D. Davis, Treas. In 1855, Davis was N. G.; W. Griswold, Sec.; and Park, Treas. July 17, of this year, W. W. Griswold, was N. G.; A. O. Espy, Sec.; and Davis, Treas. The meetings of the lodge to this time were held in a hall over V. Weaver's drug store.

The fire of Jan. 1856, destroyed the hall and the lodge reorganized on June 25, following by election of A. O. Espy, N. G.; S. W. Ralston, V. G.; W. W. Griswold. Sec.; and W. Park, Treas.

J. D. Davis June 16, and Wesley Park, July 17, 1865 were the first representatives to the Grand Lodge to which No. 116 was admitted Nov. 17, 1868.

The Lodge was upheld and the objects of its existence carried on during the intervening years down to 1872 with success.

In the fall of that year a brick block was contracted for by various parties, including the Lodge, to be erected on the north side of Seventh St. opposite the court yard. The block was three stories in height with 110 feet front and 80 deep. Henry E. Altenberg & Co. contracted to build the east twenty-two feet for the Odd Fellows and began work.

In October, a sudden, violent storm destroyed the incomplete structure, and practically bankrupted the lodge. The charter was returned and the lodge disbanded.

But is was not in the nature of things that an organation so worthy, with purposes so benificent should lack a representative in Auburn, and a part of the old members with fresh accessions made application for and were granted Jan. 17, 1882, a new charter as Mentor Lodge No. 591, and on the 30th following the lodge was instituted with the following charter members:

W. H. Rakestraw, Charles Stimely, A. H. Phillips, Philip Noel, Leonard Wildeson, William Murphy, H. J. Norris, Geo. W. Gordon, John N. Baker, Finley Gibson, John Bates, F. T. Zimmerman and J. J. Littlefield.

The first officers of the new lodge were F. T. Zimmerman, N. G.; P. Noel, V. G.; W. H. Rakestraw, Sec.; G. W. Gordon, Treasurer.

Mr. Gordon served in the capacity of treasurer from organization of the lodge until July 1, 1889, making fifteen successive terms.

The number initiated and admitted by card since Mentor Lodge was formed, is seventy-six and of these, eleven have been dropped, eleven have been granted final cards, who have moved away, and one died, namely, H. E. Altenberg.

The lodge is in a flourishing condition financially and otherwise. The members are attentive to duties of the order and its principles are fittingly exemplified by deeds of charity, and prompt assistance justly due, is cheerfully rendered to members in distress.

The following members have served as Noble Grand since organization, have attended and have been admitted as grand representatives to the Grand Lodge of Indiana viz: F. T. Zimmerman, Philip Noel, J. H Baker, J. M. Rice, S. U. Tarney, B. F. Culbertson, T. H. Sprott, H. R. Culbertson C. M. Merica, C. A. Dugan, W. B. Brown, M. Boland, H. J. Shafer, W. J. Bowman, J. B. Baxter, W. P. Harter, C. H. Brown, A. J. Bell, Ora Brandon and H. D. Weaver present N. G.

S. B. Johnston and A. B. Richards served as N. G. in the lodge at Waterloo and have been admitted by card to No. 591. Dr. Johnston is at present holding the office of Grand Master.

As corollaries of Masonry and Odd Fellowship, the wives of those composing these lodges, though precluded admission, have found congenial association and complemented the benevolent features of their existence by work in their several lines as members of organizations known respectively as the "Eastern Star" and the "Daughters of Rebecca", just as the grand army of the republic is aided by the Woman's Relief Corps.

Other praiseworthy orders have been instituted from time to time in Auburn and swell the measure of good to society. In neighboring towns like organizations have been formed and the place is obscure in a marked degree which does not have a representation.

Sales of Text Books.

The following are the sales of text books by the various school corporations of the county for the quarter ending Dec. 8th, 1891. This will probably never be increased in the county as the full set of books are now introduced. At the first introduction two years ago the sales amounted in the county to $2,398.85, since which report until the last there has been no settlement of over $600. This shows that the text book law is saving the people money:

Democratic Meeting.

The meeting called for last Saturday was not well attended as the exceedingly bad weather, and utterly impassable, roads prevented. The few who came met at the COURIER office first and then went to the Treasurer's office in the court house. Ab. Kelley, chairman of the county committee, presided, and J. A. Barns was made secretary. As most of the townships were not represented, the delegates were chosen by a general consultation of all present. The county being entitled to fifteen delegates Keyser township was given two, and each of the other townships given one. The following is the list as selected:

Butler—Perry Fitch.
Jackson—J. J. Walter.
Concord—T. S. Murray.
Newville—Warren Miller.
Stafford—Henry Webster.
Wilmington—John W. Boyle.
Union—P. F. Ryan.
Grant—L. J. Blair.
Richland—M. J. Thomas.
Fairfield—J. M. Brumbeck.
Smithfield—Douglas Kelley.
Franklin—Allen Shultz.
Keyser—Fred Schulthess and L. J. Gengler.

A motion was made by W. H. Leas, seconded by L. J. Miller. that the list as read, be adopted. Carried.

Motion made by Gen. Blair that the county chairman notify each delegate of his appointment and request him, if he could not attend the meeting at Fort Wayne, Jan 8 in person, to arrange for sending a proxy. Carried. A motion to adjourn was made by Mr. Sawvel. and the meeting adjourned. The delegates are to meet in Fort Wayne Jan. 8, to elect a man to serve for this congressional district as member of the State Central Committee.

Served 'em Right.

Last week, being crowded, we could allude but briefly to the vigorous measures the town authorities are using to clear our streets of "drunks and disorderlies." The marshal got tired of dallying along with them, and finding he would be sustained by the authorities, he pounced on a number and let them sober up in the cooler over night, and next day brought them before 'Suire Walborn, who gave them a taste of "the law in such cases made and provided." The fines were made light, but the point was to impress on the minds of these fellows, that a halt must be called or they would get worse. Monday morning a young man from near Cedar Creek, was taken from the calaboose where he had rested all night, and fined for getting drunk and abusing his team. He will not be apt to do it again, and so that much more good will be done. Let the good work go on. Let the town board sustain the marshal, put the cooler in shape to make it a decent place to "cool off," in, and then be no respecter of persons, but serve them all alike—don't put in every man arrested except the editor of the Garrett Clipper, allowing him to go free while others not half as drunk are locked up. But at all events, keep on in the good work so well begun.

Stockholders' Meeting.

The next annual meeting of the stockholderers of the Auburn District Fair will be held in Gandy's Hall in the town of Auburn, DeKalb Co., Ind on the third Thursday of January 1892, at 10 o'clock a. m. the same being the 21st day, of said month, and according to article 4 of the constitution of said fair association, for the election of the following officers for the ensuing year: One president, one vice-president, one secretary, one treasurer, and a board of twenty directors: also for the transaction of such other business as may come before the meeting.

JOHN L. DAVIS, President, CAL. HUSSELMAN, Secretary.

Misplaced Charity.

Charity is a good thing, and its exercise under proper conditions reflects the highest credit on the man who bestows it. But there are many cases where charity is a positive wrong, because it results in an injury to an undeserving recipient. Let us mention a few cases, that come right home to us. We saw Hank Little, editor of the Garrett Clipper, drunk on the streets the other day, asking for money. And the person addressed gave it to him. This thing happens every time he gets drunk, for he will go the rounds of the town, and more especially will he bore every man in the court house, asking for a dollar, a half, a quarter or a dime, even. We know of one case, on his last drunk but one, on being refused, he called the gentleman the foulest names in his drunken anger. Yet the gentleman did right to refuse, and so do the others who refuse, for all know that he will take the money to keep up his drunk. Were it it not for the money he gets in this way, his sprees would end in a day or two, for his money would be gone. But just after his last dime slips away, he meets some thoughtless friend, begs money of him and goes on another tear and so on for two weeks. Do these friends ever think of the wrong they are doing in the name of blessed charity? Then there is another case of charity misplaced. We refer to men who have families, and who are able to work. While work is plenty, they get along, but spend all their surplus earnings in drink or similar follies. Then, when winter comes on, they have not a penny, and, ask the township or county to help them. We are told of men right here in Auburn to whom this will apply, men who every week or two can command money enough to get drunk, yet can get nothing for their families. The taxpayers who have to work every day to support their own families, object to help support in idleness these lazy chaps who are having a good time at public expense. Let us see that this, too, is stopped.

Happily Wedded.

The wedding of two popular young people in Jackson township takes place to-day, Jan. 7, at high noon. The ceremony will be at the home of the bride's parents, the officiating minister being Rev. J. J. Fred. of the M. E. church of Spencerville. The contracting parties are, Mr. Frank Provines, son of James Provines, and Miss Lena Bartels, daughter of Augustus Bartels, both well known and prominent families. The groomsmen are Charles Bartels a brother of the bride, and Oliver Reed. The bridesmaids are Annie Shoudel and Della Maggins. An infare will be given the next day, at the home of James Provines, the groom's father. Mr. Provines is well known here having been for some time a member of our high school. He is now a teacher, and located at the Boots district. The COURIER sends its best wishes.

OFFICERS SHOT DOWN.

A BLOODY COUNTY-SEAT WAR IN KANSAS.

Montt Must Apologize—Six Men Killed in a Collision—A Canuck's Cunning—Interstate Commerce Commissioners—Desperate Fight With Moonshiners.

COUNTY-SEAT WAR.

Three Officers Shot Down by a Lawless Mob.

A special from Aarkalon, Kan., dated the 6th inst., says: A bloody county-seat war has broken out in this neighborhood and three State officers have already lost their lives, while armed forces are now endeavoring to capture and murder a district judge. A bitter feud has been on in Stevens County ever since the killing of Sam Wood by James Brennan, on June 23, 1891. This feud culminated to-day in an ambush being laid by desperate men for the purpose of killing Judge Theodosius Botkin, but a timely warning gave the judge opportunity to escape. Sheriff Dunn, with six deputies, started to find the ambushed men, but ran into the ambushers and were fired upon. The Sheriff and Sheriff-elect Ray Guyman and Deputy Sid Nixon were killed at the first fire. Judge Botkin was told to hold court at Springfield to-day. Seward County, before its organization, was a part of Stevens County. There is a county-seat war on between Springfield and Arkalon. A mob composed of the old Stevens County faction was determined that Botkin should not hold court. The Sheriff and his posse were on their way to escort the Judge to his court; when near the Judge's house a Mrs. Larable ran to Judge Botkin's house and told him of his danger. He fled to Arkalon with his family, has taken refuge in a house, and his friends are holding the mob at bay. His friend are calling on all able-bodied, law-abiding citizens throughout the County to rally to his support.

Judge Botkin informed Gov. Humphry by telegraph of the state of affairs, who immediately ordered a company of soldiers to the scene of the trouble under command of Adjutant General Roberts, and has ordered two more companies of State troops to be ready to move at a moment's notice.

MONTT MUST APOLOGIZE.

The Chilian Government Has Ordered Him to Make Amends.

The correspondent of the New York Herald at Valparaiso states that he has heard that the Chilian Government has cabled to Minister Montt, at Washington, to make a sincere apology to the United States for the bluff and deplorable attack upon the Baltimore sailors on June 16 last. The apology, he is told, is unqualified in its character. Other matters that are in dispute between Chili and the United States are to be speedily considered by the new administration. The correspondent also telegraphs that from semi-official sources he learns that the reason the Santiago police are kept in the vicinity of the American legations is that the intendente of the city is in daily receipt of letters containing threats to burn and sack the legation. The Government, therefore, desires to have the police near at hand so as to prevent the execution of any such threats.

The Baltimore Home Again.

San Francisco special: The United States steamer Baltimore has arrived from Chili.

Capt. Schley was interviewed as soon as the Baltimore was anchored. He said that the reports telegraphed to this country regarding the attack on his men in Valparaiso were substantially correct. One very significant feature of the assault on the Baltimore's men was that every one of them was stabbed in the back, and that soldiers, police and sailors took part in the affair. None of the Baltimore's men were armed, and Capt. Schley says that half a dozen of his men, if they had been provided with weapons, could have stood off the 2,000 Chilians, as they were a lot of cowards. Further than this Capt. Schley refused to talk. The future movements of the Baltimore are at present unknown. She is very foul and will probably go to Mare Island to be cleaned.

A Canuck's Cunning.

Winnipeg (Man.) special: The Regina Leader, a Conservative paper, makes serious charges against Hon. Edgar Dewdney, the present Minister of the Interior of the Regina townsite. The charge is that while Lieutenant Governer of the Northwest Territory Dewdney, upon ascertaining where the Capitol of the Territory would be placed succeeded with the aid of his groom in corralling the townsite of the present town of Regina, the Capital of the Territory. A fac simile of a letter in Dewdney's handwriting, instructing his groom how to proceed in getting possession of the land, is published. The Leader demands the expulsion from office of Mr. Dewdney.

Desperate Fight With Moonshiners.

In a secluded portion of Glasgow, Ky., Deputy Marshal J. Reed attempted to capture a still and half a dozen moonshiners. A desperate fight followed and Marshal Reed shot and fatally wounded Chris Depp and shot several others, inflicting more or less serious wounds. Four were taken prisoners.

An Exciting Scene in Court.

There was an exciting scene in the Criminal Court at St. Louis recently. Walter Dane, a negro, was on trial for attempted rape of a young girl when he was assaulted by her father, Dr. Grady, with a knife. The officers of the court interfered before much damage was done.

Six Men Killed.

Six men were killed outright, two probably fatally injured, and many others badly hurt in a collision between the east and west-bound cannon ball trains on the Wabash road at Aladdin, Mo., a small station near Hannibal.

Interstate Commerce Commissioners.

President Harrison has appointed James W. Dill, of Iowa; William M. Lindsey, of Kentucky, and William R. Morrison, of Illinois, Interstate Commerce Commissioners.

A Murderer's Body Stolen.

Concord (N. H.) special: The body of Isaac Sawtelle, the famous murderer, is costing the State as much dead as when alive. After the murder it has cost the county $25,000 to run him in, try his numerous trials and convict him, but since his death, upon demands of the various cemetery corporations in New Hampshire, the State police have been kept busy keeping his relatives from interring him surreptitiously. Now the other night some one stole the body while it was in the care of State [illegible] Great Fal s, and it is believed [illegible] ffered by parties acting [illegible] ical body in the State of Massachusetts. As there has been a great desire to dissect his brain. The body was taken direct from under the eyes of a detective, and Mrs. Sawtelle, the mother, declares that she will sue the Chief of Police at Great Fa ls, and the County Commissioners, if they don't recover the remains. There is a grand hustle, and the county has promised a reward.

IT CONVENES.

The Ohio Legislature Opens Its Session.

Both branches of the Ohio General Assembly were called to order at 10 o'clock Monday morning, and the organization outlined in the Republican caucus was effected without incident. The Senate did not seat either Iden or Gaumer, the contesting claimants for the seat for the Muskingum district, but appointed a committee to investigate the matter.

The Governor's message, which is the shortest on record, was received and read.

It is as follows:

To the Seventieth General Assembly:

"The constitution commands the Governor to communicate annually his views to the Genreal Assembly.

"As this function will doubtless be well and fully discharged one week from to-day by the incoming Governor, the present incumbent contines himself to a renewal of the suggestions and recommendations made by him to the Sixty-ninth General Assembly.

"Especial attention is called to the benevolent, penal, reformatory and educational institutions of the State, and to the satisfactory exhibits made by the various public bodies in their recent annual reports. JAMES E. CAMPBELL, "Governor."

Fatal Fire at Columbus.

Joyce's Carriage Repair Company, Paynter Manufacturing Company, and a paint shop at Columbus, Ohio, was destroyed by fire. Andrew Kerins, driver of Assistant Chief Welsh's vehicle, was buried under a hot mass of brick and timbers, and lived but half an hour after being taken out. William Gallahan, a citizen was struck on the head by flying debris, and seriously injured. Philip Kirsch, a truckman, received four terrible gashes on his head and was internally injured. He will die. Perry Wall, a reel driver, had his thigh broken and was internally injured. Assistant Chief Walsh was slightly injured about the legs. The loss on buildings will be $10,000 partially insured; loss on stock $15,000, fully insured.

Sad Fate of an Old Lady.

A distressing affair occurred in the mountains, near the Peaks of Otter, in Bedford County, Va., by which an innocent and inoffensive old lady lost her life. Some parties set fire to the house of Arrington, the escaped horse-thief, which was occupied by his mother and grandmother. Mrs. Arrington discovered that the house was on fire and ran out and found that straw had been piled against the house and was burning very rapidly. Her mother, an old lady, was sleeping up-stairs, and before she could be reached and aroused the fire had gained such headway that escape was impossible, and she was burnt to death. The dastardly act has occasioned great indignation.

A Cave of Silver.

Kingston (Ont.) special: A miner, while prospecting on John Perry's farm, in Barry Township, discovered an opening among some rocks which was choked with debris and tangled berry bushes. He cleared away the debris, entered and was soon in a cave of considerable but at present unknown extent. Two hundred feet from the entrance a sheet of water was encountered. The miner secured silver stalactites, which he has since beaten into rings. The ore in sight is very valuable. Further investigation will follow. It was an old tradition that this cave existed, and that the Indians made ornaments from the ore in it. The tradition now becomes a reality.

Chili Anxious for Peace.

A special from Santiago de Chili, says: It is affirmed on the highest authority that Chili would not feel humiliated in helping to the utmost in her power to terminate peacefully, and in a manner honorable both to herself and the United States, the conflict which, but for the lengthy and secret form of criminal procedure followed in Chili has allowed of constant false reports hostile to a good understanding to be propagated abroad, could never have attained such exaggerated proportions. It is evident there are fire-brands who are anxious for the inauguration of a war which would be disastrous to the best interest of both the countries concerned.

Deadly Work.

A horrible accident happened at McKeesport, Pa., in which two Huns were probably fatally injured and a third badly hurt. The men were engaged tearing down No. 3 furnace in the Butt-weld department of the National Tube Works. They were afraid of the work and complained to their foreman, who compelled them to do it. Suddenly the whole side fell out of the furnace and the three men were buried under the red hot bricks. Their shrieks attracted a crowd of workmen who soon had them extricated but all were terribly burned, and will die.

A Fiendish Crime.

Bay City (Mich.) special: Another horrible murder goes upon record in Bay County, the fifth within a year. Joseph Loomintz, an inoffensive Pole, was attacked in his own cottage on Fifteenth street and murdered in cold blood, robbery being the motive. His body was found in a pool of blood on the kitchen floor by his wife on her return from work. Their 3-year-old daughter, who made an out-cry while the murderer was in the house, was struck in the face with a hammer while in bed. There is no clue to the perpetrator of the deed.

A Respite Granted.

Washington special: Secretary Blaine has received a telegram from Governor Flower containing the information that a respite of Niccoli Trezza, the Italian under sentence of death by electricity in New York, would be granted and that nothing would be done in the matter until further advices from the State Department. The telegram was sent in response to one sent by Mr. Blaine asking for a reprieve pending an investigation into the case. Trezza is said to be an Italian citizen and the reprieve was asked by the Italian Government, through Marquis Imperiali, its representative here.

Another Cured Lunatic.

A special from Greenville, Mich., brings the news of a terrible death of an insane man there. James Taylor, one of the best citizens of the town, became suddenly insane and attacked his wife with a razor, cutting a gash from the left ear almost to the right shoulder blade, it being about seven inches long and deep enough to hold a folded towel. He was only prevented from killing her by the intervention of neighbors. There is but little chance for her recovery. Taylor was formerly an inmate of an insane asylum, but was discharged as cured three months after his incarceration.

Tramps and Trainmen Killed.

The Union Pacific fast mail train met with a serious accident about two miles west of Lagrange, Ore., by which engineer R. E. Low, fireman George Low, and a tramp named Zunimski, were instantly killed, and another tramp named Singer was fatally injured. The train was being drawn by two engines. It is supposed that in rounding the curve the the head engine caused the rails to spread and second engine, mail and baggage cars were precipitated into the river below. None of the passengers were seriously injured.

Fifteen Persons Drowned.

London special: A steamer believed to be the Red Star Line's Noordland, which sailed from Antwerp recently for New York, ran down the British bark Childwell off the Wieling lightship and cut her to pieces. The bark sank and fifteen of her crew were drowned. The steamer continued on her voyage without offering assistance. The Great Eastern Company's steamer Ipswich rescued the captain and the remainder of the crew, who were found clinging to the only remaining mast.

Buried in Corn.

While playing in the Cunningham elevator at Kentland, Ind., Matthew, son of John Hobertz, in company with A. Heilman, jumped into a bin containing 15,000 bushels of shelled corn which was being transferred into another bin from a valve at the bottom. The boys were testing their ability to extricate themselves after being drawn down part way by the running grain, when young Hobertz got in too deep, and sank beneath the surface and was smothered to death.

Blown to Atoms.

Four boxes of dynamite bombs used in blasting at Schoonmaker's stone quarry, in Waukatosa village, five miles west of Milwaukee, Wis., exploded, blowing Albert Butlitz and William Walker to atoms and scattered their remains over the country for several miles. John Raelisky was fatally injured. The two men killed were in the act of loading the blasting pump when the explosion occurred. The concussion demolished hundreds of windows in Waukatosa and a number in Milwaukee.

Burned in a Boarding House.

Elmer S. Hofferd, of Chester, N. H., F. B. Tucker, of Sacremento, and E. W. Foster, of Sanford, were burned to death in their boarding house at Sanford, Cal. J. C. Hammond, a printer, was fatally hurt by jumping from the second story window and died later. Six others, whose names are unknown, were fatally burned. The fire was started by the explosion of a coal oil stove in the boarding house.

Egged Off.

Some kind of a supposed dramatic aggregation under the name of the Uncle Josh Comedy Company put in an appearance on the stage of Staub's Theater at Knoxville, Tenn., before a fair sized audience. The hayseed features of the play presented too rustic a sight to call for any encores and the entire company was forced to retire from the stage in front of a volley of eggs from the gallery. The affair has created much excitement in the city.

Smugglers Drowned.

San Francisco special: Ten Chinese and two women, who started in a smuggling sloop to cross the straits to Port Townsend, are without doubt drowned. They have been out a week and the remains of a boat was picked up at Esquimault harbor. Among the party were four of the most notorious smugglers on the coast, while the other eight were their victims.

High-Binder-Revenge.

San Francisco special: The High-binder warfare has broken out afresh. The other night an unknown Chinaman was shot in the heart of Chinatown. The man was entering his house when the assassin fired one bullet, entering the victim's back and another his breast. The murder shows all the earmarks of high-binder-revenge, but the police have no clue.

Pulitzer in Chicago.

Chicago newspaper circles are discussing a well defined rumor that Pulitzer is about to start a Chicago paper on as gigantic a plan as the New York World is operated on. The Chicago World Company has been incorporated with $4,000,000 capital stock, and the New York journalist is believed to be the moving spirit of the deal.

Blew Up His Bakery.

Henry J. Miller's bakery on South Fourth street, St. Louis, was wrecked by dynamite. A bomb was set under a rear window, and the wall was torn out. Nobody was hurt, but the building and stock were badly damaged. Miller has had trouble with the Bakers' Union, and the police suspect some of its members.

Garza Cornered.

A dispatch from Loredo says: "United States soldiers and Texas rangers are reported to have Garza surrounded in the northwestern part of Zapata County, Texas. If this is the case Garza is hemmed in on all sides and it will be impossible for him to turn in any direction."

Construction Train Derailed.

A construction train at Toops, Hardeman County, Tennessee, was derailed from some unknown cause, and three colored employes of the Illinois Central Railroad Company were instantly killed. Five cars left the track.

Stricken Dumb While Preaching.

At Westport, Ind., F. M. Westhafer was stricken dumb in the midst of a revival sermon.

GERMAN RECIPROCITY.

ITS SHAM CHARACTER FULLY EXPOSED.

Sheep and the Tariff on Wool—Comparative Labor Cost of Producing Carpets in England and the United States—Another Cut on Tin Plate—Tariff Shot.

In Its True Light.

So far as the reciprocity policy of the present administration tends toward the improvement of our foreign commerce, it may be deserving of favor, and were it no for other reasons such favor would be freely accorded to it, even by those not in sympathy with the present fiscal policy. The first of these reasons is that "reciprocity" is evidently intended to obstruct the progress of true tariff reform principles, and another, a natural sequence, is that there exists a manifest disposition on the part of its supporters to exaggerate the benefits likely to accrue from the several treaties effected. This is the secret of the enthusiasm of the high protectionists over what is in reality some concession to low tariff principles, and is full justification of the critical attitude of tariff reformers.

The latest treaty with Germany is a good example of the truth of this. It has been held up as a wonderful combination of business acumen and diplomatic sagacity on our part, and a tremendous stride forward in opening up foreign markets to the farm products of this country. An imposing show has been made by placing side by side the old rates of duty in Germany on the products affected, and the new, and calling attention to the "substantial concessions" secured to this country. It must be admitted that on paper these look well, and had the concession been made to the United States alone might even have been invested with some importance. As it is, the following shows that they affect a small part only of our exports to Germany; and, further, that one important competitor with us for the German market in agricultural products has been accorded like concessions and is in a natural position to take much fuller advantage of them than we are.

During the fiscal year ending June 30, 1890, the last for which full details are available, our total exports to Germany amounted in value to $84,315,217, a very considerable trade; but of this total the articles upon which the duties have been revised furnished only $6,887,197. It may of course be argued that the latter total was small on account of the duties; but, as will be shown later on, these duties did not prevent heavy importations from other European countries of similar products. Nor when we consider how much the saving of duty on the above year's importations, at the revised rates, would have been to Germany does there appear to be much in the argument itself. The following table shows the amount of duty actually paid, what it would have been on the reduced scale, and the amount that would have been saved by German importers:

	Duty old tariff.	Under new tariff.	Diff'ce.
Wheat.....	$3,0[illegible]	$2,1[illegible]	$90[illegible]
Rye.....	1[illegible]1,1[illegible]4	1[illegible]6,772	54,332
Pulse.....	8	6	2
Oats.....	16,248	10,1[illegible]1	6,[illegible]
Maize.....	1,454,385	1,162,[illegible]	29[illegible],[illegible]
Hops.....	153	1[illegible]8	47
Butter.....	8[illegible],115	74,048	1[illegible],0[illegible]
Oxen.....	29,827	25,[illegible]	4,474
Horses.....	285	142	143
Flour, etc.....	27,475	19,52[illegible]	7,[illegible]
	$1,798,553	$1,421,876	$377,674

In addition to the above there is a reduction of duty on imports of lumber and timber which we cannot exactly calculate: but, making an extravagant allowance for it, the entire reduction in duties on our exports to Germany for the year 1889-90 would come under half a mill on dollars.

This result appears still more trivial when contrasted with the saving which the same concessions to Austro-Hungary will effect on imports from that country. The German imports from Austria are returned at $165,250,000 yearly, on which old duties amounted to $36,250,000. Under the new treaty these duties are reduced to $27,500,000, a saving of $8,750,000. Why Germany, bent upon effecting a commercial union with Austria, Italy, etc., should have been willing to extend consideration to the United States also, to secure its American trade in beet sugar, needs no explanation with the above figures before us.

The discrimination against Russia by the new treaties will without doubt have the effect of changing the sources of Germany's grain supplies to some extent, but the assumption that any material benefit will accrue to us therefrom is not well supported. The following shows Germany's imports of the four leading cereals in 1889, with chief sources of supply, in thousands of bushels:

	Total.	Austria.	Russia.	U. S.
Wheat.....	18,953	494	11,046	8[illegible]
Rye.....	41,632	651	32,4[illegible]0	19[illegible]
Oats.....	17,188	625	16,375	4
Maize.....	14,421	1,157	2,617	6,413

In only one instance, maize, does the United States really figure as a competitor with European sources of supply, and it must be apparent that Austria, and not this country, will derive the benefit of lower duties on grain. The reduction in her case will not be offset by extra freights, which must still operate to our disadvantage in competing even with Russia.

There is still a further consideration. Were we securing the German market for such imports as have in ordinary years been drawn from Russia, we do not dispose of that competition in more important markets, but, on the contrary, intensify it. If Russia is discriminated against, even to the point of exclusion, by Germany, it simply means that her surplus supplies will find their way in still greater volume to other countries, Great Britain, for instance, and what we might gain on the one hand would certainly be more than lost on the other.

Owing to the extraordinary state of things now prevailing throughout Europe, present or immediate experience is of no value in testing the soundness of the above analysis; but with a return to normal conditions it will be seen that the treaty of which so much has been made is a small matter indeed.—New York Commercial Bulletin.

Here and in England.

In his letters to the New York Times, Mr. Se'evenhof, ex-Consul of the United States at Tunstall, England, writes as follows of the comparative cost of producing carpets here and in England. Carpets are made at a lower cost here than even in England, at least in the lower grades, such as ingrain carpets, and as cheaply as there in the lower grades of brussels, etc. A comparison of the cost and manufacturing methods of two-ply ingrains shows the following:

	—Philadelphia— Labor	Expense	Total	—Leeds— Labor	Expense	Total
Selling cost..
Yarn.....			38.75			28.75
Weaving.....	5.25		7.92	4.50		8.26
Gen'l labor..	2.67			3.76
General cost.		2.4	4.40		5.0	7.50
Selling cost..		2.0			2.5
Total.....	7.92	4.4	51.07	8.26	7.05	41.51

In England much of this class of goods is still made on hand looms. The rates quoted above are from a power mill near Leeds. The hand-loom weaver gets 10 cents a yard (5 pence). He obtains the yarn and returns the finished carpet. The labor cost is calculated at the same rate in the two methods of work. What the hand weaver gets more (10 cents against 8.26 cents for the power loom work) is taken from the 5 cents charged in the above comparison under "General expense," which, of course, is considerably higher in power-loom weaving than in hand-loom weaving.

The comparison between English and American cost shows that the labor cost, from the yarn up, is somewhat higher in England. The higher English cost of "general labor" on the yard price is in this instance due to the fact that it is distributed in America over a much larger output. The same refers to the general expense item. The higher cost of yarn is due entirely to the higher cost of wool in consequence of the wool tariff. Without this tax we can easily export carpets, as can be seen from the foregoing comparison, and from the selling of carpets. This at the time barely covered the cost of production, and certainly would hardly do so now, under the McKinley blessings (so assiduously invoked by certain carpet manufacturers), culminating in the recent forced sales and present stagnation.

Another Cent on Tin Plate.

The Tin Plate Consumers' Association published on the 10th ult. a circular in which the following assertions were made:

"It is a matter of business, and not of politics, that up to the present moment not one sheet of coke tins, which constitute over half our entire requirements, has yet been put on the market by the American manufacturers, and that the present output of all kinds does not constitute 1 per cent. of the entire consumption of tin plate in America. Again, it is a matter of business that the small lots produced have only been obtainable at prices considerably above what the same quality can be imported at, even under the increased duty."

A meeting of the American manufacturers of which this circular speaks is to be held in St. Louis this month, and it is reported that one of the subjects to be discussed is a proposition that Congress shall be asked to increase the duty on tin plate from 2 1-5 cents to 3 1-5 cents a pound. Our high-tariff neighbor, the Tribune, published a dispatch from St. Louis containing the following:

"It has been rumored that one of the leading questions to be discussed is the advisability of having a bill introduced in the present Congress providing for the increase of 1 cent a pound in the duty on tinned plate, and one of the reasons given for the postponement of the meeting from December 9 to January was to await the result of the Speakership contest to decide what kind of proposition they would submit to Congress."

In our own dispatches of yesterday we published the admission of Thomas K. Niedringhaus, of St. Louis, that a movement to obtain an additional duty of one cent a pound had "been talked about," and also the following remarks made by Charles Knight, who buys tin plate for a prominent company engaged in manufacturing tinware:

"There is not enough tariff at present to keep the outside product from being laid down in New York cheaper than it can be made here at a fair profit. I say this as a buyer, and I know what we get, and we do not get American tin plate, not because we will not use it, but because it is not on the market. I think if the matter was thoroughly sifted you would find the sheet iron manufacturers at the bottom of it."

Neither the prices nor the grades of American tin plate are quoted in the leading journal of the iron and steel trade, the Iron Age, but in hardware certain grades of "American bright tin plate" are mentioned, without prices, and the prices of "American roofing tin" are published. The figures permit the following comparison to be made:

THREE PL[illegible]
American, IC, 14x20.....	$[illegible]55
M. F. grade (English), IC, 14x20.....	5.75
Dean grade (English), IC, 14x2[illegible].....	5.[illegible]
Abercarne grade (English), IC, 14x20.....	5.[illegible]0

If Mr. Cronemeyer, Mr. Niedringhaus, and their associates shall decide at the coming meeting that they cannot get along without an additional duty of 1 cent a pound (which would amount to about $7,000,000 a year upon importations equal to those of 1890), it will be necessary for our high-tariff contemporaries to revise an enormous quantity of argument and assertion to which they have invited the attention of the American people in the last year and a half, and neither Mr. Allison nor Mr. McKinley will care to be reminded of the promises they made for themselves and for the manufacturers during the tariff debates.—New York Times.

Tariff Shot.

Trusts keep up prices in the United States by exporting their surplus at low prices. This can be well shown by the operation of the "White Lead Trust." The June, 1891, number of the Hardware and Metallic Review, published in Toronto, Canada, says of the practices of this trust: "The United States White Lead Trust has a price for the Canadian market that is as firmly held down below the cost of profitable production as the home market price of the same 'trust' is firmly held above it. United States white lead is laid down here to-day in car-load lots in bond at $3.70 per hundred pounds. The Canadian Government justly requires that the duty of 5 per cent. be calculated not on the price quoted here, but upon prices quoted to the United States trade—that is, upon $6.50—which makes the total cost laid down here $4.02½ per 100 pounds."

The present price at which American white lead is sold at wholesale in Canada, with the duty and all charges paid, is $5.75 per 100 pounds, or

In the United States, however, the white lead trust charges consumers $7.50 per 100 pounds, or

Why should the people of this country, by favoring a high tariff on white lead, give the white lead trust power to rob them at the same time that it grants favors to foreigners?

Sheep and the Tariff on Wool.

The number of sheep in the United States in 1869, as shown by the census of 1870, was 40,853,000. The census of 1890 shows that in 1889 there were only 44,336,000 sheep in the United States. According to the doctrines of high protectionism, therefore, the tariff on wool has increased the number of sheep in the United States 8½ per cent. in twenty years, against an increase in our population during the same period of 50 per cent.

The effect of the tariff on the number of sheep kept in the leading States is shown in the following table;

	In thousands. 1869.	1889.

In the leading States the number of sheep kept by the farmers has fallen off over 45 per cent.

Does this show that a high tariff on wool has been advantageous to the farmers?

MRS. JAMES BROWN and her 16-year-old daughter Myrtie were terribly burned at their residence in Goshen. The mother and daughter were in the act of pouring some kerosene into some water in the wash-boiler, which was on the stove. The material caught fire, and the oil-can exploded. The fire communicated to their clothing, and Mrs. Brown was terribly burned about the hands, face and breast. Miss Myrtie was seriously, if not fatally, injured. The hair was burned from her head, her face and neck badly scorched, both hands completely roasted, and her legs below the knees burned. Her clothing was burned from the body. At last reports the chances for the girl's recovery is doubtful.

ROYAL RANGER RALPH;

—:OR:—

The Waif of the Western Prairies.

BY WELDON J. COBB.

CHAPTER XVI.

IN THE CAVE.

Ranger Ralph, the old scout, was not idle while all the events described since his mishap at the river were transpiring.

When the horses ran away and dashed the wagon over the cliff near Lone Canyon Tavern, the ranger at first gave himself up for lost.

The descent was a terrible one, and he clung to the sides of the wagon as it turned and fell, and finally struck the water with a crash.

Then, dazed and bruised, he was half conscious that the horses had become separated from the vehicle, and that the latter, badly shattered, was floating down the stream.

It had now become so dark, especially in the shelter of the cliffs that lined the river perpendicularly, that he could not estimate his situation except that he was being borne rapidly away from the scene of the accident by the stream's swift current.

"I'm rid of the outlaws, any way," he muttered grimly, "and probably near their stronghold. I wonder if young Grey has managed to find the girl, or if she is still a captive and on her way to this desolate place?"

His predicament was not a pleasant one, for the wagon box was immersed in water and he was wet through from the dip in the stream.

Finally it began to sink so low that he was compelled to climb out on the seat, and thence later to the top of the wagon cover itself.

From here he regarded the fast-flying landscape silently and clung to his frail raft as it was driven hither and thither by the rock-choked current.

There was a final crash, and Ranger Ralph was flung head foremost into the river.

The wagon was splintered to pieces as it came in contact with a huge rock in midstream, and floated away leaving the scout floundering in the water.

He managed to reach the shore, and stood with dripping garments ruefully surveying his situation.

Darkness and solitude surrounded him, and there seemed no means of leaving leaving the narrow, confined canyon except by the waterway up and down stream.

Suddenly a light appeared in the distance, and the scout stood peering at it for some time, vainly endeavoring to make out its location and cause.

"It must be a lantern or camp-fire of the outlaws," he decided, and he determined to endeavor to make his way toward it.

In the darkness and amidst unfamiliar scenes this was no easy task, and his progress was slow and laborious.

Clinging to trailing vines and shrubs, scaling rocks, fording and swimming, he managed finally to gain a pile of rocks directly beyond which was the light he had seen.

It proved to be as he had surmised, a camp-fire, built somewhat back in a cave-like aperture of the rocks.

It was accessible by a narrow, dangerous path from the cliff above, and was evidently one of the entrances to the mountain fastness of the bandits.

A dozen rough forms were visible in the glow of the firelight, and among them Ranger Ralph readily recognized several whom he had known to be members of Despard's outlaw band.

From his place of espionage the old scout could watch his enemies and determine at leisure the best course to pursue.

There was no fear of interruption, for while he might gain the entrance to the cave it was not likely that they would come his way. He was so near to the entrance of the cave that he would almost hear the laughter and conversation. There was only this ledge of rock between him and the open space in front of the cave.

The scout crouched low as two men came toward where he was. At first he determined to retreat, as he feared they were coming over the ledge; but as they paused at the edge of the stream near by he discerned that one of them bore a bucket in his hand, and that they had come to obtain some water for the camp.

"What's the programme, anyway?" he heard one of the men ask; and the other replied:

"A general breaking up of the band, I hear the boys say."

"And a division of the profits?"

"Yes. It's whispered about that Despard is tired of the life, and that it has become too dangerous to suit him. He's afraid of trouble with Shadow Snake, and he's got some scheme for a fortune about the girl he has brought here."

"What trouble could he have with Shadow Snake?"

"He's afraid the old Modoc chieftain will learn about his treachery in regard to the princess."

"White Fawn?"

"Yes; and Danton and he have played the Indians false."

"About what?"

"The emigrant train. They stole most of the plunder, and the Snake will resent this and our desertion. I wouldn't wonder if the Modoc chief sent a messenger to demand restitution. Anyway, he's made enemies of the savages by his actions."

The men returned to the cave just then, but their conversation formed a theme of thought in the scout's mind for some time after their departure.

"The girl is here," muttered the ranger, "and Despard has some plan for leaving the country. I must learn what his schemes are, and at once. But how?"

Ranger Ralph reflected deeply for over an hour. Then, as a bold idea flashed upon his mind, he determined on its immediate execution.

He theorized readily that Despard meditated leaving the country, and that he would probably take Inez Tracey with him. The girl was now doubtless a prisoner in the outlaw's stronghold. The fortune her father had left her was the object of Despard's plot.

To rescue the girl and foil the renegade in securing that fortune, the scout felt that he must act quickly.

Ranger Ralph was noted along the frontier for his shrewdness, not only as a scout but as a detective.

It was in the latter capacity that he had now decided to act, and although his design was a bold one, he believed that he would be able to successfully carry it into execution.

Rapidly he formulated his plan. It consisted, first, in the assumption of a perfect disguise, and the hardy old ranger, fully prepared for just such contingencies as the present one, was soon at work on a thorough transformation of his personal appearance.

With a keen-edged razor he shaved off his luxuriant beard. Then he proceeded to paint his face and arrange his attire in accordance with his designs.

When he had completed his toilet it is doubtful if his nearest friend would have recognized him.

He resembled a half-breed, and his stained skin, one eye shaded by a bandage, limping gait and general uncivilized appearance gave him just the look he desired, to enable him to penetrate to the enemy's camp with his identity unsuspected.

When he had fully completed his mental plan of action, the scout cautiously clambered over the ledge of rocks and made his way toward the camp fire.

Several forms sprang to their feet and impeded his further progress as he reached the entrance to the cave. A man whom he recognized as Vance raised a gun menacingly.

"What do you want? Who are you? How came you here?" he demanded quickly.

In accordance with his assumed character, the scout folded his arms over his breast and adopted a sullen, defiant expression of face.

"The Black Crow," he muttered. "I must see him."

"Who are you?"

"Tallula, the half-breed."

"How did you come here?"

"The Modoc knows the hiding-place of the white men and the paths that lead to it," was the scout's steady reply, admirably couched in the Indian vernacular.

Vance stared.

"Ha!" he ejaculated, "you come from the Modocs?"

"I come from the emigrant train. I bear a message. Where is the Crow?"

"Why do you wish to see him?"

"He will know when he remembers his broken pledge to Shadow Snake."

It was evident from Vance's manner that he realized the fact of Despard's double-dealing with the Modoc chieftain.

He glanced uneasily beyond the supposed messenger from the Modocs.

"Did Tallula come alone?" he asked.

"Yes."

"Sit down by the camp-fire there; I will speak with the Crow."

Ranger Ralph smiled complacently to himself at the success of his imposition so far, but assumed a studied attitude of sullen silence until Vance had returned.

"Come," said the latter; "the Crow wishes to talk with you."

"Ugh!"

The scout was led into the cave through several long passages, and finally into an apartment that was apparently a portion of a wooden hut that was built over the river and into the cliff.

Despard and Danton sat at a table drinking, and the former glanced at the somber figure of Vance's companion.

"Here is the half-breed from the Modocs," explained Vance.

"From Shadow Snake?" asked Despard.

"Ugh!" replied the scout in a disguised tone of voice.

"What does he want?"

"His share of the plunder taken from the emigrant train. The Crow has played him false, and he seeks restitution or revenge."

Despard evinced a cool unconcern of the scout's somber threats. He listened calmly while the disguised ranger in guttural tones told of the dissatisfaction and anger of the Modoc chieftain. Then he said:

"Shadow Snake demands gold?"

"Ugh!"

"And if it is not sent to him?"

"War," was the laconic reply.

"When must he have his answer?"

"In two suns."

"Good. Before another day is past, Tallula shall know my decision. You can stay here until then."

Ranger Ralph retired with calm dignity, and congratulated himself upon the fact that he had not been recognized by the outlaw.

"Watch that half-breed closely," said Despard to Vance; and the latter followed the scout from the room.

"We have no time to lose," said Danton, when they were alone.

"That is true."

"The Modocs will march against us unless we return a share of the booty."

"Then we will act at once. I have located the haunt of the old hermit."

"Walford?"

"Yes; and in the morning I shall go there. Once I secure the secret of Inez Tracey's fortune, I shall leave a small amount of plunder for them to divide, and you and Vance, the girl, and myself will leave this part of the country forever."

Meanwhile Ranger Ralph had been led toward the river end of the cave by Vance.

He paused ere they reached the camp-fire.

"Tallula is weary," he said.

"All right; you can sleep anywhere here."

The pretended half-breed flung himself upon a broad rock. Vance contented himself with proceeding to the spot where his companions were, and after telling them to see that Tallula did not leave the cave, paid no further attention to the scout.

The latter had fully decided to explore the bandits' haunt, in the hope of finding Inez.

After a while he left the rocks, and, unperceived by the men around the camp-fire, began examining the various passages and apartments of the great underground cavern they occupied.

There was one dim corridor down which he could see a light burning, and he stealthily made his way toward it.

He drew back in the shadow of a projecting shelf of stone as he saw, directly ahead of him, in an embrasure in the corridor, a man seated on the floor of the cave.

His back was to the scout, and he seemed to be lazily nodding as if in sleep.

"A guard," muttered the scout, thrilling to quick interest at his discovery. "There must be some one in the cave beyond, perhaps the girl herself."

Ranger Ralph peered cautiously beyond the spot where the corridor enlarged. He started as he discovered that a large apartment terminated the passageway. Upon a rude log table was a second lantern, and its rays showed a couch covered with a panther-skin.

Upon this the scout made out a familiar form. It was that of the very maiden who was the theme of all his anxious thoughts.

He stood spell-bound, yet excited, gazing silently at the girl, whose head was bent in her hands, as if in grief and despair. Rapidly he began to form a plan for evading the guard in the corridor and reaching Inez.

As he stood there a sudden episode baffled all his plans. He saw Inez Tracey start to her feet and stare in wild emotion at the opposite side of the cave. This portion of the cavern was at that moment completely shut out from Ranger Ralph's range of vision.

Vaguely he heard a voice speak her name. He saw the girl's face express the deepest joy and relief. At that moment the attention of the guard seemed directed to the apartment. He arose, siezed a revolver from his feet, and began to creep towards the cave.

Intensely interested and yet perplexed Ranger Ralph stood watching the scene of what promised to be a most exciting and momentous episode.

CHAPTER XVII.

Whoever it was that had apparently entered the cave apartment where Inez Tracey was, that person did not evidently see or know of the near proximity of the bandit guard.

Even the imprisoned maiden seemed unaware of his presence, for her beautiful face, fully revealed to the gaze of the scout in the light of the lantern, glowed only with emotions of gladness.

The guard, adopting a stealthy, crouching movement, began to step gradually toward the apartment.

Ranger Ralph's attention was divided between him and Inez. He saw that the outlaw was too thoroughly engrossed in watching the inmates of the apartment to pay any attention to him. Cautiously, therefore, the scout began to steal after him.

A few steps enabled him to gain a complete view of the interior of the cave. He came to a dead stop with sheer surprise as he saw the cause of the girl's emotion.

"Darrel Grey!" he muttered under his breath.

It was indeed the young scout.

As the reader will remember, after he left White Fawn he had penetrated to the cave of the outlaws from the inclosed valley into which he had fallen.

When Despard had removed Inez to the cave, Darrel had reached a spot where a huge rock blocked up the entrance to the apartment. For over an hour he sought to push this barrier away and at last he had succeeded.

It was his entrance that had so startled the captive maiden.

"Inez!" he cried, and sprang toward her with outstretched arms.

In the first impulse and rapture of love and joy Inez had glided to greet him. A modest flush surmounted her brow, and she paused, trembling and confused, as he seized her hand fervently.

"Oh, Darrel—Mr. Grey! You have come to rescue me."

"Yes. But we must not delay."

"There is a way of escape?"

"By the way I came, yes. Ha! What is that?"

Darrel drew the startled Inez closer to his side and recoiled quickly as he discovered the guard.

The latter had moved into full view.

"Retreat toward the opening to the valley," directed Darrel to his fair companion.

"Hold!"

The guard leveled his revolver as he spoke. Evidently he recognized Darrel as an intruder and an enemy.

The latter was entirely unarmed, the savages having taken his firearms from him when they tied him to the stake at the Pueblo River encampment.

Inez had nearly reached the aperture in the wall, when the guard raised his revolver.

Ranger Ralph had taken in the scene at a glance, and resolved to act quickly, as he discerned the peril of his young friend Darrel Grey.

With a rapid spring he was fairly upon the guard. Too late, however, to prevent the shot the latter had directed at Darrel.

The bullet sped wide of its mark. The report of the pistol, however, awoke all the silent echoes of the cave.

With one blow the old scout felled the guard insensible to the floor of the cave. Then, springing over his prostrate form, he seized the revolver that had fallen from his grasp.

Darrel Grey recognized him with a joyful cry.

"Ranger Ralph!" he ejaculated.

Inez glanced with quick interest at the man she knew to be her father's old-time friend and her own.

The scout glanced back at the corridor with an alarmed face, as he heard a new commotion. Two men had come suddenly into view. Ranger Ralph divined in a flash that they had been companions of the guard.

Doubtless they had been sleeping in the embrasure in the corridor, and he had not noticed them. The shot had aroused them, and as they entered the apartment they comprehended the situation at a glance.

"Fly!" ordered the scout to Darrel and Inez.

"But the outlaws will be aroused——"

"I will hold these two at bay, and cover your escape."

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Earnings of Railroads.

The advance sheets of the introduction to Poor's Manual for 1891 show that the number of miles of railroad completed in the United States at the end of the last calendar year was 166,817, and that the number of miles constructed during the year was 5,739. Since then enough track has been laid to make the total mileage to this date 170,000 miles. The increase in share capital during the year was $145,140,260, which was equal to a little more than $25,300 for each mile of road constructed during the year. The increase in the funded debt of the roads during the year was $277,536,254, which was equal to not much less than $50,000 per mile of road constructed. It will, however, be understood, of course, that the increase in funded debt did not necessarily, or probably, all fall on the new roads constructed. The total amount of share capital at the end of the year was $4,640,239,578 and the total amount of funded debt was $5,105,902,025. This gives a total of share capital and funded debt of $9,746,141,603. This total is equal to more than $58,400 for each mile of road in existence at the end of the year. Mr. Poor states that, counting in all forms of indebtedness, the cost of the roads as measured by the total was $59,638, or close to $60,000 per mile on the average, the total indebtedness having been $10,122,635,900. One would expect the average indebtedness per mile to decrease, but according to Mr. Poor it increased last year $1,364. Regarding net earnings, Mr. Poor reports that in 1890 the average was 3.4 per cent., against 3.3 per cent. in 1889, 3.2 in 1888, 3.9 in 1887, 3.7 in 1886, and 3.4 in 1885. These are the averages, of course, on the nominal capital. If we suppose the actual capital invested to be one-half the nominal amount, which is in accordance with Mr. Poor's estimate in former years, we find that capital invested in railroads pays on the average fairly satisfactory profits. The earnings pay interest on the funded debts, which in the aggregate exceed the actual capital invested, according to Mr. Poor's estimate, and give an average of about 3½ per cent. for dividends besides. While it is true that many roads do not earn dividends, or even fixed charges, yet on the whole the railroads of the country are paying concerns. Those which are not have been prematurely built, or built where railroads are not needed, or wrecked by intentionally or ignorantly bad management. It will be observed that there was a slight improvement last year over the year before in net earnings, which, however, were still below those of 1886 and 1887.

Jeweler (politely)—I'm sorry to disappoint you, sir, but we conduct an exclusively cash business.—Jeweler's Weekly.

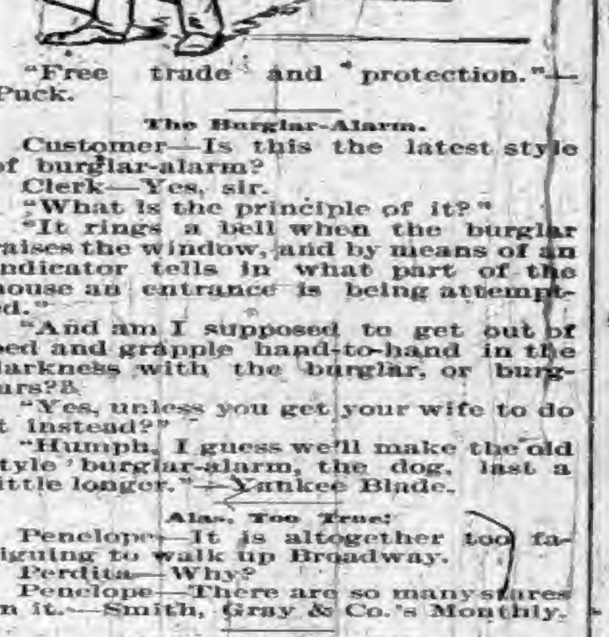
She Succeeded.

Asker—I've often wondered how Mrs. Etna would make out in her married life. She's been married about three years now, hasn't she?

Tasker—About that, yes.

"Well, I've heard her say, in days gone by, that if she ever had a husband she'd make him stand around."

"She's succeeded. She's made him stand around the tavern barroom in preference to enduring the daily anathemas she breeds for the home atmosphere."—Yonkers Gazette.



"Free trade and protection."—Puck.

The Burglar-Alarm.

Customer—Is this the latest style of burglar-alarm?

Clerk—Yes, sir.

"What is the principle of it?"

"It rings a bell when the burglar raises the window, and by means of an indicator tells in what part of the house an entrance is being attempted."

"And am I supposed to get out of bed and grapple hand-to-hand in the darkness with the burglar, or burglars?"

"Yes, unless you get your wife to do it instead?"

"Humph, I guess we'll make the old style 'burglar-alarm, the dog, last a little longer."—Yankee Blade.

Alas, Too True!

Penelope—It is altogether too fatiguing to walk up Broadway.

Perdita—Why?

Penelope—There are so many stores on it.—Smith, Gray & Co.'s Monthly.

Murder in His Heart.

Hackett (savagely)—I want to get some ribbon for my wife's dog.

Clerk—Yes, sir. How will this do?

Hackett—Do you think this will bear his weight?—Cloak Review.

A Simile.

Mr. Eatall—My dear madam, there is, as usual, a—er lack of sufficiency on your table.

The Landlady (with asperity)—I do say, Mr. Eatall, that of all things I ever boarded you are the worst, with one exception.

"And may I know of this one exception?"

"Yes. I once boarded a moving train, and I've never been well since."—Pittsburgh Bulletin.

Black Pearls.

Black pearls are exceedingly rare, hence desirable. The reader may not know that black pearls are not really black, but vary in hue; some have a shimmering blue light on their surface, while others appear to be green or gray. This harmonious blending of subtle tints gives great value to the gems.

OUR grand business in life is not to see what lies dimly at a distance, but to do what lies clearly at hand.

The Saturday Edition
—OF—
The Chicago Herald

THE PRINCE OF AMERICAN NEWSPAPERS WORLD'S
FAIR

Is a handsome sixteen-page weekly newspaper, filled with the most entertaining reading that brilliant minds, well trained in every department of literature, can produce. It has the advantage of the fast-mail service and is delivered at the majority of postoffices on day of publication.

THE CHICAGO HERALD is the foremost journalistic champion of Western interests, and, believing that these are assailed by the protective tariff, it is an uncompromising opponent of a system that takes from the many to enrich the few. THE HERALD is broadly and progressively democratic in politics, but it is bound to no party, save as that party stands for principle and justice. Believing that the safety of the republic now demands a return to constitutional methods, to economy in administration, to the obliteration of war passions and to the summary defeat of the powerful interests that have allied themselves with the leaders of the republican party for the purpose of promoting selfish interests at the expense of the whole people, THE HERALD favors return of the democracy to power and will labor intelligently to that end.

A special feature of THE SATURDAY EDITION OF THE HERALD, and one to which much space is devoted, is the weekly record of the progress of the World's Fair, with fine illustrations. This alone makes it indispensable to those who intend to visit the fair, and to those who do not a comprehensive description will be the next best thing.

In addition to this THE SATURDAY EDITION OF THE HERALD contains a synopsis of the news of the week, full Market Reports, a Household Department, Completed Stories by popular authors, Book Reviews, "Gossip of the Stage," Base Ball, Turf and Athletic Sports, and last, but by no means least, the news of the world attractively presented and truthfully told. No better investment than a year's subscription can be made.

THE AUBURN COURIER
OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY.
JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.
Registered at the Auburn, Indiana, postoffice as second-class matter.
THURSDAY.......JANUARY 7, 1892.

CHILE is backing down.

JOHN SHERMAN will probably be senator.

BOTH branches of New York legislature democratic.

BALL bearings will soon be put to use on railway cars, greatly lessening the friction.

THE next national meeting of the Woman's Suffrage Association is in Washington, D. C. Jan. 17, to 20.

MACHINE gun just invented shoots 900 balls in a minute. The barrel is kept in a box of water so it will not get too hot.

THE boasted tin plate business in this country seems to be a failuse since election. We are shipping from England, about twice as much as last year.

CARNEGIE, who believes in a protective tariff because it made him a millioniare, reduced the wages of his men Jan. 1. As Harrison said in his message, "we must secure good wages to laboring men" by means of a high tariff.

THE Michigan City prison not only sustains itself, but pays into the state treasury the past year, a surplus of $16,000. Now they will ask the state to take this surplus and build a larger chapel and dining room. It ought to be done.

THE Lagrange Democrat agrees with us, that this two term business is a poor thing for this or any other congressional district. This district could have had the Speaker by this time, if we had started in right, and kept a good member right along.

THE Lake Shore road never had so prosperous a year as 1891. Its gross earnings were over twenty-one millions, and over and above expenses nearly seven millions. The Michigan Central earned fifteen millions and cleared over four millions.

REPORTS prove that California made eight million pounds of beet sugar this year, and will receive $160,000 bounty for it. Indiana farmers help pay this money. Do California farmers pay Indiana any bounty for wheat or anything else? If not, then where is the justice?

COAL is "protected" by a tariff rate, higher on an average, than the entire labor cost of mining, yet there are strikes all over the country because the men cannot live on their wages. As Harrison's message says "we must secure wages to the laborer, by means of a tariff." Harrison has a great head.

TWENTY tons of pig tin from Mexico reached Pittsburg recently. This metal comes in free at present, the McKinley bill provides for its future taxation. But we suppose our republican exchanges will insist that Mexico would never have produced this tin, but for McKinley. It is no sillier than many of their other claims.

CANDIDATES for governor on the democratic ticket, are springing up in several places. All named so far, are good men, but in every qualification for the place, we believe no one can deny, that Judge Allen Zollars of Ft. Wayne, is the best. The others have some excellent qualities, but he has all. We are for Zollars for reasons we gave three months ago.

SENATOR TURPIE made one of his most eloquent speeches the other day in the senate. It was in support of his bill providing for the election of senators by popular vote of the people. Two other states have instructed their members to work for the same change, Oregon and Wisconsin. Other states will fall into line, and it will not be many years before this great reform will be accomplished.

THE Dispatch last week has a long article defending Judge Woods, the corrupt, whom Harrison has promoted. As this article does not bear the usual trade mark "Indianapolis Journal," we are at a loss to know who wrote it. If it is the editor of the Dispatch, he presumes greatly on the gullibility of his readers, when he says, "The cry against Judge Woods is a pretense, a sham hypocrisy, sustained by personal malice and ill-will growing out of the fact that he presided at the trial of Sim Coy, that landed that distinguished democrat in the penitentiary." Then he proceeds to mix the Coy and Dudley matter up, and tells how Dudley might have been tried for three years, and so on with a lot of such truck. Of course Dudley might have been tried, but Judge Woods prevented his being indicted. That is where democrats object to him. Democrats care nothing for Coy, for he no doubt deserved punishment, and he is now a howling republican. But they object to Woods' decision in the Dudley matter and similar cases. Woods at first gave the jury instructions that would have secured Dudley's indictment and then when he saw that they were going to indict Dudley on these instructions be turned right about and told them they could not indict him—swallowing his own words. And why? Merely to save from merited punishment a man who had committed a flagrant crime against the laws. Dudley's crime gave Indiana to Harrison and made him president. Woods saved Dudley from punishment for this, and now the grateful president pays his unjust judge by giving him to a higher place on the bench, and the Dispatch says "well done" to the whole corrupt business. To read the Dispatch one would think it would not touch sin or corruption with a ten-foot pole, but let that sin or corruption be the work of a republican boss and it will hug the wrong to its bosom in an ecstasy.

OUR NEW YEAR.

What a Good Time Auburn and her Guests Had Last Friday Evening.

Nothing like it. That is the verdict of all who had a chance to see, hear or know. The Auburn New Years Club had spent about a week in decorating the great room of the Opera House and though many said this could not be done, they succeeded in grand style. Those who called on them Friday evening beheld a scene of beauty, the equal of which the great state of Indiana has not seen. On all sides hung festoons and drapery of evergreens, holly and smilax, and these all further beautified by additions of ribbons, boquets and hundreds of gilded fir cones. And all mingled with these were 150 electric lights, incandescents in bulbs of several colors. It was dazzling and enchanting beyond the power of description. There were several large arc lights besides. The evergreens with their lights and ornaments were so arranged as to lay off the extensive floor into a number of reception rooms, there being arched passages from one to the other and at intervals one noticed folding screens standing in other archways, which could thus be used if needed. Chairs and sofas were placed about these rooms and great evergreen trees flanked them at the angles, giving all the appearance of a park or picnic ground in a city. Back toward the stage entrance was arranged the table for lunch, which was a fine one, including all the usual delicacies of such an occasion, as well as tropical fruits, nuts, etc., and a generous supply of oysters on the half shell. Near by and next the stage was arranged a fountain lighted by colored incandescents and surrounded by a wilderness of lovely flowers. On the stage, the space in front was cleared for the use of the orchestra and above them hung extended across the stage in large letters made of gilded cones "We wish you a Happy New Year" and beneath this "1892." It added much to the effect to the other decorations. Rugs were on the floors, beautiful pictures adorned the walls; there were mirrors, stands and all the accessories of a home drawing room.

The music, which was by the famous Adrian Orchestra, helped to while away the short time of waiting, and indeed the sweet strains floated out from on the stage at intervals during the entire afternoon. The lunch provided was served by the colored caterers who are on the regular dining room cars that go through here on the Wabash through trains, and are masters of their trade. As the ladies called, in groups, as they had arranged themselves, they were taken in charge by the gentlemen ushers of the reception committee and introduced to the members of the Club, and after a short season of social enjoyment, other members conducted them through the arch of the evergreen division and into the lunch room. Here the scene was no less brilliant. A lovely center piece of fruits and flowers glittered with electric lights, and here the ladies regaled themselves as they chose. And so they came and went all the afternoon, and until 7:30 when the reception was closed, to give Mr. Aber and his assistants time to make the changes necessary to prepare for the ball which was to follow. By an ingenious arrangement they were enabled to pull up the entire walls of decorations, incandescents and all, to a point above the heads of the tallest people, and there they remained, the same dazzling display of light and color as before. They were the wonder and admiration of all. It is but justice to say that the management and plan of decoration were under the direction of J. F. Aber, who proved himself, as he always does, a man of infinite resources, taste and originality. It was a wonderful success and a great tribute to his ability. A full share of praise is due the Electric Light Company, and more especially to John Johnson, their leading electrician, who supervised and arranged the glittering show of lights in all their intricate details. He was ably assisted in this by Alta Moody, who has been with him for some time. We believe the center piece of fruits, etc., was laid by him.

The ball in the evening was the best, all things considered, that has been held here. The attendance was very large. The music by the same orchestra was excellent, there was the best of order and good feeling of course. There were parties present from Detroit, Chicago, Garrett, Butler, Angola, Waterloo, Goshen, Fort Wayne, and other towns. A noticeable feature, was the many lovely costumes worn by the ladies, a feature that has never been equaled here before. All who were present were decided in their praises of the Auburn New Years Club's first leap year reception and ball.

This article would not be complete or do justice to the occasion did we not give also some account of the receptions given by several gentlemen at their homes.

At Frank Zimmerman's the ladies found him assisted by Mr. Slaughter and Mr. Moorehouse, of Fort Wayne; Mr. John Zimmerman, Mr. John Robbins, Mr. Hastings, Quinn Altenberg, Mr. Hamilton, John Altenberg and little Georgia Zimmerman, dressed in white, who vied with each other in making the ladies welcome. The rooms were very tastefully arranged and decorated with plants, smilax and Oscar Wilde devices. The lunch table was presided over very gracefully by John Zimmerman. From the chandelier above descended bands of yellow ribbons attached to the four corners of the table. The center piece was composed of fruits and flowers. The lunch was dainty, delicious and enjoyable. John Robbins presided over the lemonade bowl with grace and dignity. As the guests passed out each one was presented by Miss Georgia Weamer with an Oscar Wilde daisy as a favor. The hosts had erected a covering over the walk from the house to the gate. The music was most excellent and furnished by the Italian Band of Fort Wayne.

At the home of G. H. Yesbera, the first sight that met the caller's eyes was a lovely arbor formed by enclosing the front porch with [illegible]. This arbor was provided with seats, which might be used by the ladies while waiting for their carriages. They were welcomed at the door by Mr. G. H. Yesbera, then were escorted to the table by Dr. Bachtel, B. C. Robbins, Geo. [illegible] and Morris Eckhart; from the table they were taken to the parlor where they were cordially greeted and entertained by J. B. Baxter, D. E. Caruth and F. J. Yesbera. Elsie and Gertie Caruth dressed in white, looked very nice, and did their part of receiving with credit.

The lunch table was most beautifully decorated with ropes of evergreen and smilax which dropped in graceful festoons above and around it. The lunch itself was most excellent and tastefully served. The center piece was composed of flowers and wreaths of smilax. These gentlemen were disappointed in securing their music, but the sweet strains from a music box made an excellent substitute and added to the pleasure of the callers.

On arriving at the home of Mr. Culbertson on north Main street the callers found that gentleman very much "at home," as also were his assistants, H. E. Trout, Wm. Sheffer, Rev. A. S. Wooton, W. B. Brown, M. Boland, H. D. Weaver, C. Gaylor and H. B. McCord. The decorations, of holly, smilax and carnations were arranged in exquisite taste. The "Happy New Year" over the middle door facing the entrance was very beautiful. The lunch was fine, and it is sufficient praise to say that it tempted the appetite of ladies who had already lunched at three other places. It was served entirely by colored waiters. Delicious strains of music came from behind a mysterious curtain.

It was ascertained by actual count that 114 ladies were received at the Opera House, and nearly all of them called at the three private residences where receptions were held. All we have seen are enthusiastic over the gallant treatment of the gentlemen on whom they called, and would be willing that at least half the years coming were leap years.

More About the Committees.

As noted in the list we gave last week, Speaker Crisp has done well for Indiana. In fact he gave the entire north, much more than was expected, and much more than we were entitled to under the rules usually followed, for these, as we showed a few weeks ago, would have given most of the chairmanships to the southern members. Indeed we are glad the new speaker has broken partly away from the old rules, for we believe the people will be better served if each new congress fits itself to the work before it, without regard to how matters stood during the last session. It will be seen that Indiana has been given three chairmanships, all of them good places. Judge Holman is on the most important, being chairman of the committee on Appropriations, from which it will be seen there will not be a billion dollars of the people's money voted away by this congress. This was given him on account of his known tendency to keep down extravagance in expenses, for he was not on that committee in the previous House.

A. N. Martin of the district south of us gets a chairmanship, that on Invalid Pensions. He served on that committee in the last congress, and being an old soldier, very properly was now put at its head. It is the business of this committee to consider all matters pertaining to pensions for service during the rebellion, but not for other wars.

Judge McClellan of our district, gets the third chairmanship, that of expenditures of the Navy Department. This is also an important committee and one that will require a good deal of work, care and business ability. They will have to examine into all the accounts and expenditures of the navy department, the manner of keeping the same, the justness of such expense, their conformity to the appropriations passed, see that money appropriated is properly applied, guard against loss, or extravagant demands, enforce the payment of money due the United States, look into the economy and accountability of public officers, abolish useless offices, see to reductions or increase in pay of those in the department, etc., etc. Mr. McClellan had served on this committee before, and was very properly made its presiding member now. He is also, as will be seen on another committee, which is always important, and which in view of future possibilities, may become the most vital committee in the House—the committee on elections. To this committee is assigned the consideration of contested elections which as has often been seen, frequently brings up for discussion and settlement, vital principles of law and justice, as well as the more exciting contests for party advantage. But more than all, in case of failure to elect a president by the people, when the election is thrown into the House of representatives, this committee becomes a powerful factor in the struggle. Of course it cannot control the matter, but it is in a situation to be very influential. And just such a case may occur next year. It is among the easy possibilities that with three or more candidates in the field no one will get a majority. Then it must be settled by the House.

So we think Indiana has fared pretty well, and that our district has reason to be suited, when we find our member as he enters on his second term stepping into a chairmanship and other important places.

* * *

THE Dispatch has a good deal to say about Soper, the thieving Secretary of State in Michigan. But a republican thief fares quite well, I thank ye, at the hands of the Dispatch. Soper has been punished too. Perhaps that is what bothers the Dispatch. A republican defaulter, would likely be made a cabinet officer, a senator, or a foreign minister.

We publish the death notice of ex-commissioner John Shoub, as found in the Butler Record, as he was widely known over the county. He was one of the most prominent men of the east part of the county, a man of strict integrity, and the courage of his convictions. It was with sorrow we learned of his death. He had been in poor health, however, for some time.

Our friend Sherman Dickinson called up to see us last week. He was accompanied by his brother, of Lincoln county, Nebraska. Though both are unfortunate in being deaf mutes, yet they seem to get along as well as their more fortunate neighbors and much better than some we know of who have all their faculties. And they seem to enjoy life equal to the best. That is as it should be.

Judge McClellan returned to Washington Monday, to be ready for work at the opening of the session. Being now, chairman of a committee, he will necessarily be more tied down to business, and close attendance than before, although he has never lost any time to speak of. In the New Years rush last week, we forgot to say that M. E. Olds, of the St. Joe News, and his estimable wife, had been making calls in the city. Mort, himself, called on the COURIER. And now, while we are on this subject, we want to remark that the St. Joe News is a most creditable paper and the editor deserves great credit for his literary and typhographical ability. The Concord people, are lucky to have so able an organ and we are pleased to see they stand by it.

Mr. Healy gave his audience a very eloquent and valuable sermon last Sunday, treating as he did on the conditions called to mind by the New Year. "Ye Shall Return That Way No More" was the substance of the the text, which he turned very felicitously, to emphasize among other things, the fact that the hours and opportunities of last year could never be with us again. In the evening he continued his sermons on the commandments, this one being "Thou Shalt Not Steal." This series of ten sermons has been full of valuable lessons.

A Remedy for the Grip Cough.

A remedy recommended for patients afflicted with the grippe is Kemp's Balsam, which is especially adapted to diseases of the throat and lungs. Do not wait for the first symptoms of the disease, but get a bottle and keep it on hand for use the moment it is needed. If neglected the grippy has the tendency to bring on pneumonia. All druggists sell the Balsam.

Lucky Guessers.

As notified in the COURIER last week, the counting of the seeds at Yesbera's jewelry store took place Saturday evening. The following are the results:

Actual number of seeds	3,185
J. C. Henry's guess	3,187
W. B. Campbell's guess	3,189
Mrs. J. A. Barns' guess	2,180

So it will be seen they get prizes in the order named. Mr. Henry gets first which calls for $25 worth of goods; Mr. Campbell gets second, or $10 worth of goods; Mrs. Barns gets third, or $5 in goods. Mr. Campbell was especially fortunate, for he had made only two purchases and had given but one guess, and that one took the second. Mr. Yesbera says the goods are ready when they wish to buy.

At E. M. Bishop's drawing for the prize on purchasers of tobacco at his tobacco store, the pail of tobacco went to Isaac Likens, who resides east of town.

The box of plug tobacco went to L. Lahhead, south of town. A young man named Ed. Marack, who works in town got the box of cigars.

A NEW YORK scientist thinks he has discovered the language of monkeys. When he has it fully at his command he might utilize it in writing a society novel.

THERE are a good many cranks in Congress this year, but if their presence there will frighten Wall street men away from the capital they may count upon re-election.

IT is said that the man who cannot dance might as well resign claims to importance in New York City this season. All fashion has been on tiptoe studying the German cotillon.

HERE's the crucical test. John L. Sullivan is going to Dwight and learn as to the efficacy of the gold treatment. If Dr. Keeley can reform the professor the institution will have to be enlarged.

"WAR has slain its thousands," exclaims the Buffalo Express, "but the deadly grade-crossing has slain its tens of thousands." Fiction never looks so insignificant, so helpless, so commonplace as when it bumps against a fact like this.

CONSIDERING the flood of reminiscences concerning the acquisitiveness and parsimony of Russell Sage with which the press is now deluged, it seems that the dynamiter came out of that little affair with a better reputation than his intended victim.

IT looks a little as though the Czar's persecution of the Christian sect known as the Stundists were intended to take the edge from his persecution of the Jews. It was hardly necessary, however, for him to show that he is not particularly discriminating in his tyranny.

A MAN has too much sense, as a rule, to build a ten-thousand-dollar house on a thousand-dollar income, but church people do it in the matter of churches. They think in their early enthusiasm that the Lord will provide, but the Lord never provides for anything that is lacking in good business judgment.

THE postoffice department is not always rapid, but it is sure. A citizen of a neighboring state has just had returned to him a letter mailed a year ago with a notice from the department that the person to whom it was addressed could not be found. The department has probably been employing Pinkerton detectives to hunt up the person.

THE New York correspondents are trying to make it appear that the opening of the opera season was more brilliant and fashionable in that city than in Chicago. This is simply incredible. No one will believe that people of wealth and refinement in the boxes in New York could have talked any louder during the pianissimo passages than they did in Chicago.

"THE proper place for the Bancroft library is in this city, the commercial, literary, artistic and political metropolis of the United States.—New York [illegible]. Outside people have seen the [illegible] few good books in the "political metropolis" for some time past. If "the commercial, literary, and artistic" center will agree to read, no doubt the Sunday-schools all over the country would chip in with funds enough to make the purchase.

THE Rev. Lyman Abbott disposes of the charge that he has uttered grossly heretical doctrine by declaring that the heresy was in the reporter's ears, not in his sermon. It may be allowed to pass at that this time, but who listens to almost any clergyman of Dr. Abbott's ability, breath, and courage has always to strain his ears to catch the very microscopic thread of precautionary qualification which holds the orator to his theological moorings.

THE New York Sun thinks there is "a job" in the proposition to have Congress appropriate $5,000,000 for the World's Fair. The Sun is mistaken. It's only an opportunity to let Uncle Sam do his share, or let the rest of the country contribute about one-third as much as Chicago has for the fair, which, even New-Yorkers have become convinced, is not to be a Chicago fair, but a world's fair, to celebrate the discovery of, not Lake Michigan, but of all America.

"SIR EDWIN ARNOLD has been tendered a reception by the Unquebaughs." "Miss Frances E. Willard has been tendered a reception by the Daughters of Josh." "Rev. Dr. Noah Absalom has been tendered a reception by the Church of the Holy Slipper." And so it goes on. If Sir Edwin has been tendered, to whom has he been tendered and for what purpose? If Miss Willard has been tendered, to what is she offered and what will come of it? If Rev. Dr. Noah Absalom has been tendered, where shall we look for him hereafter? There is no more general ungrammatical or vulgar pest of bad English than tendering people and not explaining the aim, motive or object of the tender.

LATER details concerning the recent death of Caroline Beethoven, the last who bore the great composer's name, confirm the conjecture that she was the widow of his nephew, Karl, who caused him so much trouble while he was living. After his wife had borne him three daughters the graceless scoundrel deserted her, leaving her in straitened circumstances. Of late years she had been supported by her daughters, who are married, and by two musicians, who paid her money yearly on the anniversary of the composer's death. As it is reported that Karl Beethoven, when he ran away, came to this country, it would be worth the effort for some antiquarian to trace him out and find where he went and what he was doing here.

A CRANK is liable to be generally rational though he may be weak-minded on a hobby. As a rule he fully appreciates the results of violence. Men of this character should be severely punished for acts of violence. Fear of severe punishment is a great element in the prevention of crime, especially with men of hobbies. It is the man whose sanity is totally wrecked who knows no fear, simply because he cannot appreciate the results of crime or of violence. The only practical preventive against cranks is to punish those who resort to violence with the full extent of the law that fits the crime for the influence it has on the brotherhood of cranks, and to confine insane people in asylums as long as there is the slightest possibility of their doing any injury to society.

THOUGH Mid-Armagh, where the Tory candidate for Parliament, Mr. Barton, was allowed to have a walk-over, is undoubtedly Tory by a good majority, the Home-Rulers would have measured their strength there but for the unfortunate division in their ranks. The seat was carried by the Tories in 1885 by 1,500 majority. At a subsequent election the Home-Rulers put forward their leader in Ulster, Mr. Thomas Dickson, and he cut down the majority to 1,200, running against a most popular Tory of liberal ideas. Were the Home-Rulers united now they might be able to still further reduce the Tory majority, but as they are divided a contest would only result in an increase of the Tory majority. Mid-Armagh is one of the thirteen seats which the Tories can hold in Ulster for many years to come. They hold sixteen all told, but three by majorities not exceeding 100. The Home-Rulers hold seventeen seats—four of them by narrow margins.

Frogs as Food.

Most people believe, says a daily contemporary, that the edible frog is the only eatable batrachian in Europe, and that we have not developed the taste for those creatures for the simple reason that they are rare in this country, being confined to certain localities in the Eastern counties. This is, however, not the case. The common frog—Rana temporaria—is eaten on the continent in much greater numbers than Rana esculata; it is just as good, and easier to catch, as well as more abundant. Something might be done in recommending this creature as food; it is common enough not to want preserving. The two frogs are so much alike that it needs a careful examination to distinguish them. In this connection we may mention that we have more than once seen frog meat on the menus of London restaurants, and remember on one occasion to have quite enjoyed frogs' legs a la poulette at Gatti's well-known Strand restaurant. The dish ate like very delicate chicken.

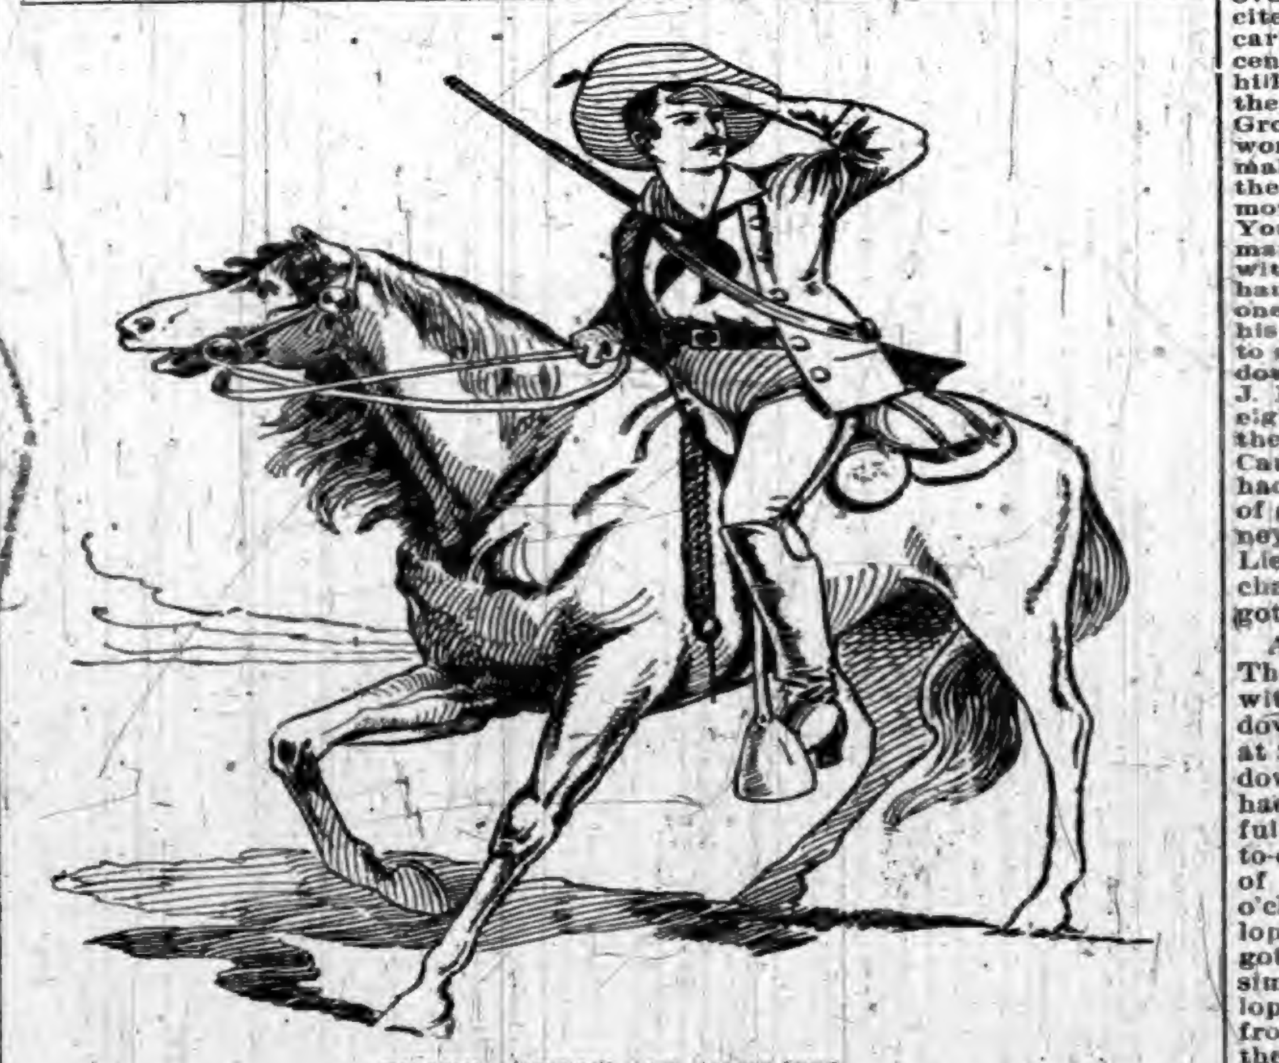
HUNTING IN WYOMING.

FROM FT. M'KINNEY TO POWDER RIVER FORK.

Stories of the Stage Road—The Feeding Ground of the Antelope—Chasing a Deer at the Drop of a Hat—A Tenderfoot's Luck.

Endurance of a Wounded Antelope.

We had been enjoying the hospitality of Colonel J. J. Van Horn, the commandant at Fort McKinney, writes Charles E. Nixon in the Chicago Inter-Ocean. Up to six months ago Fort McKinney was the most remote frontier post, being over 200 miles from the railway; now the distance has been reduced one-half. In the surroundings contributing to comfort, amid so much good taste showing the handiwork of refined and ingenious woman, one could hardly realize that we were 700 miles from the nearest city, Omaha; that the ladies of the post had been accustomed to do their shopping entirely through the problematical medium of a price-list, with an express company as a messenger. You women of cities think of being denied the privilege of overhauling shelves of silks, carrying off dozens of samples, and hovering about Monday's "bargain counters" as thick as leaves in Valombrosa! The wives and daughters of the military are brought up in a more heroic school of denial, but one that is more satisfactory in results, judging from the genuine comforts of household equipment, the science of cookery, and the good taste displayed in toilets.



HUNTING "ITEMS" AND ANTELOPES.

Revenons a nos moutons—we were invited to engage in a hunt, and Frank Grouard, chief of scouts, the hero of a hundred hair-breadth escapes by flood and field, was called in for consultation. We had a wild longing to scale the heights of the Big Horn and track the grizzly to his lair, but the scout "sized us up" and intimated that we had better keep out of the mountains and chase the festive deer and antelope. Surely we were in the hands of our friends; we wisely yielded without debate. Early next morning a cavalcade left the beautiful plateau of Fort McKinney, lying in the shadow of the snow-capped Big Horn, and started south towards the breaks of the Powder River. It was in charge of Capt. G. L. Scott, of the Sixth Cavalry.

Our first camp was thirty miles down the old stage road from Douglas to Fort Custer, at Harris Ranch, the scene of Captain Burke's (Eighteenth Infantry) fight in 1869. Not over a decade ago the whole country hereabouts was the hunting ground of the Indians. The renegade white man was nearly as bad as the redskin, and the stage was frequently held up in the good old times. The ranch house is a long, low log structure; the store or bar pre-empts the larger portion of the building, and the annex is the dining-room where transients are treated. The front door is as heavy as the side walls and has chain locks, a device to furnish the man on the inside some advantage over his visitors. It is historic, like the doors of the Theban Temple, but instead of hieroglyphics it is filled full of bullets and buckshot cards of visitors and reciprocal compliments from the inmates. The most sensational "pick-up" at this point was the work of a "rustler" in the fall of 1887. Major Wamb, United States Paymaster, had driven up in an ambulance with an escort. The air was biting cold and the paymaster went into the ranch house, accompanied by most of his escort, leaving a cavalryman to stand guard. Presently the aromatic odor of onions and venison stole out upon the air, and Harris came to the door and shouted "all hands for grub." The stableman lost no time in getting there; the shivering soldier scanned the country for miles around; not a man in sight. He walked toward the door; just as his hand touched the latch he heard the sound of horse's feet. Out from the stable yard like a flash came a slender young horseman, holding in one hand a small grip-sack. In it was $15,000 pay for soldiers that had been left in the ambulance. Away went the horseman with speed of the wind, up came the carbine to the soldier's shoulder, the benumbed fingers pulled the trigger, the bullet was buried in the dust at the flying feet of the horse. There was a rush of men from the house, then another rush for arms, all the work of a minute perhaps, but the horseman was off at long range, zigzagging in his course in a style that made sights and wind gauges superfluous. Whiz, zip, whiz went the bullets of a fusillade; the soldiers were shooting to save salary, but in vain; the daring rider only waved a defiant gesture of abomination as he rode over the ridge. Before the horses in the distant corral could get their loosened cinches tightened the robber was over the hills and off toward the mountain fastnesses and was not heard from until two years later in Nebraska, where a small fraction of the money was recovered.

That night we slept on the ground, and neighbor Harris' hogs were most attentive and inquisitive. The Captain broke two clubs over one razor-back's head, and then dutifully tried to rest with a bunch of cactus stuck in his heel like a natural spur, a painful souvenir of his reckless barefoot charge in the dark. In the morning the porkers were just as naive and frisky as ever.

The camp was up betimes next morning, and we were off early in a southerly direction. Toward noon we left the stage-road and turned southeast. In the afternoon we saw several bands of antelope, and the Captain threw up the dust around them at 1,200 yards, hoping to bring them our way, but with a reckless disregard for his wishes they turned tail in the other direction. Frank Grouard started after them, and we saw no more of him until that night, when he came into camp with two fat prong-horns.

Hunters relate strange experiences about the curiosity of the antelope when flagged with a red handkerchief, or when panicky how they circle about the shooter as a moth about a candle. Frank Grouard once shot twenty-nine antelope out of a circling bunch; but their present familiarity with the hunter has evidently cured them of their verdancy. Now they are as sharp as newsboys, and instead of cutting circus didos they move off steadily in a long line without manifesting the pioneer spirit of accommodation for the benefit of the hun [redacted] commandin miles ston a in all directions. How the game got away is a mystery, but it did. Following up the long draws on horseback we saw many deer signs running toward the river, but the fleet and crafty animals were away back in the hills. There were many tracks of mountain lion, and occasionally a coyote would bark at us and turn tail as a bullet responded to his welcome. The first day was considered well spent in getting the lay of the land. Grouard, of course, managed to slay a pair of antelope and a deer, and encourage us with the fact that game was about.

We were all in the saddle early the following morning. The captain bid "Jefferson Davis" farewell, leaving assurance that he would have deer meat for supper. Grouard, myself and Lieutenant Rhodes crossed the powder and were soon threading the labrynthian draws that led away from the river. Deer signs were quite thick. Grouard was slightly in advance, his keen eyes could find the track of a wild turkey in the sage grass, and could tell where a deer had trod during the previous forty-eight hours, picking the new out of a puzzling multitude of old tracks.

His gentle "sh, sh," and quick gesture of the hand indicates something new and warm. A little shadow flits up the canon. "There goes a deer, wait here," said the guide. Out of the gully and around it in S shape he circles. Crack goes his rifle; we ride up just as Grouard is dragging out a small body that looks like a goat. It is wild and wooly, quiet a young deer, and the guide pronounced it "the most curious thing" he had ever shot. A few minutes after he has skillfully carved the carcass, has the hams on his horse, and leaves the remains for the great golden eagle that is soaring, hungry overhead.

Two hours later we approach the brow of a high hill. "There are some deer over there," said the guide, pointing with his hand; "be careful." "Don't cock your gun!" We dismount, stake the lariated horses, and then half creeping, move toward the edge of the ridge. Now we are down on our hands and knees. "Careful, careful"—we peep over; the Lieutenant is in for it and excited, sure enough. Biff, bang, goes his carbine; up jump two bucks, magnificently antlered, and scud off down the hill toward the river with the speed of the wind. "Quick, to your horses," says Grouard, and suiting the action to the word he is on a stooping run for the animals, thirty yards away. Snatching out the pin and gathering in the lariat as he moves, he is on his horse very quickly. Your correspondent had to hustle, but managed to scramble into the saddle; with a "long Tom" (Springfield rifle) hanging out like the arm of a derrick in one hand and his lariat in the other he had his hands full. In fact, he had no chance to grasp the bridle, and his horse went down the incline after his fellows at a J. I. C. gait. Those two bucks went eight miles before Grouard's bullets laid them low, in the river bottom. The Captain had been lucky, and our party had managed to pile up a buckboard full of game, that was sent to Fort McKinney next day. Coming in that evening Lieut. Rhodes and myself had a wild chase through the timber, but the deer got away.

Again we are in an antelope country. The correspondent had been practicing with his rifle. The Lieutenant could down the ace of spades with his carbine at 200 yards, and he had as yet failed to down a deer or antelope. What hope had a poor tenderfoot! Grouard cheerfully said, "You will bring in an antelope to-day." A word like this from a prophet of the plains was inspiring. About 11 o'clock Grouard decried a band of antelope. We took a long circuit and finally got within 200 yards of them, but firing simultaneously, each breaking an antelope's hind leg. Now to cut them off from the herd. It took hard riding, but the two wounded ones were laggards, and we turned them about. Then it was up hill and down dale for an hour. One of the animals disappeared as suddenly as if he had dropped into a hole in the ground. We kept on the jump after the other. Strange how an antelope can run and maneuver on three legs. This one kept us on the move, through prairie dog towns, droves of jack rabbits, up gullies and down hills for eight miles. But we gained on the antelope; he tried to play with my sympathies, but he was doomed. Grouard circled about the animal like a hawk, and filled the air with laughter. I fired several shots from horseback, and finally dismounted and resumed the chase on foot. I was warm; my blood was up, so was my rifle. I fired high—six shots. Finally my seventh broke his spine; the antelope was mine. It was a matinee for Grouard; it was extremely exciting for me; it was a tragedy r antelope. At any rate, I largest antelope of the out- crowned by a fine pair of t night there was joy in my g to be certain of is that e wild West, does not hunt nder the conditions that our ienced. But a dozen antelope and fifteen deer should satisfy for a ten days' hunt.

The Porcupine.

Who has not heard the backwoods hunter entertain his open-mouthed and equally as ignorant audience with stories of our "gentle and inoffensive" porcupine, who "threw his quills until the dogs were covered and left in disgust, howling with pain," or some other "bosh" to the same effect. How positively he makes the assertion. There can be no doubt that hunters of this ilk frequently say "bear" when they have seen nothing more formidable than a harmless "ground-hog." Nature armored our porcupine in a manner that, when excited and with spines raised, woe to the quadruped or biped either, for that matter, who comes in contact with this bundle of prickers. "Porky's" body is covered with a thick layer of fat, in which the quills or spines are rather insecurely fastened. Each spine has a set of minute barbs at the outer end. But touch a spine and it sticks, and can only be removed by force. A dog or fox that lacks experience and undertakes a meal at the porcupine's expense usually ends by filling with spines not only his mouth, but his head and paws as well, and not unfrequently death results from his temerity.—Great Divide.

South American Railroads.

Railroads did not begin in South America until 1864, but in the little more than quarter of a century that has since elapsed their growth has been extraordinarily rapid. Brazil has now 6,000 miles of railroad in operation, and several thousand more in course of construction or planned. Great rivers favorable to navigation traverse the best parts of the continent, so that the facilities for communication are even better than the railroads constructed would indicate.

DONALD KENNEDY

Of Roxbury, Mass., Says:

Strange cases cured by my Medical Discovery come to me every day. Here is one of Paralysis—Blindness—and the Grip. Now, how does my Medical Discovery cure all these? I don't know, unless it takes hold of the Hidden Poison that makes all Humor.

—VIRGINIA CITY, Nevada, Sept. 9, 1891.

DONALD KENNEDY—Dear Sir: I will state my case to you: About nine years ago I was paralyzed in my left side, and the best doctors gave me no relief for two years, and I was advised to try your Discovery, which did its duty, and in a few months I was restored to health. About four years ago I became blind in my left eye by a spotted cataract. Last March I was taken with La Grippe, and was confined to my bed for three months. At the end of that time, as in the start, then it struck me that your Discovery was the thing for me; so I got a bottle, and before it was half gone I was able to go to my work in the mines. Now in regard to my eyes; as I lost my left eye, and about six months ago my right eye became affected with black spots over the sight as did the left eye—perhaps some twenty of them—but since I have been using your Discovery they all left my right eye but one; and, thank God, the bright light of heaven is once more making its appearance in my left eye. I am wonderfully astonished at it, and thank God and your Medical Discovery. Yours truly, HANK WHITE.

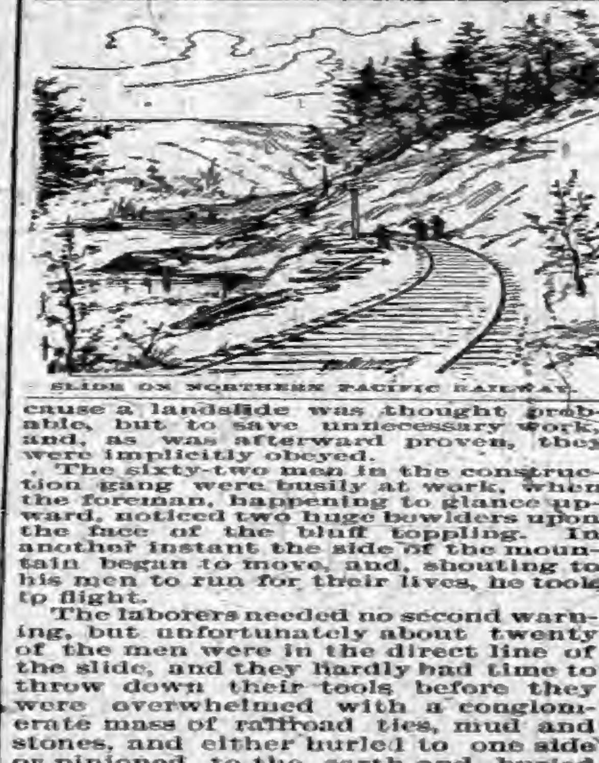
EAGLE GORGE HORROR.

The Landslide on the Cascade Division of the Northern Pacific.

The recent landslide which occurred in Eagle Gorge, near Canton, Wash., was the most serious of the many that have taken place upon the Cascade division of the Northern Pacific Railway, ten or twelve men having been buried under the debris, two hurled into the river and drowned and six others being seriously injured.

A cloudburst and heavy rain caused a serious washout near Canton, a station fifty-four miles east of Tacoma on the Green River, and a force of sixty-two men was set to work repairing the track and putting the roadbed in good condition, but with specific instructions not to disturb the soil at the base of the cliff which towered for 200 feet above them, overhanging the track and forming a portion of the face of the mountain. These instructions were not given because a landslide was thought probable, but to save unnecessary work, and, as was afterward proven, they were implicitly obeyed.



SLIDE ON NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILWAY.

The sixty-two men in the construction gang were busily at work, when the foreman, happening to glance upward, noticed two huge bowlders upon the face of the bluff toppling. In another instant the side of the mountain began to move, and, shouting to his men to run for their lives, he took to flight.

The laborers needed no second warning, but unfortunately about twenty of the men were in the direct line of the slide, and they hardly had time to throw down their tools before they were overwhelmed with a conglomerate mass of railroad ties, mud and stones, and either hurled to one side or pinioned to the earth and buried beneath the debris, which covered them to the depth of from six to fifteen feet, and borne to the bottom of the river, where many of the bodies still lie.

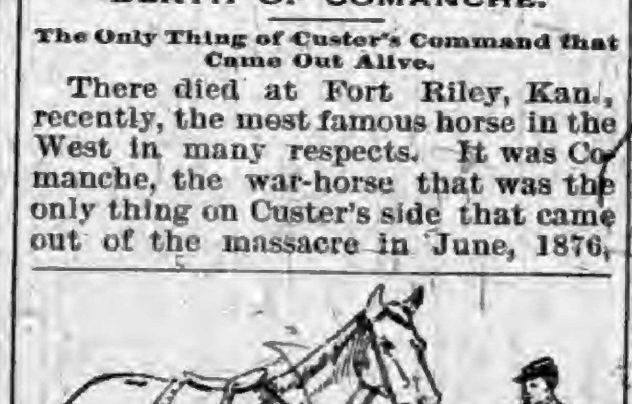
One man was thrown entirely across the stream by the force of the slide and found alive but unconscious in the underbrush a few feet from the bank. Six others who were on the edge of the slide were taken out seriously wounded and two bodies recovered by the surviving workmen, who returned and made a heroic effort to find the bodies of the dead.

How many perished in the slide will never be known, some workmen placing the number at nineteen and others varying from six to ten. The railroad was severely censured by the press because it took no immediate steps to recover the bodies of the dead, not beginning the search in earnest until five days after the disaster, when, owing to the affidavits of surviving workmen that they believed a large number of bodies were buried in the debris, an official investigation was ordered. It was even stated that they caused the debris of the slide remaining upon the track to be shoveled off and thrown into the river at the point where the bodies must have lain, and thus effectually prevented their recovery.

DEATH OF COMANCHE.

The Only Thing of Custer's Command that Came Out Alive.

There died at Fort Riley, Kan., recently, the most famous horse in the West in many respects. It was Comanche, the war-horse that was the only thing on Custer's side that came out of the massacre in June, 1876, alive. Comanche had never been under saddle since, and lived at ease until death by old age, the pet and care of the Seventh Cavalry. He was twenty-five years old, and was visited by sight-seers from far and near during the last years of his life. Professor Dyche, of the State University, secured the skin and skeleton for mounting, and will prepare them for exhibition at the world's fair.



"COMANCHE."

With Custer was Captain Miles Keogh, who rode Comanche. The horse had been in several battles and could stand fire like a post or run like a mustang. At first the soldiers seemed successful, but then the terrific fire told on their flanks. Captain Benteen and Custer were driven slowly before the great force of the enemy and waited for Reno to attack the rear, but he did not come.

Leaving Captain Keogh on a lower ridge, General Custer and his men ascended the crest of the knoll to which they were driven and there made his last stand. Keogh, seeing his men exposed to the fearful rain of bullets, gave the order to the men to kill the horses and take refuge behind their bodies. The order was obeyed. He still rode Comanche—and here there is a variance as to the manner in which the escape of the animal occurred. Some Indians say he broke away and ran, but the more popular version is that his master being unable to consider the thought of taking the life of the beast who had served him so well, dismounted and giving the animal a stinging blow with his sword, drove him away and turned his unprotected front to the foe.

THE NEW WHALEBACK.

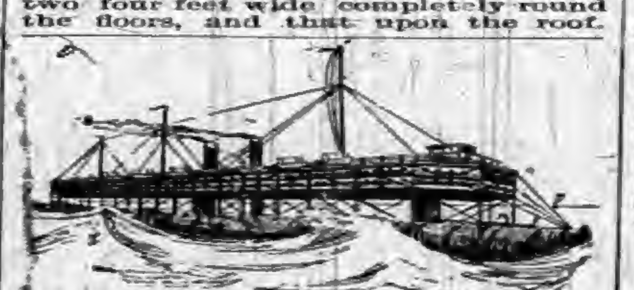
A Passenger Steamer that Will Cross the Atlantic in Five Days.

The new "whaleback" passenger steamer, now building at Wilmington, Del., is intended to make the distance between New York and Queenstown in five days and to combine speed with safety and plenty of room.

The hull, says the Scientific American, is of the steel barge pattern, almost submerged, supporting a strongly built pier beyond the reach of the wildest sea. Two longitudinal bulkheads divide the hull into three main compartments, which are subdivided by transverse bulkheads into twenty-one separate water-tight sections, without doors below the water-line. The curved deck affords immunity from crushing waves above, and the double bottom from the perils that may lurk below. The engines designed to drive this vessel at a speed of twenty-four knots an hour are of 19,500 I. H. P., three in number, of the triple expansion type, running 120 revolutions per minute, with propellers of 24.2 feet pitch, 11.8 feet diameter, and are to be supplied with steam by sectional boilers at a pressure of 115 pounds.

There will be numerous auxiliary engines for electric lighting, elevators, hoisting, ventilating, heating, etc. The superstructure is supported by five piers twelve feet in diameter, at distances respectively of 60, 180, 204, 228, and 372 feet from the bow, and at a distance of 132, 300, and 344 feet are steel masts, used also as ventilators.

The arrangement of apartments is in accordance with latest ideas. The lower floor is devoted to staterooms that are lighted by incandescent electric lights at night. During the day those rooms along the central girder are lighted from beneath by disk grating, over which an electric mat heater is placed. Accommodation for 720 first-class passengers is provided. Steerage travelers will, of course be limited to the hull. On the upper floor are the various halls, parlors, a grand dining-room, and as novelties a billiard parlor, baths, a laundry and ocean mail room; and for those who delight in promenades, two four feet wide completely round the floors, and that upon the roof.



THE NEW "WHALEBACK" PASSENGER STEAMER.

Passage between the hull and superstructure is accomplished by means of electric lifts, within the first, central and last piers.

By the separation of hull and living apartments the passenger is enabled to avoid the smell of machinery, the racket of freight handling and all those ills that transatlantic travelers condemn. By the union of ship and and hotel he is enabled to convert the voyage of three weary months in an open caravel into five days of luxurious ease and pleasure. The accommodations and capacity of a ship thus designed will commend it to the favorable notice of those interested in European trade and travel.

PLENTY OF ROOM FOR ALL.

The Twin Cities Can Easily Accommodate the Republican Hosts.

There can be no argument successfully advanced against the ability of the Twin Cities to properly entertain and care for a convention whose numbers might far exceed any political gathering yet held by the Republican National Convention.

Minneapolis alone has hotel accommodations for 6,800 guests and St. Paul, which is within a twenty minutes' ride from the convention hall, can entertain 5,100, making a total hotel capacity for 12,000 people. What other city in the United States can make a better showing in the hotel line, except possibly Chicago and New York? The fact that St. Paul is ten miles from Minneapolis, union depot to union depot, cuts no figure. That distance is rendered insignificant when compared to the magnificent distances in Chicago and New York City. Men think nothing of riding twenty miles on the elevated roads of New York, and ten to fifteen miles on the cable and steam lines of Chicago.

There are seventy trains of steam cars running between Minneapolis and St. Paul daily, and more than fifty trains over the electric lines during the same time. The time of the steam trains is only twenty minutes, and of the electric only thirty minutes. This is short time compared with other cities within their own limits. Besides these lines between these cities, there are nearly 200 miles of electric and cable lines running to all parts of the two cities, and taking in the splendid park system of Minneapolis. These various lines of transporation handle more than 100,000 people per diem as their regular traffic. The addition of 50,000 or 100,000 more would hardly be noticed.

TRAINING HIGHBINDERS.

Flesh from Savage Animals Believed to Impart the Requisite Ferocity.

At the corner of Sansome and Clay streets yesterday morning half a dozen Chinamen were bidding for a dead wildcat in the hands of a quail peddler, says the San Francisco Examiner. The beast was shot in Marin County the day before, and the eagerness of the Chinese, together with the spirited bidding, was a source of much amusement to the crowd that collected.

Representatives of the dreaded Chee Kung Yong society were there, and so also was a member of the Ping Ong Tong, and both sides were determined to secure the cat.

Two dollars and a half was first offered, and from this the bids raised to five dollars.

The old man who had the cat merely smiled.

A truce was declared while the body of the feline was examined. Many grunts of approval emanated from the warriors when it was found that the wildcat was fat.

"Fi dolla hap," said one of the Chinese.

"Six dolla hap," promptly came from a member of the Pings.

The other side held a conference and raised the amount another dollar.

At the close of the contest the representative of the Ping Ongs marched proudly away with the bobtailed cat, after having deposited $15 in gold for it.

"That's nothing," said the quail peddler, "I sometimes get more than that for 'em. They eat 'em so's to get brave."

Last night about twenty members of the Ping Ong Tong society regaled themselves on wildcat, and consequently increased their bravery.

The custom of eating tigers, lions, and other animals of a fierce nature by the Chinese dates from the days of Confucius.

Moy Sing, one of the most intelligent Chinamen in San Francisco, thus gave his opinion on the subject last night.

"A Chinaman believes that if he eats a portion of a lion or tiger the bravery and courage of the animal will enter into his system and he will become daring. In China the smallest piece of a tiger is valuable for this reason. I have eaten lion meat, and the effect is to make a man very brave. Here in California we eat wildcats and foxes, and think whenever we eat of the flesh of either kind we become brave or cunning like those animals. I think the man who sold the wildcat to those Chinamen made them believe it was a young lion, or they would not have paid so much for it, because the flesh of a wildcat is not of near as much value as that of a lion."

Vegetarianism.

A theory carried to an extreme throws its light on queer sides of human nature. Many people believe that it is not only foolish but wrong to eat meat, and their conclusions, pushed to their furthest bounds, have an odd sound in the ears of carnivorous mankind. One enthusiastic gentleman announces his intention of eating merely the raw fruits and grains of the earth, believing that cooked food was not intended for man or beast. He acknowledges that a diet of nuts and fruit has hitherto made him rather ill, but cheerfully hopes to adopt it, after a longer trial.

Another gentleman, who is not only a vegetarian but a conscientious eater of those fruits and grains which meet his approval, would not discard the rind of a fruit merely because it may be tough. Having grown there, he says, it must be intended for some good purpose, and he concludes that this purpose is connected with the palate of man.

"I believe there must be something medicinal or nutritious in the peel of an orange," he writes a friend, "and so I always eat it with the rest of the fruit. I must confess, however, that it never seems to agree with me."

Far removed from these ultra enthusiasts, however, are many persons who have adopted the mild form of vegetarianism which consists in eating vegetables when they are to be conveniently found. In London, especially, will such wanderers from the beaten track find ample sustenance in vegetarian restaurants, one of which, "The Apple Tree," is so entirely satisfactory as to merit many a visit.

Its bill of fare is long and elaborate. If one desires French names, they are here to be found. Translated, the tempting titles inevitably suggest the presence of meat, and inspire the inexperienced eater with an excited longing to know how it is all done.

You order "Saronny Steak," with a triumphant feeling that here, at last, the cook has been caught in his own ambitious toils, and beguiled into serving up flesh. A sort of browned cake is produced, and when one investigates, it offers a hint of many grains and vegetables, so cunningly mingled and so deliciously flavored that neither eye nor tongue can distinguish form or distinct taste.

A vegetable ragout sounds marvellously insipid, does it not? Yet when one has before him a steaming plate of tender young carrots, turnips and other spring benefactions, flavored with wondrous herbs, he must be an exacting man, indeed, if he is not content.

From "The Apple Tree" also are to be gathered delicious puddings of figs and dates, plates of fruit smothered in cream, and many-colored salads, which delight the eye and tickle the palate. Surely, in a land where such provision is made for the flesh-hating tooth, it is by no means so bad a thing to be a vegetarian.

Snake Farming.

Rattlesnakes are raised for their oil by a man named Jaynes, near Gainesville, Mo. He has 10,000 snakes, and the "crop" which he kills each year is about 2,000. The oil sold for liniments brings $1 a pint.

SELF is a wonder, a mystery as deep, maybe as God. "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself" is all that is required. Selfishness is the counterfeit, self-love is the true coin. Many a fool thinks he loves himself when all wise men see that he is acting as if he hated himself.

Taken for a Crank.

A semi-fiendish delight often seems to possess people of strong nerves in sneering at those with weak ones. The irritability of the nervous hypochondriac is ridiculed as natural ill temper. The very genuine and distressing symptoms from which he suffers are made light of. "He" or "she is a crank!" is the cheerful sort of sympathy with which the nervous invalid meets from the unfeeling and the thoughtless. At the same time no complaint is more defined and real, none more easily explainable, certainly when it is chronic. Imperfect digestion and assimilation are always accompanied by nervous debility and anxiety. Build up the powers of assimilation and digestion with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, and the nervous symptoms, sick headaches and a generally feeble condition of the system are remedied. [illegible] fearful ravages are produced by la grippe among [illegible] nervous people. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters subjugates and prevents malaria, rheumatism, and kidney complaint.

Many of our people are suffering from severe colds, hard coughs, etc. With some it is no doubt the genuine grip. Dr. Carpenter is one of the latest cases. He was called into the country Saturday night, when the wind and cold and sleet, that cut like a knife, made it too severe for man or beast to be exposed to it, except in a case of life or death. It is no wonder he is suffering from the exposure

Rev. Mr. Klotz and Emanuel Shoemaker celebrated the last day of the old year by holding a religious discussion on the corner of the street, to which there were some listeners. Inasmuch as no one is ever convinced, or induced to change their opinion through argument, either in religion or politics, the two gentlemen are probably of the same opinion still, only more fixed in their belief.

Sunday afternoon, at five oclock, at the M. E. church, was held the monthly union meeting of the young people's societies of the different churches. The audience room was filled and the exercises were exceedingly interesting. These union meetings by the young are a movement in the right direction, and must be a power for good in our midst if commenced in the right spirit. This small band, and others like it throwing their influence and labor on the side of Christ and of right life, may yet stem the tide of vice, immorality and intemperance that is sweeping over the land threatening wholesale destruction to our youth. God bless their efforts.

The two infidel lectures at the opera house two evenings, the latter part of last week, were listened to by large audiences. Christians who heard him say he was blasphemous. He not only claimed to be an infidel but made a boast of it. Every one of course, will judge for himself, and, also must hereafter account for the decision on all points, but to the writer time seems too precious, and in these days there are too many pleasant and profitable ways to occupy it to waste it on infidel writings or lectures. Then, too, did not Christians and those who believe the bible give such lectures a hearing they would find little pleasure in talking to an audience made up only or largely of those of their own belief. A good thing to remember, for all who want to keep in the right path is this: "Believe your beliefs and doubt your doubts; never make the mistake of doubting your beliefs and believing your doubts."

BUTLER.

O I. Campbell received as a New Years gift a bran new car as conductor on the Wabash.

George Repp and Sarah Repp, (the latter a sister of J. A. Campbell,) and Solomon Repp and wife, of Glenn, Mich., are visiting friends in Butler and vicinity.

John Shoub, an old and well-known citizen of Butler, departed this life Dec. 27, aged about sixty-five years. Mr. Shoub was among the early settlers of this part of the country, purchasing his land in 1848 He lived in Stafford township until recently, when he removed to Butler. He was born in Wayne Co., Ohio, in 1827 His wife and two children survive him One daughter, Mrs. Walter Maxwell, having preceded him only about two weeks. His funeral took place from the Christian church, of which he was a member, Rev. Mr. Stewart officiating.

A familiar face and figure has gone from our midst. For more than thirty years the familiar features of Mrs. Sarah Revett has been observed by those who passed up and down North street. On Sunday, December 27, she quietly crossed the death river. She was among the first to make her home in the new village known as Brainard's Corners, afterwards Norristown, then Jarvis, now Butler. She was born June 10, 1815, at Bengal, Tioga county, New York. She was nearly related to one of the presidents, Millard Filmore. April 13th, 1834, she was united in marriage to James Revett, an English soldier who survives. To them were born nine children, only a part of whom survive her. Forty-three grandchildren, eighteen great grandchildren and three great-great-grandchildren, survive her. She came to Indiana in 1845, settling in south Wilmington township, DeKalb county. Her funeral took place from the M. E. church Dec. 29th, 1891, Rev. Mr. Stone officiating.

S. C. Urey a former teacher of this place was married Christmas eve to Miss Cora Rennoehl, both of Fairfield township. We wish them a long and happy voyage through life.

The Christmas tree and entertainment were a grand success and all who attended enjoyed the occasion. Santa Claus and his better half were indeed a beautiful sight, and did their part very nicely. The presents were numerous and beautiful and the tree presented a fine appearance. Nearly every Sunday scholar in town was presented with lovely and appropriate presents by the teachers, and in some cases the scholars presented their teacher with like tokens of regard. Long may this custom prevail, and all who are able to give should remember that it is better to give than to receive.

Also $1 for one dog, $2 for each female dog, and $2 for each additional dog.

The Road and Special Road Tax are included in the first installment. The Poll and Dog Tax are divided equally between the two installments.

Taxes of 1891 are due the first day of January, 1892, and may be paid in full or in two installments. The first installment must be paid on or before the third Monday in April, 1862; the second installment on or before the first Monday in November, 1892. If the first installment is not paid when due both installments become delinquent. Ten per cent. will be added, and I shall at once proceed, as the law requires, to collect the same, together with the costs that may accrue, by distress and sale of personal property.

The treasurer will not be responsible for the penalty and charges on delinquent taxes resulting from any omission of the person paying, to state definitely on what property, in whose name, and in what township or corporation it was assessed.

Persons owing delinquent taxes should pay them at once. The law is of such a character that there is no option left to the Treasurer but to enforce the collection of the delinquent taxes, however much he may regret to collect the same by the sale of property.

"The owner of property on the first day of April each year, shall be liable for the taxes of that year. The purchaser of property on the first day of April shall be considered the owner on that day."

Examine your receipts before leaving the office and see that all your property is included.

No county order will be paid to any person owing delinquent taxes.

The annual sale of lands and lots for delinquent taxes, will occur on the second Monday in February, 1892.

Come early and avoid the rush of the last few days. We have 6,000 receipts to make and all can not be made the last few days.

The books will positively be closed on the evening of the third Monday in April, and no one will be allowed to pay after that date without penalty.

Parties sending by others, or by letter, to pay tax, should not fail to send description of their lands and lots.

No receipts will be made out for any party until they are ready to pay.

Assignees, Guardians, Administrators and others who pay taxes on property in trust, and persons whose taxes are complicated, such as individual estates, etc., are earnestly requested to settle such taxes before the last few days, as it requires considerable time to make the divisions and and separate receipts therefor. As the treasurer cannot know the location of each person's property, tax payers should designate the property on which they wish to pay taxes, and see that all property is specified on their receipts. If they have land in more than one township or town, or desire to pay taxes on lands not in their name, call the Treasurers attention to the matter.

REUBEN SAWVEL, Treasurer.

How's Your Liver?

Is the Oriental salutation, knowing that good health cannot exist without a healthy Liver. When the Liver is torpid the Bowels are sluggish and constipated, the food lies in the stomach undigested, poisoning the blood; frequent headache ensues; a feeling of lassitude, despondency and nervousness indicate how the whole system is deranged. Simmons Liver Regulator has been the means of restoring more people to health and happiness by giving them a healthy Liver than any agency known on earth. It acts with extraordinary power and efficacy.

NEVER BEEN DISAPPOINTED.

As a general family remedy for Dyspepsia, Torpid Liver, Constipation, etc., I hardly ever use anything else, and have never been disappointed in the effect produced; it seems to be almost a perfect cure for all diseases of the Stomach and Bowels.

McDougall, Auburn, Ind, who for two years noticed a stoppage or skipping of the pulse, his left side got so tender he could not lie on it, his heart fluttered, he was alarmed, went to different doctors, found no relief, but one bottle of Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure cured him. MR. ROSENBURY, Waterloo, Ind.:

Dear Sir.—I have been thinking for some time of writing to you in regard to my baby's recovery, which occurred in Waterloo something over two years ago, at which time he was very low with flesh decay, and three doctors had given up all hopes of his recovery. But after the first time you treated him we could see a change for the better, and he gradually grew better until cured, and is now a stout and healthy child, being almost four years old and weighs forty-one pounds. We can truthfully say that it was through your treatment that we still have our baby boy. Hoping others may devive as much good from your treatment as we did, and that you may be successful in all other cases. We remain yours,

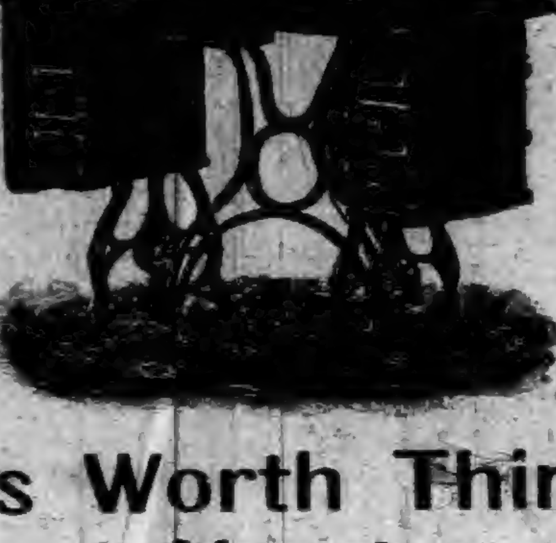
I then went to A. Y. Rosenbury, and by simply passing his hand over the affected parts at different times, I can now do a good share of hard work. I think that I can truthfully say that A. Y. VOLUME XXII. AUBURN, DE KALB COUNTY, INDIANA, THURSDAY JANUARY 14, 1892. NUMBER 2.

CHAPTER III.



Points Worth Thinking About.

The "Standard" has the biggest bobbin of any lock stitch machine.

Holds 100 yards of cotton.

The first stitch perfect without holding ends of thread.

The tension is released when taking out the goods.

The finest goods are not drawn or puckered.

Less noise.

Runs 50 per cent. lighter than vibrating machines.

The most expensive, beautiful and practical set of attachments.

Bent wood work of the finest finish ever made.

Shortest needle used in lock-stitch machines—therefore less liable to bend and skip stitches.

Will wear twice as long as other lock-stitch machines.

Every part is independent of every other part, and can be replaced at a trifling cost. Therefore you can keep a "Standard" practically new a life-time.

There has been nothing since Elias Howe produced the first stitch on a sewing machine that has made such a sensation among the ladies of the United States as has been created by the "Standard" Rotary Shuttle Sewing Machine. Its success has been the wonder of the entire sewing machine fraternity. It has disarmed criticism, overcome the most violent and unscrupulous opposition ever waged against a sewing machine, and to-day stands without a peer.

A Visit to the Ohio Gas and Oil Fields.

I left Butler on the afternoon of Dec. 26, reaching Toledo about dark, where Sunday was passed among friends, and in strolling about this rapidly growing city. On Monday morning I took a train on the Toledo, Columbus & Southern railroad, which passes through the heart of the gas and oil belt. After going south a few miles the smell of oil and gas becomes preceptible, and soon a perfect forest of derricks begins to shoot up on all sides. At At first I tried to count the number in a given area, but after reaching thirty or forty and seeing no end to them in either direction, I gave up the task as a hopeless one, and looked and wondered where they all came from. Some in fields, some in the woods, some in villages and on the road side, with frequent oil stations, which look a little like a board fence with the boards knocked off and only the frame left, with an iron pipe on top, from which projected long iron arms, which are made to connect with tank cars, and this filled them for transportation to refineries in different places. As we approach nearer the center of the fields, hundreds upon hundreds, of great iron tanks holding 3,5000 barrels each, are scattered over the fields and woods, some places seeming to have been placed about in the order of dwelling houses along a street in a village. I tried several times to count these, but the number was too great. They looked a little like great shocks of grain in a harvest field. I afterward observed that they were numbered, for convenience, and the larger numbers reached nearly to 2000. Nearly all of them were surrounded by a raised bank of earth, a little like a dam, only circular. I learned that the object of this was to prevent the oil from all wasting in case the tank should burst or in case it caught fire, from spreading to other tanks. They are frequently struck by lighting and set on fire, when, to prevent an explosion a cannon ball is fired through the tank and thus an opening is made at the bottom when the oil escapes into the outside reservoir and is soon consumed. This road passes through a flat poor county, and has but few towns of importance except Bowling Green, the county seat of Wood county, Ohio, a very nice looking town. Going south, we pass Van Buren, another thrifty small town, and soon reach Findlay, the county seat of Hancock county, which until about seven years ago was a little hole in the woods without a railroad except a spur from Fostoria, and a population of 4000 or 5000.

The oil and gas caused the little town to break its apron strings and spread all over the township. Free gas was offered to all the manufactories that would locate here, and free gas for dwellings Square mile after square mile was laid out in lots on all sides, and the town commenced to boom in earnest. Dozens of large glass, iron, brick, stone-ware, china and other factories located here, furnishing employment for thousands of men at good wages, and the town has now reached fully twenty thousand. Now a sharp move was made; heretofore syndicates owned the gas and furnished free to all consummers, but, they sold out to the city, and no sooner had the city got control, than they demanded pay for all gas consumed. This led to big lawsuits, but so far the city is on top. I visited several of the factories, all being shut down during the holidays, and found them very cheap structures, mere sheds, but all well insured, and ready to sell to the insurance companies at short notice. Findlay is a very pretty town, one of the finest of the smaller towns of the state that I have yet visited —wide, well paved streets, good substantial buildings—a model court house—several fine school buildings and one very good college building, The Findlay, owned by the Church of God. But my letter is too long and I must close.

ON THE GULF.

Mr. Shede Leaves New Orleans For Honduras.

Happy indeed were we when at last we were aboard the steamship southward bound. Glad to get away from the filth of this wretched city. Would you believe me there is not a sewer pipe in the whole city. All the sewerage of the city of New Orleans runs along an open gutter one every street. In some places this is covered with a green froth most horrible, no sanitary whatever. In the negro quarters it is wretchedness multiplied by ten. I have lost all respect for the colored voter of the South.

But down the broad Mississippi we glided past many magnificant orange groves, sugar and rice plantations until at last we passed the lighthouse and plunged into the foaming waters of the Gulf, and just as the shades of night were closing over. I saw the land of all I love fade in the distant dim. Oh how I loved that land as I saw it passing fast away. A stormy night came on, rain poured down incessantly, the huge billows foamed and seethed, and the vessel rolled badly, and by morning all the passengers were sick except me. I alone appeared at the breakfast table. This is an Italian vessel, and the officers and crew are Italian or Spaniard, the passengers are all foreigners except one Colorado man, two Chicago boys, Mr. Fostner and myself. At present writing we are in the center of the Gulf far from every land, and the sea is rolling high and all are to bed but me.

LATER: The breeze that blew yesterday increased to a gale, and toward night the mountainous billows roared until all other noise was drowned. I was the only passenger to be seen on deck. I have scaled the lofty peaks of Southern California, of Oregon and of Western Washington and view the landscape over, have seen many grand scenes, but nothing that can compare with the old ocean in all its majestic grandeur, when every gigantic hill of brine is capped with surging, seething, tumbling foam.

LATER: This is Saturday, the fourth day out to sea and still no land in sight. Yesterday while we were passing the coast of Yucatan, a low, rocky island appeared far away to the westward, but only for a short time and again it sank beneath the watery waste. No other land has been seen since we passed out of the Mississippi river. We are now in the southern part of the Carribean Sea, nearing our destination. The weather for the past few days has been delightfully pleasant. The captain told me that this evening we would make a landing; then I can post this letter.

LATER: This is Monday and we are lying off the coast of Ciba. The natives are unloading goods by lighters. I was ashore yesterday and took a walk into the wild woods. I have seen enough to know that it is a fine country.

RUATAN, Honduras, C. A., Dec 25, '91.

EDITOR COURIER: This Christmas day finds me at a small place on the Island of Ruatan. The mercury every day stand at 70 at sunrise, 80 at noon, 75 at sunset. With a delightful climate, the general health seems to be good. There are very few flies or other insects to annoy people. I have rambled through the woods and have not seen a serpent yet. The natives are very kind to us and I believe they are perfectly harmless. Christmas is the great national holiday in this country. The natives begin to get drunk about three days before Christmas and continue to grow more hilarious untill the great day arrives. We went up to the town last night and saw the wildest excitement we ever witnessed. Several grand balls were in progress. Skyrockets, Roman candles and fire crackers filled the air until we fled into a building for safety, and the noise and din were terrible. Several bands were in full blast, the negroes were shouting their full capacity. We now camp in a cocoanut grove on a small inlet near the island of Ruatan. We are having a happy time. I shall write more at length when I get settled in my new home.

CALIFORNIA.

California is the most attractive and delightful section of the United States, if not of the world, and many beautiful resorts will be crowded by the best families of the east during the entire winter. It offers to the investor the best open opportunity for safe and large returns from its fruit lands. It offers the kindest climate in the world to the feeble and debilitated, and it is reached in the most comfortable manner over the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad. Pullman Vestibule Sleeping Cars leave Chicago by this line every day in the year and go without change or transfer through to San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego. This is a feature not offered by any other line. Write to John J. Byrne, 621 Rialto Building, Chicago, Ill., if you desire any further information as to the country and accommodations for reaching it.

THE French wine crop is 4,000,000 hectolitres above the yield of 1890. That is 104,668,000 gallons. There seems to be a good field for the establishment of a Keeley institute in sunny France.

ONE out of every crowd of boys becomes rich or famous. If you think it will be you in your crowd, remember that you must start early. IF necessary, it will be very easy to raise by popular subscription a fund to push the suit instigated by an enterprising drummer in Minneapolis. He went to the theater, paid to see the play, and saw nothing but the hat of the girl in front of him. He demanded a clear view of the stage, was refused it, and has brought suit for damages. The theater-going public is with him.

JAPAN appears to be turning out her university graduates at a faster rate than employment can be found for them. A Japanese contemporary states that many of this year's Imperial University graduates have as yet been unable to find employment, and says this state of things is gradually assuming a serious aspect. There is some mistake in "education" when it unfits men for hard work in any line of employment.

THERE was sometime a dispute as whether cotton or corn was king in this country. The estimate of the cotton crop this year gives a yield of $400,000,000. The corn crop, at 35 cents a bushel, will yield $700,000,000. Corn has been supreme for a considerable period, but now has about given way to iron. In the amount of labor employed from the mine to the finished metal iron disburses a greater money value than either corn or cotton.

ON the world's roof is where the first outbreak has taken place which may bring on the much-dreaded general European war. The vast tableland nearly 14,000 feet above the sea level which forms a junction for the territories in Asia of China, Russia, Afghanistan and Great Britain is called "the roof of the world." There Russia and England have already come to blows; and there is every evidence that Russia is steadily advancing in the direction of India. The powers have just appointed that precursor of war—a "frontier commission."

THE newspapers of late have been of a ghastliness most depressing. The headlines have had to do with the identification of victims, or with some other detail of crime. How much harm is done by this keeping before the eyes of the public the idea of crime and outrage is a thing not enough considered in these days. We are in danger in America of sacrificing decency, privacy, religion and even personal and public liberty on the shrine of a mysterious and hideous deity which we call News, and too often the newspapers of the day degenerate into mere servants of this destructive god. The unnatural worshipers of old who made their children to pass through the fire to Moloch did it in much the same spirit.

WHEN other topics fail them the preachers, the doctors, and the reformers generally are fond of holding forth upon the evils of social dissipation for young girls; upon the dangers of late hours, tight lacing, dancing, and other indulgences cultivated by the votaries of society. And yet the last survivor of all those who were in any way associated with the famous battle of Waterloo was the late Lady De Ros, who died very recently, and who has long been a historic character as one of those who danced at the ball in Brussels when "there was a sound of revelry by night," on the evening before the battle. There is no room for the casuist to argue that if Lady De Ros had worn reformed gowns, had refrained from dancing, and had gone to bed early she might have lived much longer, for if there were any witnesses of that heroic day who were free from her weaknesses, they did not thereby survive her. She outlived them all, and as she continued during more than seventy-five years afterward to figure as one of London's Four Hundred, there is nothing for the moralist to say, unless it is that she illustrated the perversity and obstinacy of lovely woman by persisting in living so long after the laws of sound physiology had forbidden her to do it.

THE world of art has suffered a severe loss in the recent deaths of a veteran French critic and an English dramatist. The former was Albert Wolff, the long-time art critic of the Paris Figaro. While Mr. Wolff's forte was in the criticism of paintings, in the course of which he exercised a powerful influence upon the Paris Salon, he was equally skilled in musical and dramatic criticism and had remarkable talent as a feuilletonist. His death is a sad blow to all these departments of art. The English veteran who has passed away is the famous dramatist, John Maddison Morton, whose specialty was farce writing, and who was the author of some of the most successful comedies and farces that have been produced on the English stage. He was born in 1811 at Pangbourne. His father, Thomas Morton, was also a dramatist and wrote the successful pieces, "Speed the Plow" and "Town and Country." The son's most successful productions were "My First Fit of the Gout," "Woodcock's Little Game," "Going It," and the world-famous "Box and Cox." He wrote for such great actors as Farren, Keeley, Buckstone, Mathews and Robson, and made the fortune of some of them. During his later years he had been a poor brother of the Charter House, for though he enriched many others by his genius he died poor.

THE attempt of the Chicago underwriters to check the increase of tall buildings by imposing an arbitrary and unjust rate of insurance on them will not succeed. Rates of insurance are fixed not by the preferences of insurance companies but by the inexorable laws of trade, and so long as the tall buildings are among the safest of risks all resolutions against them are as ineffective as a Chinese proclamation against an eclipse of the moon. The modern building of twelve stories and upward represents the best combination of efficiency, economy, comfort, safety and sound investment. It is the result of several recent discoveries in the art of building, chiefly of the rapid elevator, the flat arched floor and the steel truss framework. It is essentially a fireproof building, for the large amount of capital required by the conditions of its design precludes the idea of using combustible materials. It utilizes the high-priced real estate of the crowded modern city to the best advantage, and it meets the requirements of modern business with an efficiency that admits of no competition. The old-fashioned hotel, office building and storage warehouse have no longer any place in a great American city, and the mission of the tall building has only begun. What its future is to be can be best estimated by looking back upon its brief but brilliant and successful past. It is in accord with the spirit of the age. It opens up new problems to the architect, the designer, the investor, and the business man, and it will carry its insurance at a rate which will represent the cost of insurance. Thus far the tall building has been a safe risk, and we may confidently look for its extension and improvement. It is here to stay!

John Ruskin.

JOHN RUSKIN will soon complete his 73d year, and for sixty-five of those years he has been a poet, though for the most part using prose as the vehicle of expression for highly poetic thought. At the age of 7 he wrote in blank verse a singular essay on "Time." The next year he wrote an invocation to the sun to shine on his garden, which is an amusing, almost a pathetic, mixture of poetry and pathos. At the age of 20 he gained the Newdigate prize for English poetry, and soon after abandoned the muse because, as he said, he could not express his ideas in verse.

Watering the Deceased.

IF an Arab woman who has lost her husband decides to marry again, she visits the grave of her husband the night before her second marriage, and prays him not to be offended. As, however, she feels that he will be offended, she takes with her a donkey laden with two goatskins filled with water. The prayer ended, she proceeds to pour the water on the grave to keep the first husband cool under the circumstances about to take place, and, having well saturated him, departs.

How It Works.

A year or more ago a well-known New York lawyer raised the question, "Who own the United States?" In an article published in a popular magazine he presented a collection of facts, partly within his own knowledge and partly the fruit of careful personal inquiry, that were startling, even to those who believed themselves awake to the phenomenal massing of wealth to this country. His conclusion was that the United States are to-day practically owned by 250,000 people, or one in sixty of the adult population, and that with the unchecked momentum of existing forces the number will be reduced in thirty years to 50,000, or one in 500 of the adult population.

The greatest force in this rapid and, as all must admit, perilous concentration of wealth must be looked for in another question: "Who own the taxing power in the United States?" I shall seek an answer to this question; for it is a fact as capable of proof as any fact in politics can be that the taxing power in the United States, so far as it works through the tariff, has been transferred to private ownership and only in a subordinate sense subserves any public purpose.

By the admission, even by the boast, of those who framed the McKinley bill, we have now a "tariff for protection with incidental revenue." Now protection is for the individual and private interest, and revenue is for the government.

Who and how many, we may well ask, are the individuals who have prior and paramount claims to the public in taxing the people of this country?

They are that portion of our producers who make goods that might be competed with in our market by goods imported from abroad.

They alone can be beneficiaries of a law that shuts out of the country such goods, or admits them only under heavy burdens and penalties, and any advantage claimed for others must be filtered to them through these direct beneficiaries.

I am not aware that any one competent to do so has listed these beneficiaries and ascertained their number as compared with our full population. But very competent inquirers have ascertained facts from which a "shrewd" guess can be made as to the number of those who enjoy—thanks to a great political party—the prerogative of taxing the American people, for their claim to possess this prerogative is made, not in their own name, but in the name of the laborers they employ. Fortunately, we can very accurately estimate the number of their employes, as compared with our entire wage-earning population.

Secretary Manning submitted to three eminent statisticians, among them Prof. Simon Newcomb, the distinguished mathematician and writer on economic subjects, the question, how many employes were engaged in the industries supposed to be protected in whole or in part by the tariff. Their answers, made without concert and after careful study of the census of 1880 and our revenue laws, were in striking concord. The average of these answers was but little more than 5 per cent. of our working population. A recent attempt to solve this same question has been made by a gentleman whose ability to deal with statistics is not surpassed by any authority.

Mr. Edward Atkinson, in a letter addressed to the Boston Herald a few weeks ago, and in a speech which I heard him make before the Reform Club of Massachusetts, gave both his method of solving the question and the results he had reached. I will only deal with the latter, and that for the purpose alone of answering the question at the head of this article. As the census of 1890 is yet incomplete, the census of 1880 was used. In that year one out of every three, or, speaking exactly, one in each two and nine-tenths of our population, was occupied for gain, making altogether 17,400,000 in gainful pursuits.

These were distributed in round numbers as follows: In agriculture, as farmers or laborers, nearly 8,000,000; in professional and personal service, 4,000,000; in trade and transportation nearly 2,000,000, and in manufacture, mechanic arts and mining not quite 4,000,000.

For the entire country forty-four out of each hundred are engaged in agriculture, but in the Southern States, including Missouri, the number so engaged is seventy out of each hundred.

Mr. Atkinson finds that of this entire wage-working population 1,200,000, at most, are or can be in any way subject to foreign competition, while on the other hand 1,400,000 in agriculture and 200,000 factory operatives, mechanics, and machinists depend wholly on foreign sales and the export of the products of their labor for their sustenance.

This is one of the most suggestive and telling facts brought out in the tariff controversy, and cannot be too strongly dwelt upon. After all the boasting of the tariff as the protector of American labor and creator of a home market, there are 400,000 more laborers wholly dependent on the export and sale of their products in foreign markets than there are laborers protected from competition in any measure by the tariff.

We have, therefore, the following distribution of our working population:

Number who are wholly dependent on the export of the products of their labor	1,600,000
Number subject in some measure or in part to an import of a foreign product to compete with their labor	1,200,000
Number subject to no foreign competition [illegible] by the tariff except as consumers	14,600,000
Total	17,400,000

Who, then, we may now ask, own the taxing power in this country? The capitalists who employ the 1,200,000 laborers specified in the above table. As to their number we can only guess, but if we average ten employes to each employer we have 120,000 out of the population of 1880—say 150,000 of our present population, as the entire number of the direct beneficiaries of the tariff laws. Here, then, is our privileged class enjoying two privileges elsewhere accorded to royalty alone: first, an exemption from their just share of the burdens of government, and [illegible] the sovereign prerogative of taxing all the rest of the people for their own benefit.—Congressman W. L. Wilson, in St. Louis Republic.

Wool and the Tariff in 1891.

When the McKinley tariff, which increased the duties on wool, went into effect, it was predicted by McKinley and his associates who made the bill that it would boom the wool industry, raise the price of wool and decrease the importations of foreign wools. The American Wool Reporter's annual review of the wool market shows how complete has been the failure of the tariff to do what was expected of it. "The course of the wool market," says the Reporter, "during the past year has been a great disappointment to the trade, as well as the wool growers. As far as the volume of business in primary markets is concerned, there is no very radical difference to be noted, taking the year as a whole, the aggregate of sales being not far from those of the previous year.

The receipts of wool in Boston, the principal wool market of the United States, during 1891 show an increase over 1890 of 9½ per cent. of domestic and 37.4 per cent. of foreign wool, while the total sales during the year aggregate only 1,331,230 pounds more than in 1890. At the same time the stocks on hand at the close of this year, as compared with 1890, are as follows:

	1890. Pounds	1891. Pounds
Domestic	25,874,493	30,391,450
Foreign	2,952,460	4,985,310

This, taken in connection with the receipts and the total sales for the year, show clearly that while there has been a large increase in the consumption of foreign wool, it has been at the expense of that of domestic growth. What in view of this becomes of the claim made by high-tariff organs that the decrease in the importation of goods during the year meant a larger consumption of domestic wool?

Concerning prices the Reporter says: says: "In the matter of prices realized the trend of values has been almost steadily toward lower figures, when there has been any movement. The year has been characterized by long periods of depression, and after each period of weakness there has not been one rally calculated to lift values upon a higher plane. In spite of the increased duties upon foreign wool, importations of the latter show a decided increase, as those who have been at all familiar with our market reports very well know. The strengthening influence, therefore, that was to come from anticipated reduced importations has been characterized by its absence. The result is that the markets at the seaboard and in the interior close the year at practically the lowest point of the year, and, on the average, with wool about two cents per pound lower. Ohio and Pennsylvania fleeces have shown the most marked depression, which is significant, certainly, in view of the fact that the growers of those wools were the most clamorous for the increased duties, and that it was their interests more particularly than others that the tariff was designed to protect."

How general has been the fall in the prices of Eastern wools is shown by the following table prepared by the Reporter:

Varieties.	Dec. 31, 1891. Cents per lb.	Dec. 31, 1890. Cents per lb.
Ohio and Pennsylvania XX and above	30 @31	34@35
Ohio X and above	29 @30	32@33
Ohio X	28 @29	31@32
Ohio No. 1	35 @36	37@38
Michigan X	26½@27	29@30
Michigan No. 1	33 @34	36@37
Michigan delaine	32 @33	34@35
Ohio delaine	34 @35	36@37
Ohio fine unwashed and unmerchantable	20 @21	23@25
Michigan do	19 @21	21@23
No. 1 Ohio combing, washed	38 @39	40@42
No. 1 Michigan do	36 @37	39@40
No. 2 combing	33 @34	36@37
No. 3 combing	30 @31	33@34
Kentucky, Michigan and Indiana, ⅜ bld, combing	27 @28	29@30
One-fourth blood	25 @27	27@28

Concerning the probability of increased importations of wool next year, the Reporter says: "We noted the probability, in our review of last year, of increased importations of foreign wool, and the outcome of events has justified our predictions, and to-day indications point to a still further use of Australian and other foreign wools than we have seen during 1891. Many houses which never handled Australian wools before have done so during the past few months, and others are preparing to do so.

"Increased importations and sales of Australian wools, in the face of higher duties on the one hand and increasing stocks of domestic wools at lower prices on the other, together form a striking commentary on the inefficiency of a higher tariff as a remedial measure for the grower. With like conditions prevailing in the year 1892 there is no reason for expecting a different state of affairs than have prevailed during the past year."

The failures of the wool tariff briefly summarized are: 1. It has failed to raise prices of domestic wool. 2. It has failed to decrease the imports of foreign wool.

Why, in view of this, does it longer remain on our statute books?

Who Pays the Tariff Tax?

The following table shows the value of dutiable imports, and the amount of duties collected for the past five years:

Year	Dutiable imports.	Duties collected.	Average rate of duty.
1887	$450,325,321	$214,222,310	47.10
1888	468,143,774	216,049,956	45.63
1889	484,856,768	220,576,092	46.13
1890	507,571,764	226,540,036	44.41
1891	466,453,173	215,569,799	46.28
Total	$2,377,352,801	$1,093,285,330	46.40

The values of imports given above are the values of the goods at the place of purchase—that is, the prices at which the goods are offered for sale to anyone in foreign markets. The duties collected represent the tax which is imposed on these goods by the United States at its custom houses. Who has paid into the treasury of the United States the $1,093,285,330 within the past five years? It was certainly paid by one of the two parties concerned in the importation of the $2,377,352,801 worth of goods, either by the importer or the foreign manufacturer. If the importer paid the duties he added the amount to the price of the goods, and as Mr. Depew says, the tariff tax "rested on the bottom," that is on the consumer. But Secretary of the Treasury Foster says that the tariff is a tax, and that the foreigner pays it for the privilege of selling his goods in our markets. If his view is the right one, the foreigner has within the past five years been doing a most unprofitable business in exporting goods to the United States, for for every dollar's worth of goods which he has on hand, say, in Liverpool, to be shipped to the United States he must pay not only the cost of insurance, handling, and freight—which amounts to say five cents—but also 46 4-10 cents in duties to the United States. His net return, therefore, when he lands his dollar's worth of goods here, is less than 50 cents.

Is any one stupid enough to think that this is true? If foreigners send their goods to the United States, do they not do it because they can get more for them here than where they are made? If this is true, the consumer in the United States, not the foreign manufacturer, pays the tariff tax. Which view of the matter is the more reasonable one?

THE Hartford Times of the 16th inst. publishes the following from its correspondent in the neighboring city of New Britain:

"This morning the knitters at the American Hosiery Company were notified of a 10 per cent. reduction in wages. For the past week there has been a general reduction of wages, comprising the spoolers, ravelers, spinners, and seamers."

The Dry Goods Economist reports that "the employes are very much dissatisfied." [illegible] at the hearings before the McKinley Ways and Means Committee in the spring of 1890, Mr. James Talcott, the principal owner of the American Hosiery Company's works, was an eloquent advocate of the proposed higher duties on hosiery, and that he expressed deep solicitude for the welfare of [illegible] of this country. As almost everybody knows, the duties on hosiery were largely increased by the McKinley act.—New York Times.

FEARFUL LOSS OF LIFE.

OVER ONE HUNDRED DEAD IN THE KREBS MINE.

Distressing Scenes Attending the Recovery of the Charred and Blackened Bodies—Miners Working Fiercely to Reach Their Entombed Comrades.

Wild Work of the Blast.

Additional particulars of the terrible mine disaster near McAlester, I. T., only too fully confirm the first reports sent out. A careful estimate by Assistant Manager Krebs places the dead at 130 and the injured at 200. Of these at least 100 will die, as they are burned so that the flesh is dropping from their bones.

At 5 o'clock in the afternoon there were, as near as can be learned, about 400 men in the mine, says the latest report. They were the day shift and were just preparing to ascend when the explosion took place. Six men who had already been hoisted in the cage had just stepped on the platform at the side of the shaft. The cage was blown through the roof of the tower and fifty feet into the air. Flames shot up the shaft and above the ground fully 100 feet, which were followed by a terrific report which was heard for miles around and shook all the neighboring country so violently that people in the surrounding mining towns four and five miles distant thought an earthquake was shaking the ground.

The men already above ground were prostrated by the force of the explosion, but did not receive serious injuries. The scenes about the mouth of the shaft immediately following were fearful in the extreme. Weeping women flocked to the scene from the village at the sound of the explosion, many of them hysterical to the point of insanity. The air-shaft, the only way of escape for the entombed miners, was the point where the relatives of the miners congregated. Many of the miners were able to make their way out of the tomb, and they were welcomed at the surface by their waiting friends. The injured were quickly taken to places of shelter and were tenderly cared for. One man with a broken leg climbed all the distance of 400 feet through the air-shaft and fell unconscious as he reached the surface. Others who were terribly burned labored painfully up the ladder, strips of flesh falling from their hands and arms as they grasped the ladder's rounds.

The news of the disaster spread quickly through the villages surrounding Krebs. Every physician at once volunteered his services and hastened to Krebs ready to do his duty of mercy. Hundreds of miners from the Braidwood and McAlester fields hurried to the scene to do what they could in assisting in the rescue of the entombed men and the recovery of the dead.

The work of rescue, which was begun at once, was hazardous, but the hope that some of the unfortunate men might be rescued alive spurred the rescuers on to many deeds of bravery and possibly self-sacrifice. The explosion had entirely changed the topography of the mine. Many tunnels were closed entirely, and big loose bowlders were balanced perilously on shelves of rock adjoining the air-shaft and the main shaft, which a breath would almost hurl down upon the rescuers. Notwithstanding these dangers, the rescuers kept bravely on at their work. The rescuers worked at both the air and the main shafts, and bodies were rescued by both routes.

The mines have long been regarded as dangerous, as there are few escapes and the ground is very gassy. The exact cause of the fearful catastrophe is not known as yet, but it is believed by those who escaped to have been caused by a premature explosion, which took place before the usual safety precautions could be taken. When the shock occurred many of the men were on their way to the outlet to go home. Those who were in the neighborhood of the main shaft were hurled heavenward through the opening, going sixty feet above the surface of the earth. Eye witnesses to the external appearance of the explosion describe it as one of the most frightful exhibitions imaginable. It was nearly dark, suddenly there was a puff of smoke through the tower; there then came a roar and the superstructure all gave away and after it came the belching flames blackened in spots with human bodies. Then fire spouted for an hour then died away, leaving the iron windlass and steel hoisting apparatus intact. In half an hour the cage was lowered, and at one of the levels a young man got on, nearer dead than alive. He tried to bring his father with him, but the sire pushed his son on the platform with the little strength that he had left, and as the iron car shot upward the old man fell back and expired.

During the night the cage was run to the lower levels, but no attempt could then be made to explore the mine. At every landing dead and dying are taken out. Many bodies are so burned that they are not recognizable by any one.

The search by the rescuing party still continues. There is one disheartening fact connected with the search up to the present time, and that is that not one live miner has been found. All the bodies so far recovered have been found to be burned, charred, and maimed in almost every case beyond recognition. In fully half the cases identification has been possible only from [illegible] of the pockets. In some cases limbs had been severed from the bodies by the force of the explosion, and in others the bodies had been burned to a crisp and charred almost beyond resemblance to human form. There are two encouraging facts which urge the rescuers on in their work. No fire followed the explosion, at least there have been no signs of any, and there are known to be live men entombed in the tunnel behind fallen bowlders. The rescuers can hear faint knockings and far-off shoutings. They are digging in the direction whence the sounds come and hope yet to rescue some of the men alive.

One hundred of the wounded are being cared for in the improvised hospital in the blacksmith shop. Special trains from Kansas and Texas have brought large bodies of nurses and surgeons sent here by order of the General Manager of the mines, Maj. R. D. McDowell, of St. Louis, who is now on his way here. Nearly all of the wounded will die.

The Osage Mining Company was organized in 1868 by Congressman R. L. Stephens of New York, who built the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railroad. Col. Stephens' agents, while canvassing the prospects of the proposed road through the Indian Territory, saw the possibilities of the coal-producing region, and when the road was put into operation immense shipments were at once made from McAlester and 300 or 400 men were employed in the various mines.

Safety in the Midst of Danger.

This would seem a contradiction—is so, in fact, to the eye. But experience has proved its possibility. Take the case of the individual who dwells in a malarious region. A robust constitution is no certain defense against the dreaded chills. What is? Recorded testimony, covering a period little short of half a century, proves that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is precisely this. This continent does not limit the field where the medicine has proved its efficacy. In South America, the Isthmus of Panama, Mexico, everywhere in fact where miasma-born disease takes on its most obstinate and formidable types, the Bitters is a recognized specific in illimitable demand, and prescribed by physicians of repute. Potent, too, is it in disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels, and against that destroyer, la grippe. It improves appetite and sleep, neutralizes rheumatism and kidney complaints.

Good Deal of a Back Number.

Prof. Krall of Vienna, in examining the bands of a mummy, probably of the age of Ptolemies, which for the last forty years has been preserved in a museum, has found a strip of linen with several hundred lines of Etruscan writing. In this text, which is the longest we possess in that language, some words occur that are to be found in Etruscan inscriptions known to us, but the whole cannot in the actual state of Etruscan studies be deciphered. The cloth was no doubt written on for some other purpose before being carried by ship to Egypt, and there used for the wrappings of a mummy.

UNFIT FOR HUMAN FOOD

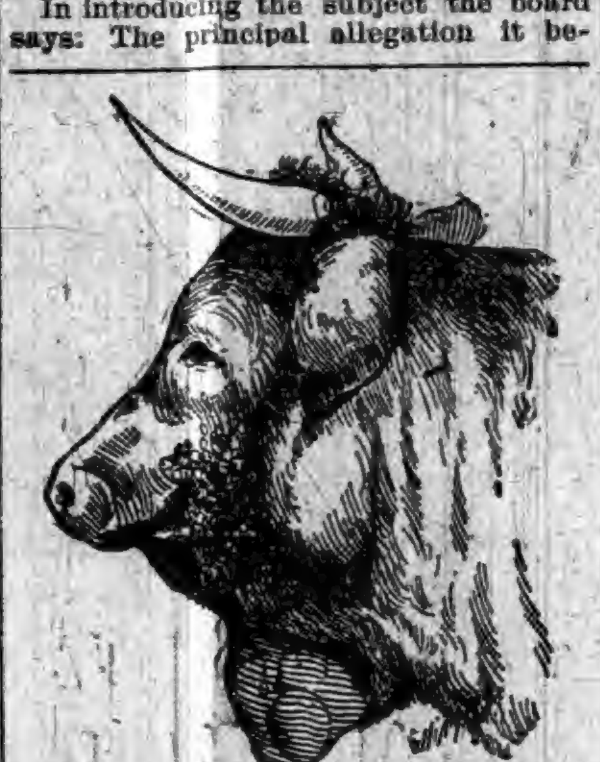
COMMISSIONERS CONDEMN LUMPY-JAW MEAT.

They Decide that the Disease with the Unpronounceable Name Renders Animals that It Attacks Unfit for Human Food—Brief Review of the Testimony.

Views of Experts.

The State Board of Live-Stock Commissioners has issued and had published a bulletin containing a resume of that portion of the testimony introduced in the recent case brought against them by J. B. Greenhut and other members of the "whisky trust" of Peoria, known as the actinomycosis or lumpy-jaw cattle case, bearing upon the question of the contagiousness of the disease among cattle, and from cattle to human beings, and the unfitness of the flesh of cattle affected with this disease for use for human food. The illustrations presented in connection herewith are from the photographs of diseased animals which were introduced in evidence.

In introducing the subject the board says: The principal allegation it becomes necessary for the defendants to prove in order to justify their actions in the premises is that the disease, actinomycosis, is a dangerously infectious or dangerously contagious malady, and one great element constituting the danger is the liability that the meat of animals containg the germs of the disease may communicate the disease to human beings who eat it.



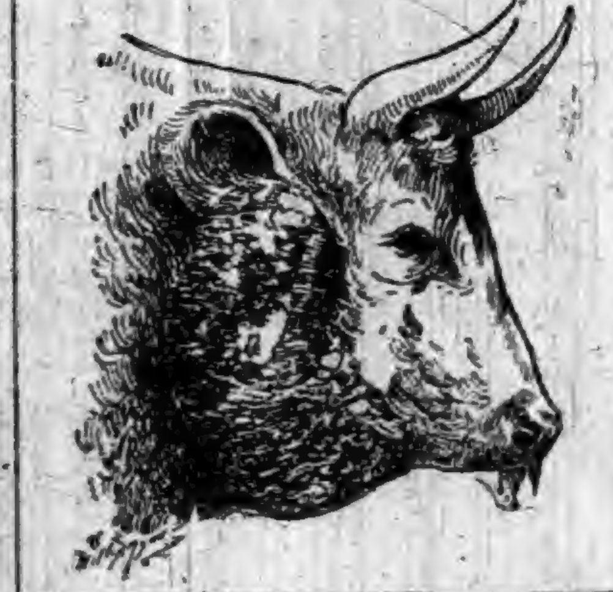
It is also remarked in the introductory that in a trial of this kind much testimony as to facts having a direct and important bearing on the question at issue that could be introduced in a legislative examination or an extra-judicial investigation was not admissible as evidence in the trial of the cause in question; consequently all the facts which could have been brought to the attention of the jury were not permitted to be introduced; for instance, a witness for the plaintiff testified to the thoroughness of the meat-inspection system in the abattoirs at Berlin and that cattle affected with actinomycosis are not condemned for food in Germany.

The defense was not permitted by the court to show by witnesses brought there for the purpose that the facts regarding the use of cattle affected with actinomycosis in Germany for food, are that the carcasses of such cattle are classed as fourth-class or diseased meat, and are sold as such to the poorer classes of people, who cannot afford to pay the prices charged for healthy meat, and it could also have been shown that the 273 recorded cases of this disease in man about 90 per cent. of these cases are recorded in Germany.

The bulletin treats briefly of the expert witnesses for the plaintiffs as follows: The plaintiffs called as experts Dr. Frank S. Billings, director of the patho-biological laboratory, Lincoln, Neb.; Dr. Olof Schwarzkopff, of Minnesota; Dr. R. W. Hickman, chief inspector of the bureau of animal industry, at Chicago; Dr. Frank C. Bourscheidt, a physician and microscopist, at Peoria; and Dr. A. Vogel, a veterinary surgeon of Chicago.

On the question of the disease being dangerously contagious or infectious Drs. Billings, Schwarzkopff and Vogel, for the plaintiffs, expressed their individual opinions, under oath, that the disease was not contagious, consequently not dangerous, but on cross-examination each admitted that the disease, actinomycosis, is due to a germ or parasite, which had been by various scientists taken from the pus discharged from one animal and inoculated into another animal, and there produced the disease containing similar germs, and Dr. Schwarzkopff admitted that he had, while experimenting with the disease, inoculated an animal and produced a tumor containing the germs actinomyces.

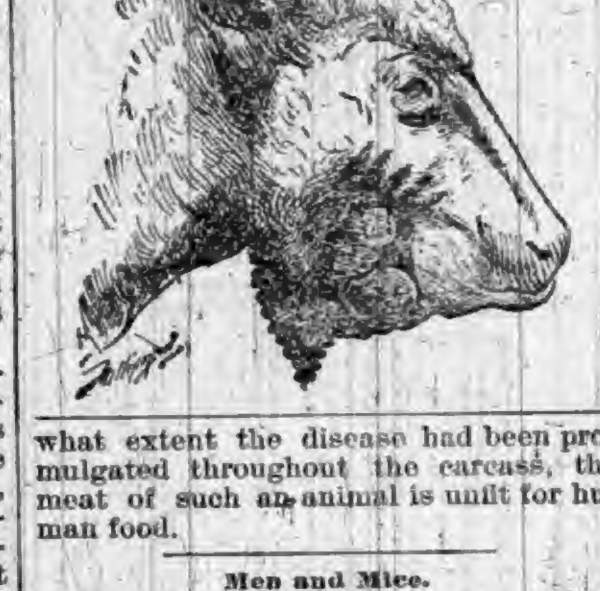
Each of these gentlemen expressed the opinion that all cattle contract the disease by infection from a germ when taken into the mouth on grass or grain or other food, but failed on cross-examination to answer why, if the germ when originally on grass or grain would when taken into the mouth of an animal affect the animal and produce a tumor, a similar germ, being identical in structure and nature, found in the pus discharged from a diseased animal, when transmitted accidentally to the abraded surface of the flesh of another animal, would not communicate the disease. Dr. Hickman was of the opinion that the disease could be transmitted from one animal to another by inoculation, and under certain conditions was contagious, while Dr. Bourscheidt was also of the opinion that under some circumstances the disease was infectious.



Regarding the question as to whether the disease, actinomycosis, [illegible] ous, there was unanimity of opinion expressed in the testimony of all the experts for the defense, which may be well expressed in the language of Prof. Law, who said: "The disease tends to advance indefinitely, and is fatal early or late, according to the importance to life of the organ involved. Actinomycosis is usually fatal in the long run if not cut short by treatment." And by Dr. Paquin: "The disease is dangerous and probably fatal in the vast majority of cases, if not in all cases, at some time or other." All agreed in their testimony that where the disease was purely local, and could be excised with a knife, then it is curable; but that if any of the germs have reached the internal organs, then it is incurable, and Drs. Casewell and Baker testified in this regard that they had made a number of post-mortem examinations of animals alleged to have been cured by the removal of the external diseased lump, but in every case in the internal organs had been found the nodules containing the germs of the disease, showing that a cure had not been effected, as supposed; and Dr. Horne testified that he had never known a case in a thirty years' experience that had been cured. Though the lump had been removed and the sore healed up, every case in his experience had developed the disease anew.

All of the witnesses for the defense agreed that actinomycosis is a dangerously contagious or dangerously infectious disease in cattle, which has been demonstrated, by the inoculation of cattle by the pus discharge containing the germs taken from a diseased animal, and also taken from man; that the fact of the inocubility of the disease determines that it is a contagious disease, and that a disease which can be communicated from one animal to another by artificial inoculation can also be contracted by natural inoculation under favorable circumstances. Upon this question Prof. Law testified as follows: "That the disease is contagious is self-evident, since it depends on the planting of the germ in the animal tissues, affecting, as it so frequently does, the region of the face, mouth and tongue; that the disease is dangerous is unquestionable, as in the absence of treatment usually goes on to a fatal issue, by the interference of the feeding and mastication or by the extension of the malady to vital internal organs. The victim of actinomycosis of the face, mouth, throat, windpipe or lungs drops the actinomycotic cells from their raw surfaces or with the saliva or expectorations. Those having the growth on the stomach, intestines or liver drop similar actinomycotic cells with the dung, and these getting on the food or water are taken in by other animals and grow on any susceptible wound or abraded surface on which they may fall."

Is the flesh of animals afflicted with actinomycosis fit for human food? On this topic there was no difference of opinion among the experts introduced by the defense, all of them unequivocally expressing their opinion under oath that the flesh of any animal affected with this disease is unfit for and dangerous for human consumption. They all testified that the disease had been found affecting all of the essential internal organs of the animal as well as of men, including the lungs and the liver, the spleen and the intestines; that wherever the germ actinomyces found a favorable spot to attach itself new colonies of the disease would spring up, producing new tumors and localizations; that while it is possible for the germ to be taken into the alimentary canal, intestines, and stomach through the food eaten, and into the lungs through the inspiration of the air, it is impossible for the germs to reach the liver and spleen except through the circulation of the blood; hence, if it can reach the liver and spleen through the circulation of the blood, it may reach any portion of the animal anatomy; consequently, they considered that when the animal was affected, it being impossible to tell to what extent the disease had been promulgated throughout the carcass, the meat of such an animal is unfit for human food.



Men and Mice.

The spendthrift is a species of the criminal class. To spend all your money and then borrow of others to spend is a kind of stealing. To rob yourself, waste your time and opportunities, and make no provision for sickness and trouble, sure to come to every one, are features of character but little better than safe-cracking and burglary. No young man in health has any excuse for destitution, and it is his duty not only to live within his income but to save something from it. Money is little more than the right earned to do many things. Money saved is money earned, but the fool and his money are soon parted. The young man with his savings has earned the right to buy good clothes, to travel, and to procure such other luxuries as his means will warrant. This is an age of competition, an age in which only one young man in fifty makes a success of a business in which he embarks, and he does that by superior fidelity to every trust and an industry which scorns sleep, holidays, and amusements, and simply because he can outdo, outwork, outsave, and safely handle his earnings. The other forty-nine of his fellows lead a precarious existence, and belong to the vast army of nonentities who have small respect at home or anywhere. Will you be a man or a mouse?

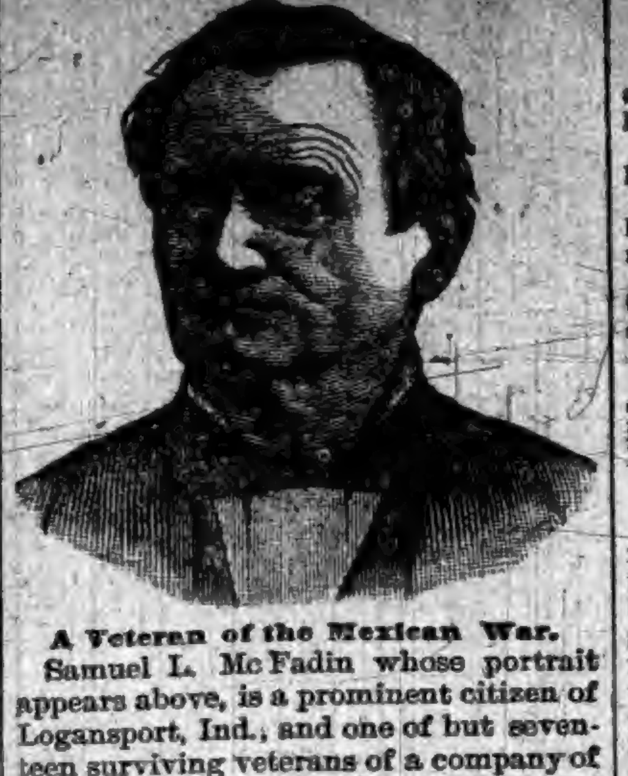
Strange Facts About Humanity.

Of the entire human race it is estimated that 500,000,000 are well clothed—that is, they wear garments of some kind; 250,000,000 habitually go naked, and 700,000,000 only cover parts of the body; 500,000,000 live in houses 700,000,000 in huts and caves, and 250,000,000 have virtually no shelter at all.

IT is wrong to put the dough for bread in a hot oven. The oven should only be slightly warm, and then heated gradually. This plan has been tested by a London baker, who asserts that the intense heat, suddenly striking the surface of the dough, kills the yeast influence, which should make the bread rise. He tried an experiment by having the dough put in the oven of gas stove, slightly warmed, and gradually increased the heat till it reached the degree at which bread bakes. The result was simply wonderful. Bread baked in this fashion rises to amazing size, and the bread is of spongy lightness.

THE most profitable crop raised by the peasantry near the famous field of Waterloo is the crop of bullets and buttons molded in the vicinity, duly planted, and harvested in time to be disposed of to the gullible travelers who eagerly buy them as relics of that memorable June day in 1815, when Napoleon's glory was totally eclipsed.

A MINIATURE hammock for mothers and nurses has been invented. It is suspended from the neck, and in it a baby can be carried, leaving the nurse's arms free.



A Veteran of the Mexican War.

Samuel L. McFadin whose portrait appears above, is a prominent citizen of Logansport, Ind., and one of but seventeen surviving veterans of a company of ninety-two young men who left that city forty-five years ago for the seat of War in Mexico. He now holds the position of Marshall of National Association, and although well advanced in years is still hearty and hale. In writing of his health he says:—I had been troubled for a long time with rheumatism, Kidney and Liver Complaint and could hardly get around. Suffered great pain night and day. After trying many different kinds of medicines and finding no relief, at last through the advice of a friend I purchased Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root from one of our leading Druggists, B. F. Kesling, and must say it has helped me wonderfully, as I now walk without pain.

It is the only medicine that has done me any good, and has been a great benefit in invigorating and building up my system, greatly assisting the liver, kidneys and digestive organs. This is the first recommendation I have ever given a medicine and it affords me pleasure to call the attention of the public to the merits of this wonderful specific. Those who try Swamp-Root have generally first employed the family physician, or used all the prescriptions within their reach without benefit. As a last resort, when their case has become chronic, the symptoms complicated and their constitution run down, then they take this remedy, and it is just such cases and cures, that have made Swamp-Root famous and given it a world-wide reputation.

The Duke of Calvino, who was captured by brigands in the neighborhood of Trapani, was released by his captors on payment of a ransom of 150,000 francs by his family, who never expected to see him again, he being very obese, advanced in age and afflicted with a nervous malady. He had passed thirty-five days with the brigands, and, strange to say, the treatment he had received, though by no means pleasant, had the effect of completely curing him. The Duke relates that in the night when he was taken he was put on horseback and made to ride till next morning, when the brigands stopped at a kind of warehouse. There he remained the first day, and wrote, at his captors dictation, a letter to his family asking them to send the above named ransom. In the evening the journey was resumed, and as the rain was falling in torrents, the Duke was clad in some tarpaulin, and a sack was placed over his head to protect him. The second night the party reached an abandoned shed, where the Duke was left, with a guard outside the door. The third night the journey was continued, and ended at the place destined beforehand for the Duke's concealment. He had to enter this retreat on hands and knees, through a narrow opening, into a cave, and then through a second hole into a subterranean grotto. Here he remained for thirty days without any light, lying on a bundle of straw, which was never changed. His food consisted of bread and cheese and water. The brigands left him alone, only returning to bring food. By the light of a lamp, which was lowered from above, they forced him to write other pressing letters to his family, and dictated what he should say.

His family, to obtain his release, used their utmost influence to prevent the military authorities from pursuing the brigands until the ransom had been safely paid and received. The band liberated their victim after having conducted him on foot for a considerable distance, to the territory of Castellamare, where a peasant's house had been indicated to him, whence he would be conducted by the inmates to Trapani, about twenty miles distant.—London Standard.

It has been kindly arranged by the Author of man and nature that he shall love the future more than he shall regret the past. When the soul is free to move and does not know of any gathering storm for the morrow, when the child of earth has health of mind and body, is not struggling with debt or crime, nor is in the toils of injustice, then the future is always more smiling than the past is dark. All being in a normal condition the future will always outweigh the past in the great balances of excellence. The past is a trembling, dying man; but the future is a strong, beautiful youth. Nature was thus fashioned to induce society to look forward and draw its inspiration from an advance instead of from a desire to halt or retreat.—Prof. David Swing.

A Surprised Farmer.

An East Dover (Me.) farmer had a mare something over twenty years old, and not thinking it advisable to winter her spoke to some boys to take her out, shoot her and bury her for a money consideration. Boys Nos. 1 and 2 did the job all right, but No. 3, not knowing the mare had been killed, went the following day to the farmer's barn and finding an animal in the stable took him out and led him down to a piece of woods, shot and buried him. Imagine the farmer's surprise on coming home to find that boy No. 3 had shot and buried a nice 5-year-old, worth in the neighborhood of $200.—Boston Transcript.

Pencil Protector.

A new discovery has been made by railroad clerks in Pittsburgh regarding the saving of lead pencils. The new idea to preserve a soft pencil is to take a gross of the useful article and place them in a jar of linseed oil. Allow them to remain in soak until the oil thoroughly permeates every particle of the wood and lead. This has the effect of softening the mineral, at the same time making it tough and durable. It has been found very useful and saving, an ordinary pencil being used twice as long under the new treatment.

SOME years ago the Paris picture-dealer Ferrett bought a picture for 10 francs in a rag and bone shop. The picture, which is in Jordaen's best manner, last year fetched 58,000 francs.

A Remedy for the Grippe Cough.

A remedy recommended for patients afflicted with the grippe is Kemp's Balsam, which is especially adapted to diseases of the throat and lungs. Do not wait for the first symptoms of the disease before securing the remedy, but get a bottle and keep it on hand for use the moment it is needed. If neglected the grippe has a tendency to bring on pneumonia. All druggists sell the Balsam.

Obituary.

William Smith was born in York county, Pa., Sept. 23, 1818, and died at his home in Keyser township Jan. 4th, 1892, aged 73 years, 3 months and 9 days.

Mr. Smith moved with his parents to Ashland county, Ohio, in 1834. He was married to Angeline Andrews Oct. 22, 1840. Seven children were born to them—three sons and four daughters. He came with his family to DeKalb county in 1854 and moved on his farm in Keyser township, where he lived until the spring of 1867. He then went to Auburn and kept hotel, and again in 1870, returned to his farm, where he lived until his death. Mr. Smith was a kind husband and father and a faithful Christian. He leaves an aged wife, one son and daughter, ten grand children, seven great grand children, to mourn his loss.

The funeral was held in the Lutheran church, in Auburn, Jan. 7. the services being conducted by Rev. Jacob Gump and Rev James Barton, of the Dunkard church, of which church he has been a faithful member. The interment was in Evergreen cemetery, in Auburn.

Ten Dollars Reward.

I will pay the above reward to any one who will return to me the half of a double harness that was taken from my stable between the nights of Jan. 6, and Jan. 9, 1892, for the apprehension of or the person who took it, or both. The parties are suspected, and if the harness is not returned in ten days to my residence 1½ miles south of Auburn, a search warrant will be taken out, and a search made and the guilty parties brought to punishment.

THE AUBURN COURIER.
OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY.
JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.
Registered at the Auburn, Indiana, Postoffice [illegible]
THURSDAY........JANUARY 7, 1892.

BILL in congress once more to have U. S. build postoffices in all towns where the receipts of the office exceed $3,000.

TIN manufacturers now ask congress to put one cent more tariff on tin. Do republican papers think they ask this in order that tin may be cheaper? Now don't all speak at once.

NATIONAL debt increasing and the surplus gone. The increase for the month of December, was almost three millions. And republican papers still say it is not safe to trust in any but republicans to manage Uncle Sam's affairs.

WE said last week that Sherman would likely beat Foraker. This proved true, for at the caucus of the republican members last Wednesday evening, Sherman received 53 votes, Foraker 38, and one each for McKinley and Charlie Foster.

BISHOP W. PERKINS the newly appointed Kansas senator who succeeds Plumb, practiced law at Pierceton in Kosciusko Co., this state, about the close of the war. He was then as green as any other young chap, but we hope he has outgrown some of it.

A [illegible] has been imported from France for use at the White House. American make is just as good, but Harrison "is in favor of 'patronizing home industry,'" don't you see? He also had his name put on them, though they are not his, but will remain for future presidents.

"Can he steal the Senate?" asks the Butler Record in a clipped article, having reference to Hill. Well, that depends. If Hill had the supreme court and other machinery with him, as did the republicans in 1876, he might not only steal the senate, but the entire government as was done that year.

THE Angola Republican says "the democrats are abusing Judge Woods for sole and only cause, that he presided at the trial of Sim Coy." It is charitable to suppose the Republican is ignorant, for if not ignorant it is telling a lie. The democrats are opposing Judge Woods, because on several occasions he has shown himself unfit for that high office by reason of his partiality and disposition to wink at crime where his own party is concerned.

Lippincott's Magazine.

This excellent magazine still grows better as it grows in age. The January number especially starts out on a new lead—a new range of matter entirely, including the first of a series of articles by newspaper men. This first one, is "The Editor-in-chief's story," by Alex. K. McClure, who is the chief editor of the Philadelphia Times. One number of those that follow, will be "The City Editor," another the "Reporter," and so on through the usual departments of a great daily paper. Each will write so as to illustrate his own special work. As said, it is a new field, and one that cannot but interest every reader. Address, Lippincott's Magazine, Philadelphia.

Wood Wanted.

The board of school trustees of the town of Auburn, will receive bids up to Friday, Feb. 5, 1892, for furnishing two hundred (200) cords of stove wood. Terms and conditions made known on application to M. Boland, president of the board.

A. D. MOORE.

About Right.

The Columbia City Post has the following sensible talk about the Indianapolis Sentinel's late criticism of Judge McClellan, for voting for Springer, and finally Crisp for Speaker, and failing to support the Sentinel's candidate, Mr. Mills:

"Just now the editor of the Sentinel seems to have lost control of his large and active brain. The thrust at Congressman McClellan is entirely uncalled for and was inspired by the fact that McClellan acted upon his own judgment in voting for Speaker instead of submitting to the Sentinel's demands." There is no doubt but that Judge McClellan voted for the man who was the choice of a decidedly large majority of his constituents, and time will fully demonstrate that he made no mistake. It is but natural Crisp should remember Mr. McClellan for the support he received from him in the speakership contest, and for that reason a chairmanship was given him. There is one thing that can be said of McClellan, he is a democrat. It is high time for the state organ to stop making [illegible] ridiculous. The Sentinel is carrying [illegible] much sail. Reef 'er in and avoid [illegible] frequently [illegible] capsizing.

The Butler [illegible] takes the same view. It says:

The above thrust at Congressman McClellan [illegible] contemptible [illegible] and clearly indicates that the management of the Sentinel is losing all control of its one time brilliant position. McClellan voted for the man who was his choice as well as the choice of the majority of his constituents. The Review was for Mills, but as Mills didn't secure the speakership, we are perfectly satisfied with Crisp, and we have no reason to believe that he will be other than a firm advocate of tariff reform. It is certainly a wise choice of Speaker Crisp in selecting Congressman McClellan for the position he now occupies, and the Sentinel has lowered itself several notches in the eyes of the northern Indiana democracy.

Educating the Blind.

The forty fifth annual report of the Indiana Institute for the Education of the Blind has just been issued and shows an enrollment for the past year of 131. After meeting all expenses the trustees turned back into the state treasury the sum of $1,684.53.

During the past year a large addition was completed and furnished, and a larger number of pupils can now be accommodated. The institute is a school where the blind are given a thorough training in the common school course of studies, including music, and are taught useful trades. Heretofore, the pupils have been limited to the ages from 9 to 21 years, but they are now received at 6 years of age, [illegible] good character, desirous of learning a trade or otherwise improving their condition, will be admitted who are over 21 years of age, at the discretion of the management.

Many of the pupils trained in the institute have made creditable records in the ministry, literature, commerce, and the several manual trades which they have mastered. The female pupils learn general housework, sewing, knitting, bead and fancy work, while the males learn to make brooms, hammocks, mattresses, cane chairs and tune pianos and organs. Their physical development is promoted by a course of gymnastics. There is no charge for board or tuition in the institute. Information regarding eligible blind people will be thankfully received by the superintendent who will promptly answer all communications. Address Prof. E. E. Griffith, Institute for the Blind, Indianapolis, Ind.

Who is He?

We have received a marked copy of the Salina (Kan.) Journal, which has this pointed item in reference to the Anti Harrison sentiment in this state:

"We do not believe there is any real opposition to President Harrison in Indiana, except from disappointed office seekers, and a few of their friends. In one instance that came under our personal observation an Indiana newspaper, a few months ago was violently opposed to Harrison, has now only the kindest regard for the president, and favors his renomination. The change in the paper was wrought by the editor's daughter receiving an appointment as clerk in the pension office at Indianapolis.

Court.

A good deal of miscellaneous work is being done, and the judge had given the school fund a big lift in fines for violations of various kinds. Samuel Haines, the colored brother, got a jail sentence for larceny. Blair, the dentist, settled his cases. The two boys, Timmerman and Ingersoll were up yesterday for burning Ab. Kelley's barn at Waterloo.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to thank our neighbors and all the other kind friends for the kind care and consideration they showed us during the last sickness of the husband and father, and sympathy in our hours of bereavement. The people of the M. E church, Norris Chapel, were so kind and neighborly, as to give us the use of their church, while Rev. J. J. Fred, the pastor, also showed his friendly, Christian spirit by assisting in the last sad rites, and the choir for their help, these will these will ever be gratefully remembered.

MRS SUSANNAH EAKRIGHT AND CHILDREN.

Obituary.

Mrs. John Cool, died at her residence south of Auburn, Jan. 7, 1892, at the age of 61 years, 9 months and 2 days.

Sarah A. Wilson was born in Sussex county, New Jersey, April 5, 1830. She was united in marriage to John Cool, Oct. 8, 1851, and they moved to DeKalb county, [illegible] where they have since made their home and reared a large family. In 1875 she had a stroke of paralysis from which she never recovered, remaining without the use of her left arm. She was a kind neighbor and true christian, a faithful wife and affectionate mother. She leaves a husband and eight children to mourn her early departure. The funeral was at the residence Jan. 10, in the forenoon conducted by Rev. W L. Moese, and she was laid to rest in Evergreen cemetery, in Auburn.

Another Pioneer Departed.

Peter Noragon, after an illness of nearly a year, died at his home in Butler Jan. 6, 1892, at the age of 71 years, 5 months and 17 days.

He was born in Union Co. Pa., July 17, 1820, and when at about the age of 12, he removed with his parents to Stark Co. Ohio. When about twenty years old, he came to DeKalb county, and settled in Franklin township, where he went to work on a farm. He afterwards returned to Ohio for a short time, and on coming back here, he bought the east forty acres of the farm near Franklin Center, that has since remained his property, and that for thirty nine years was his home. He was married Dec. 19, 1846 to Sarah Emmons, who survives him. To this union were born, four children, one son, and three daughters. The son, J. M. was killed by the cars Sept. 30, 1886; Delta, the youngest daughter, died Aug. 7, 1877, the second daughter, Annie, died Dec 4, 1887, leaving but the one daughter, Jennie, now Mrs. R. H. March, and the bereaved widow to survive him. Dec. 19, 1885, he moved from the farm to his late residence, in Butler; to be near their remaining child and her husband, Mr. March, to whose love they must now look for [illegible] demanded. Here in a comfortable home [illegible] the same lot, they resided since that [illegible] there Mr. March has shown for [illegible] constant care of a faithful son [illegible] them [illegible] to love [illegible] from the residence [illegible] were brief, owing [illegible] family. Rev. Mr. [illegible] to sickness in [illegible] at Butler, Stone, of the M. E. [illegible] followed by a [illegible] spoke a few earnest words [illegible] the final brief but eloquent prayer [illegible] the last journey was taken. A [illegible] sympathizing friends accompanied [illegible] day to their final resting place [illegible] was severely cold, and [illegible] rest in the cemetery at [illegible] Noragon was a man who was [illegible] honest and had a high regard for [illegible] and moral principles. He early became identified with the cause of temperance, in which he was an active worker. In educational matters, he was with the foremost, and contributed liberally of his then small means for the first school house and first church in his neighborhood. When his family came to be educated, he spared neither pains nor expense to secure for them what he knew was the best and most honorable inheritance, a good education. His years were years of industry, and his example is worthy of imitation. He was [illegible] things hospitable. The wayfarer, if worthy, was never turned from his door, no matter how poor. He was one of the sturdy citizens whose strong virtues adorn the early history of our country, but whose numbers are yearly lessening. Let him rest where loving hands have placed him, and friends wept over his grave.

Obituary.

Abraham Eakright was born in Wayne county, Ohio, December 30, 1827. His father, Samuel Eakright, was a native of England and came to America in 1811 and soon after enlisted in the service of of the United States in the war of 1812, and later, settled in Ohio, and then married Mary Maxwell. Abraham Eakright came with his parents to Wilmington township, DeKalb county, in 1836, where he remained until his death. Their trading place was Wayne or Lima, Ohio, reaching the former place by pirogue on the St. Joe River. He was married June 19, 1851, to Susannah Miller, a native of Cumberland county, Penn., she being a daughter of Joel and Sarah (Eichelberger) Miller. To them were born five children—John J. Sarah A., Edward W. Mary A., Ellsworth A. All of whom survive him. Mr. Eakright's was an unbroken family for over forty years. He united with the church of the United Brethren in Christ in 1853 of, which he was a faithful member until his death, which occurred Dec. 31, 1891, being 64 years and 1 day old. The funeral services were at Norris Chapel, Jan 2, 1892. The sermon was preached by Rev. Wm. Clay, presiding elder of this conference, assisted by Rev. J. J. Fred and Rev. Mr. Robinet. The text was Psalms, 37 37; Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright: for the end of that man is peace. The interment was at the Gunder cemetery at Mt. Pleasant, a large number of sorrowing friends and neighbors following him to his last resting place. Mr. Eakright thus closed a long residence and useful life, having in these many years of continuous residence secured the respect and esteem of all. His death marks the departure of another pioneer, and leaves a gap in the ranks of that band that changed our country from a wilderness to a land of prosperous people and happy homes.

Well it can not afford to do otherwise."

A vexatious error occured in the COURIER last week in our report of the numbers guessed at in Yesbera's jewelry enterprise. The guess credited to Mrs Barns, should have been 3,180 not 2,180 as we had it. We have no excuse to make for that figure 2. We can only account for it, by suggesting its name was "Eli" and it simply "got there."

It Is Lovely.

So everyone said as the crowd entered the great Harter store on the day of the grand opening last Saturday. Lovely! And so it was, and all so convenient and so systematic, besides. Harter and his people, had arranged everything in tasty style, and had decorated the walls, where there was any space for such work, until the great room looked like a grand exhibit at a fair. Though the day was one of severe and forbidding weather, there was a good attendance, and everyone went away pleased and surprised. At the right, as one enters the south door, is seen the neatly arranged department of furnishing goods, all of the choicest and latest. At the left is the department of "domestics," including all the common goods, such as prints, and the like, a department always full, and always in demand. On beyond this, and in the south west part of this, the main room, is the "bazar department," the small wares and 5 and 10 cent counters, etc., etc. Along to the north, we find the fur department, and at the northwest corner, is the millinery department, a very important part of the business, and always kept up to the latest dates. Along the north side, as one goes toward the north entrance door, is seen the large display of dress goods of all kinds; and lastly, as we approach the door, we find the department devoted to the popular "Butterick Patterns." The great plate glass front is so arranged that it will be one vast show window, giving even the outside, a city air. In the main room, all the center is occupied by the notions department, which has its counters running entirely around the shelf area, with room between for the clerks to wait on those who patronize the varied stock of articles kept there. Back of this is the counting room, where Mr. Harter makes his headquarters, and where his book-keeper, Miss T. eters, may always be found. To this point converges the "cash carriers," a very convenient arrangement by which a clerk at any part of the room can send money to the desk and have the proper change returned at once, saving many steps and much delay. This too, gives the establishment a metropolitan air, besides being a great convenience. Going up the broad stairway on the south side, we reach the half story back and on this floor, is the cloak department, where these valuable goods are carefully hung in their various cases. Crossing to the north side and turning to the right, one reaches the full second story—the carpet department. Here, besides the heavy goods, will be kept stored, such duplicate goods, as it is found convenient to keep on hand. All this upper area is lighted by a big arc light in the evening, showing the goods as well as by sunlight. The entire store is lighted by electricity. To gain a good idea of this immense establishment, one must go and visit it, and it will be a pleasure to any one. There are several things to admire—the good taste of Mr. Harter and his people, the skill and ability of the contractor, Sam Buss, and the liberality of C. C. Shaffer, who owns it. All come in for a share of the praise, and should have the credit for giving Auburn an establishment, the like of which was not dreamed of a few years ago.

Stockholders' Meeting.

The next annual meeting of the stockholderers of the Auburn District Fair will be held in Gandy's Hall in the town of Auburn, DeKalb Co., Ind on the third Thursday of January 1892, at 10 o'clock a. m. the same being the 21st day, of said month, and according to article 4 of the constitution of said fair association, for the election of the following officers for the ensuing year: One president, one vice-president, one secretary, one treasurer, and a board of twenty directors; also for the transaction of such other business as may come before the meeting.

A Remedy for the Grip Cough.

A remedy recommended for patients afflicted with the grippe is Kemp's Balsam, which is especially adapted to diseases of the throat and lungs. Do not wait for the first symptoms of the disease, but get a bottle and keep it on hand for use the moment it is needed. If neglected the grippy has the tendency to bring on pneumonia. All druggists sell the Balsam.

McELREE'S WINE OF CARDUI for Weak Nerves.

Too Handy with his Knife.

Two rather common looking toughs struck town Tuesday, and proceeded at once to get acquainted with a lot of bug juice, on the strength of which they finally made the acquaintance of Marshal Joe Pfefferl. One of them, who claimed he had been in the confederate service, picked a quarrel with Ben. Conner, the well driver, and in the racket tried to stab him with a pocket knife, cutting him on the head and in several places. The marshal then came and arrested him. He fought hard, got out his knife to stab the marshal, and his partner also took a hand. But Joe Pfefferl has the sand, and hung on and with the help of a few law-abiding citizens, landed them in the calaboose. They went without their supper, and next morning were not so full as they had been. Letters found on him show his name to be Robert Pike, though he says it is Connell and that he is a temperance lecturer. (He gave a good one here.) His partner's name is Conde. The next morning Justice Walborn fined him $1 and costs, and he had to board with sheriff Plum awhile. He claimed that Conner attacked him, and so plead self-defense to that part. His partner went free, as nothing particular was against him.

Mustered In.

The Auburn military company, was mustered into the service of the state Tuesday evening, at Ensley's Hall by Major J. K. Gore of Elkhart. The company numbered 48, 46 being necessary before they could be sworn in. Election of officers followed. Lin Kuhlman was made captain by a unanimous vote. For first lieutenant C. F. DuWan received 27 votes and Chas. M. Kemp 19, and DuWan was declared elected. For second lieutenant, the first ballot stood. Edward Kelley, 17; Chas. Kemp, 23, and 3 scattering. The next vote showed Kemp, 30, and Kelley, 17, Kemp being elected. For first sergeant, Frank Lahuum received 27 votes; J. N. Grover, 7; Herman Lobmiller, 12. So it will be seen the company starts out in good shape.

A Unique Magazine.

A unique experiment will be tried in the February issue of the Ladies' Home Journal. The entire number has been contributed in prose, fiction and verse by the daughters of famous parentage, as a proof that genius is often hereditary. The work of thirty of these "daughters" will be represented. These will comprise the daughters of Thackeray, Hawthorne, Dickens, James Fenimore Cooper, Horace Greely, Mr. Gladstone, President Harrison, William Dean Howells, Senator Ingalls, Dean Bradley of Westminister, Julia Ward Howe, General Sherman, Jefferson Davis and nearly a score of others. Each article, poem or story printed in this number has been especially written for it, and the whole promises to be a successful result of an idea never before attempted in a magazine.

A Rat! A Rat!

That's what Hamlet said, as he jammed his big sword through the curtains, and killed his best girls father, old Polonius. J. A. Clifton could have beaten Shakspeare with that very same yell on Monday morning. He was in his meat market, when suddenly a rat jumped out from the stove in the office room, and with its fur all afire ran across the room and escaped at the door. No wonder they yelled, "a rat! a rat!" for such a sight is not often seen, even in as lively and ingenious a town as Auburn. It is supposed his ratship got into the stove while the room was unoccupied over Sunday, and when they went to build a fire Monday morning retreated to the farther end of the stove, and staid there till the increasing fire forced him out. Then he would have to plunge through the fire to reach the stove door. We think one experience will be enough for him.

Good Looks.

Good looks are more than skin deep, depending upon a healthy condition of all the vital organs. If the liver be inactive, you have a bilious look, if your stomach be disordered you have a dyspeptic look and if your kidneys be affected you have a pinched look. Secure good health and you will have good looks. Electric Bitters is the great alterative and tonic acts directly on these vital organs. Cures pimples, blotches boils and gives a good complexion Sold at Robbins & McCords drugstore 50c. per bottle. 4

HISTORY OF THE WEEK.

PEOPLE, PLACES AND THINGS OF THE WORLD.

Race Riots in Florida—Only an Act of Kindness—A Fatal Collision—Luck of an Army Recruit—Sued by a Woman for Damages.

STARVING PEASANTS.

Count Tolstoi Writes About the Famine.

London special: Count Tolstoi writes regarding the famine in Russia, deprecating the accusations of apathy of the Russian Government toward famine sufferers and asserting that the officials are doing all in their power toward measures of relief. He says the difficulty is largely due to the existence of certain unfortunate conditions between the Government and starving peasants and to a friction between the former and the provincial assemblies. "While both are wrangling," he writes, "the peasants are starving." Count Tolstoi gives many heartrending and pathetic details of the actual condition of affairs in the famine districts. The unfortunate peasants eat bread so bad that it acts like an emetic, and their condition is rendered still worse by the vile beverages they drink. In certain districts, he says, from 30 to 60 per cent. of the people will be absolutely destitute in a week or two. The Count admits the great prevalence of drunkenness among the peasants and the unlawful diversion of supplies sent for their relief.

A RACE RIOT.

Fatal Encounter Between the Blacks and Whites at Mecanopy, Florida.

A race riot occurred at Mecanopy, Fla., in which W. Jefferson Chitty, a highly respected white citizen was killed. This murder was followed by the killing of a negro named John Jones, and by the lynching of Chitty's murderer, Henry Hanson, a negro desperado. About 300 people were gathered in the public square one night recently watching the performance of a tight rope walker and trapeze man. The whites were on one side of the street and the negroes on the other. Hanson persisted in mingling with the white people and talked loudly and profanely in the presence of ladies. Chitty ordered him to stop when he drew a pistol and shot Chitty dead. Confusion and a free fight followed in which twenty-five shots were exchanged and during which John Jones, a negro, was killed. Hanson escaped, but a posse pursued and captured him and kept him in jail for an hour and then took him out and hung him to a tree in the public square.

An Act of Kindness.

Valparaiso special: A great deal of talk is heard about the action of United States Minister Egan, escorting three Balmaceda refugees, Juan and William McKenna, and Jose Carrera, from the American Legation, at Santiago to Valparaiso, and placing them aboard the United States cruiser Yorktown. But the knowledge that he did so was with the tacit approval of the new administration, has disarmed severe criticisms. The press gives considerable space to the subject, but discusses it with a calm spirit, and, while not commending Minister Egan for his action, asserts that the United States Government must assume the responsibility if its minister loses the respect of the public" for his action, as an escort to such characters degrades him to the ranks of a policeman.

A Strange Phenomenon.

The thermometer has been ranging from twenty to thirty degrees below zero at Cascade Springs, S. D. The dense cold revealed the fact that huge volumes of steam were issuing from holes in the mountain side 300 feet above the town. Parties who have just returned from there say that the mountain side is honey-combed with holes made by the steam. It is thought the mountain contains a subterranean lake of hot water, and a shaft will probably be driven to test the matter.

A Fatal Collision.

A collision between two Lehigh freight trains occurred in the yard at Castile, N. Y. A flagman named McCarthy of Buffalo, and a brakeman named Woodruff, who was making his first trip, were in the caboose and were instantly killed. Ten cars were wrecked, five of which, loaded with oil, caught fire and were entirely consumed, burning the bodies of the dead men. The engineer and fireman escaped uninjured.

Sued by a Woman for Damages.

Mrs. Viola Wager, of Goshen, Ind., has brought suit against Daniel Hatch, her neighbor, for $5,000 damages sustained at his hands. Some time ago Mr. Hatch had occasion to go to Mrs. Wager's house on an errand when she chased him out with a broomstick. He grabbed her, pushed her into the smoke house and locked her in. She says that she sustained severe internal injuries from which she will never recover.

Luck of an Army Recruit.

Augustus Dippell, a trumpeter in the Fifth United States Cavalry, stationed at Fort Reno, O. T., has received word that he is the heir to $55,000 left by a German uncle. Dippell enlisted in Chicago a year ago. His home is in Joliet, where his relatives reside. As soon as the young man can secure his discharge he will go to Germany for his fortune.

Indianapolis Favorably Considered.

The Democratic members of Congress from Indiana believe Indianapolis will secure the Democratic National Nominating Convention of their party this year. It is understood that Gorman, Brice, Hill and other prominent leaders consider the Hoosier capital favorable if the convention is to go West.

How Sherman Won the Day.

Both houses of the Ohio Legislature voted separately for United States Senator Wednesday. In the Senate John Sherman received eighteen votes and James E. Neal eight. In the House Sherman received sixty-nine votes and Neal thirty.

Judge Woods Not Yet Confirmed.

Senator Voorhees has secured a postponement of action in the matter of the confirmation of Judge Woods.

Double Tragedy.

Charles S. Quackenbush, a wealthy resident of Albany, N. Y., shot his wife in the head and then killed himself. He had attempted to kill his wife several times, and about a month ago was only restrained from carrying out his purpose by a policeman. Three weeks ago he tried to shoot her again. He returned from Montreal, Canada, and went to the house where his wife was living. He went to the kitchen from the hall and saw his wife, Annie, in the next room preparing their three little girls, ranging from two to five years, for bed. Some hot words were exchanged and Quackenbush pulled a revolver from his pocket and shot his wife in the back of the head near the ear. She had turned to run from him. He then went into the kitchen and shot twice more at her. He then placed the revolver at the roof of his mouth and fired, the bullet going through his brain and lodging in the ceiling.

A BROKEN RAIL.

Hurls a Fast Train Into a Ditch.

A special from Crawfordsville, Ind., says: The fast passenger train between Louisville and Chicago on the Monon route, consisting of a mail car, an express car, three coaches and a chair car, was wrecked two miles north of here at Nicholson's crossing. The train was rounding a sharp curve when the outer rail broke and precipitated the cars down an embankment twenty feet deep. The stove in the first coach was overturned and the car was soon destroyed, but the passengers escaped. The next coach was torn to pieces. It was filled with people, not one of whom escaped injury. The parlor car toppled over on top of the coaches.

Two persons were killed outright. Madam Ivan Rokey, danseuse of the Cincinnati Burlesque Company, and Ben Hamburg, drummer for Liebmann & Schloss, Cincinnati.

Forty were injured, some of whom will die.

That no others were killed outright seems marvelous, as the wreck was most complete. A large force of men was engaged in putting up ice a short distance from where the wreck occurred, and they rendered good assistance in putting out the fire and saving life.

C. N. Cheek, of Greencastle, had a leg pulled off and was pinned beneath a pair of trucks and it seemed, despite the efforts of the rescuers, that they could not rescue him before the fire, which was fast approaching, reached him. He never lost his nerve, though suffering intensely and ordered the Relief Corps to cut both his legs off, if that was the only way they could release him. A block was finally procured from the engine and the unfortunate man was released just in the nick of time. He was removed to the city, but cannot survive.

In its leap the ladies' coach encountered a stump which penetrated the side of the car, and possibly caused the death of Madame Van Rokey and of Ben Hamburg, the Cincinnati drummer. The woman was found by the side of the stump, her head crushed out of all semblance to humanity. Ben Hamburg was found lying on the stump, mangled almost beyond recognition.

The scene of the wreck is less than one mile from the place of the terrible freight collision of a month ago.

ROTTEN AUTHORITIES.

Compel Edward W. Campbell to Swear Away the Life of Sidney Bell.

Chicago special: Edward W. Campbell, who was the principal witness against Sidney Bell, who was convicted in San Francisco last summer of the murder of Sam Jacobson, a somewhat noted "man about town," and sentenced to death, has made a full confession, which was communicated exclusively to the United Press, to the effect that he was forced to testify falsely by the police authorities and that the real murderer was one Henry Swartz, whom he said escaped from the house a moment after the shot was fired. The confession, which covers nearly twenty pages of typewritten manuscript, goes into full details of the alleged conspiracy against Bell and says that another witness named Schmidt, who was under indictment for burglary and committed suicide shortly after testifying against Bell, did so because the police had failed to release him as the agreed price for his capture. According to Campbell's statement, Jacobson was shot. This was the opinion largely entertained in San Francisco at the time of the tragedy. Bell is a native of Columbus, Ohio, and served several years in the United States Navy, being discharged with a high record.

One of the Mansfield Robbers Caught.

A cigarmaker, giving the name of C. C. Seyles, was arrested at Port Huron, Mich., charged with complicity in a robbery committed at Mansfield, Ohio, on December 18. Three men broke into the residence of Phoebe Wise, a maiden lady of that city and held lighted tapers to her feet, burning them terribly, until she was forced to tell them where her money was concealed. They secured $350 in money and a gold watch, rings and other jewelry. Two of the robbers were promptly arrested and the officers traced Seyles, whose right name is Henry Zrogel, from Mansfield to Port Huron. He says he will waive extradition formalities and accompany the officer to Ohio.

Nine Cities Want the Democratic Convention.

William Dixon, the member of the National Democratic Committee who has been given charge for the arrangements of the meeting of the committee in Washington on the 21st, says that nine cites have formally decided to compete for the honor of entertaining the Democratic Convention. The cities are Milwaukee, Kansas City, Indianapolis, St. Paul, Detroit, New York, Buffalo, San Francisco, and Cincinnati. Although the National Committee will be located at the Arlington, the visiting delegates will probably be divided among the other hotels.

Troubled Guatemala.

City of Mexico special: There are well-founded rumors here that there are revolutions in progress in Guatemala, as no dispatches have been received here from any part of the country since the Presidential elections of Jan. 1. The Governor of Chiapas, a border State, telegraphs that he is without any information from that country, but has sent dispatches to Tapachula and other parts for information regarding the actual state of affairs, and will, on receiving replies, send them to this city.

War on Sunday Papers.

The Law and Order Society of Pittsburgh, Pa., has at last begun its long promised campaign against the Sunday newspapers. Detectives have been at work for the past four Sundays gathering testimony, and thirty-five informations have been made against dealers in Sunday newspapers. It is not known whether the society intends to proceed against proprietors, editors, reporters, printers and others employed on Sunda papers. Action will be brought under the old blue law of 1794 and its amendments. The fine in each case can not exceed $25.

Mad Elephant on the Rampage.

At Wallace & Co.'s winter quarters, near Peru, Ind., Diamond, the mammoth elephant, broke his chains in a fit of fury and before he could be subdued he killed the elephant dog, Mack, and the elephant horse, Davy. Both of these animals had been with him for the past five years. The building was badly wrecked. It was only by the free use of iron spears and clubs that the other elephants were saved, and the wild animal rechained. The horse was carried on his tusks for ten minutes, and the scene, with roar and cries combined was indescribable.

Husband or Money.

Millie Price, the skirt dancer who formerly traveled with the "Natural Gas" company, is in Denver to create another sensation. A little over a year ago when there with that company she caused a furore by marrying Clarence Dow, son of a millionaire banker of that city. The son was disowned and then reinstated in parental affection on the condition that he deserted his wife. This he did. Miss Price is now in Denver. She will probably begin proceedings in a few days and some sensational testimony is looked for.

A $100,000 Fire.

Fire broke out in the McClellan Opera House at Georgetown, Col., and the entire building was soon in flames. The Opera House is a frame affair and burned rapidly. The flames soon spread to Mrs. Johnson's millinery store which was totally destroyed and from there to the Hotel DeParis which was also burned to the ground. Several other frame buildings on Sixth avenue and Cass street were destroyed. The complete loss will amount to over $100,000. The fire was started by Mr. McClellan who was thawing out frozen water pipes.

Fire in a Mine.

Wilkesbarre (Pa.) special: Work at the Hartford mine has been shut down because of the fear for the safety of the miners, it having been discovered by a mine boss that a section of the mine in the lower lift, where twenty-four men were killed two years ago, is a mass of fire for a distance of a hundred feet. The fire is in a section which has not been worked since the accident referred to above. An attempt will be made to quench the fire through the old shaft where the bodies of the dead men were brought out.

All the Bodies Recovered.

McAllister (I. T.) special: The complete list of those killed in the Krebs disaster contains sixty-five names. Scores of families are left wholly destitute with no one upon whom to depend for support. Physicians and nurses are taxed to their utmost in the care of the injured. The mining company officials claim to have accounted for every man employed in the shaft at the time of the explosion and say there certainly are no more victims beneath the ground.

Foreign Voters.

The joint resolution providing for an amendment to the Constitution which prohibits all persons of foreign birth, not citizens of the United States, from voting for any office, either State or National, will be vigorously pressed by Senator Chandler, its projector. The purpose of the amendment is to take the authority to issue naturalization papers out of the hands of the State courts and place it under the immediate control of the Federal Government.

To Connect Lake Erie and the Ohio.

Representative Gillespie wants the Secretary of War to cause a survey to be made for a ship canal connecting the waters of Lake Erie and the Ohio River from a point near Conneaut harbor to a point near Pittsburgh. A bill introduced by him appropriates $10,000 for the examination and the survey, and the Secretary of War is directed to report whether such a canal is feasible, and to give an estimate as to the possible cost.

Cheating Uncle Sam.

Jackson Brewery, San Francisco, was seized by Internal Revenue Collector Quinn for brewing 21,000 barrels of beer more than the internal revenue books show. The tax on a barrel of beer containing about thirty gallons is $1, so the brewery has defrauded the Government of $21,000. The Government will not only get $21,000, but a confiscation of the brewery plant will follow. This is estimated to be worth $500,000.

New Silver Coin in Demand.

The demand for the new silver coin is so great that orders have been sent to the Philadelphia mint to put all the available force to work. Director Leech says if the coin can be made more than $1,000,000 of it will be placed in circulation this month. It is the intention to supply all national bank depositories with the new coin as fast as he can secure it from the mint.

The Boiler Let Go.

A terrible boiler explosion occurred at Rankin Station, Pa., in the mill of the Braddock Wire Company. Almost immediately after the explosion a bright light sprang up from the mill and it was learned that several natural gas pipes had been broken, and the gas becoming ignited had set fire to the mill. J. Zimmerman, the fireman, was killed and several others severely injured.

The New Coins.

Five thousand dollars in silver coin of the new design have been forwarded from the Philadelphia mint to the Treasurer at Washington and to the sub-Treasurers at New York and Chicago.

Four Men Killed.

Four men were killed and three others probably fatally injured by a boiler explosion in the Warren Springer Building, 195 and 207 Canal street, Chicago.

Censured By the Pope.

The Matin asserts that the Pope has written to the Archbishop of Paris censuring the French bishops for their attitude toward the Government.

A Beggar's Fortune.

Christian Beyerlein, an East St. Louis baker, is on his way to New York to claim a $100,000 fortune left him by Jim Everett, a professional beggar.

Deadly Exlosion.

The boiler in a pork packing factory at Bridgeport, Pa., exploded, and three people are reported killed and several others injured.

OHIO'S NEW GOVERNOR.

MAJOR M'KINLEY TAKES THE GUBERNATORIAL OATH.

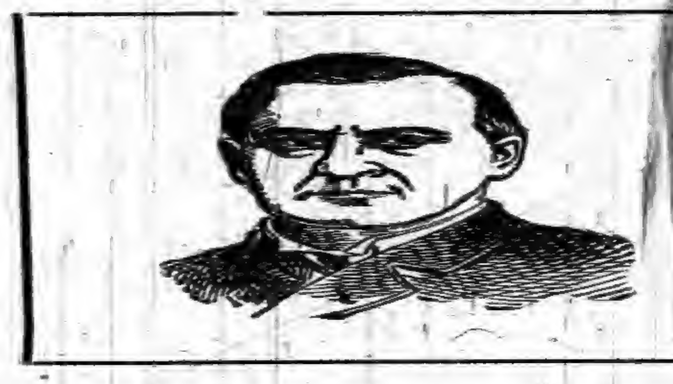
And Assumes Charge of State Affairs—His Reference to the World's Fair in His Inaugural Speech—His Views on Congressional Redistricting.

A Great Day for Ohio.

A special from Columbus, Ohio, says: William McKinley was inaugurated Governor of Ohio, Monday. His name is now linked in the annals of this proud old commonwealth as the successor of a long line of illustrious men in the gubernatorial chair, one of whom became President and another Chief Justice of the Supreme Court.

Lieutenant Governor A. L. Harris, Attorney General D. K. Watson, State Treasurer W. T. Cope, State Auditor E. W. Poe, Commissioner of Public Works C. E. Groce, and Food Commissioner W. J. McKean were subsequently sworn in to their respective offices in the capital.

Notwithstanding the severity of the winter weather, the city was crowded with people from all parts of Ohio and large delegations from neighboring States. Not since the National Grand Army Encampment of 1888 has Columbus been the theater of such crowds and such enthusiastic demonstrations.



The inaugural ceremonies proper were held in the rotunda of the State Capitol. The General Assembly met at 10:30 and almost immediately proceeded to the rotunda accompanied by the Supreme Judges and State officers-elect, except Maj. McKinley. At 11 o'clock Gov. Campbell and Gov.-Elect McKinley were escorted by a joint committee of the House and Senate from the Chittenden Hotel to the State Capitol. Rev. Dr. H. W. Bennett of the Wesley Chapel Methodist Episcopal Church, offered prayer, after which Chief Justice Marshall J. Williams of the State Supreme Court, administered the oath of office. Gov. McKinley then delivered his inaugural address.

After reviewing the progress of Ohio Gov. McKinley spoke as follows regarding the World's Fair:

The Congress of the United States deemed it fitting that the discovery of America should be commemorated by an international exhibition of the evidences of the progress made in civilization. It is intended to disclose what has been accomplished in industrial art and applied science in every department of human activity. The Government itself will make an exhibit, illustrating in a scientific way the resources of the nation. Fifty-one nations and fifty States and Territories of the Union have accepted invitations to participate.

Ohio was largely instrumental in securing the location of the Exposition at the inland metropolis of the Republic, near the center of its agricultural and commercial interests. The citizens of Chicago and the State of Illinois have performed their part in providing a most desirable site, embracing 1,000 acres of land, with a floor space double that of any previous exposition, and more than $11,000,000.

Not only should the Legislature of Ohio see to it that ample provision be made to have a creditable exhibit from this State, but the people and their representatives should also urge upon Congress to take such action as will make this exposition worthy of the great event it celebrates and worthy also the dignity and honor of the nation.

The Governor approves the new ballot law as a step in the right direction, but recommends that it be amended by adding a number of the ideas of the original Australian system, including that making the voter mark the name of each candidate whom he favors for election. On the subject of Congressional redistricting the Governor said:

"You will be required under the new census to redistrict the State for Representatives in Congress. This will afford you an apportunity to arrange the districts with fairness to all. Make the districts so fair in their relation to the political divisions of our people that they will stand until the new census shall be taken. Make them so impartial that no future Legislature will dare disturb them until a new census and a new Congressional apportionment will make a change imperative. Extreme partisanship in their arrangement should be avoided. There is a sense of fair play among the people which is prompt to condemn a flagrant misuse of party advantage at the expense of popular suffrage. Partisanship is not to be discouraged, but encouraged in all things where principle is at stake; but a partisanship which would take from the people their just representation, as in the case of the Congressional redistricting by the last Legislature is an abuse of power which the people are swift to rebuke. Free suffrage is of little service to the citizen if its force can be defeated by legislative machinations in the form of a 'gerrymander.' The districts should be made so as to give the party majority in the State a majority of representatives and so arranged that if the party majority shall change the representative majority shall also change."

After the address the whole inaugural party repaired to the reviewing stand in the State House yard immediately north of the Capitol and facing Broad street.

A gun fired at the conclusion of the inaugural address was the signal for the parade of military and civic organizations, which had been forming, to move. The parade was probably the most imposing ever seen here on such an occasion, and was under command of Gen. H. A. Axline. The following was the order and membership of the parade:

FIRST DIVISION.

THIRD DIVISION.

Ohio National Guard, 2,500 strong, under command of Col. C. B. Hunt, of the First Regiment.

One of the features of the parade was the Young Ladies' Club of Toledo, 100 strong, which appeared in a unique costume. They are excellently drilled, and was chaperoned by Col. J. C. Connors of the Governor's staff, and K. Cochran of Toledo.

After the parade had occurred the Senators and Lieutenant Governor Harris returned to the Senate chamber where the Lieutenant Governor took the oath of office and the other officers went to their respective offices in the State capital, where they were sworn in by different members of the Supreme Court.

True Pathos.

Four long years had Jack the sailor been away, and his ship was reported "lost, with all on board." The news seemed to pile years on his father's bent shoulders; his mother's smile faded out, and wrinkles seamed her cheeks. One summer day, however, as the two came slowly out of church with their pretty daughters—all three scarcely balancing the lost of the one dear son—a shabby, bronzed and handsome fellow rushed up to the group, and took his mother in his arms.

"It's my boy! my own boy!" cried she, throwing her arms about him and smothering him with kisses, while the father managed to get possession of one brown, sinewy hand.

"Come, mother, give us a chance!" cried the girls in chorus, and by this time the whole congregation had surrounded the wanderer, and claimed his greeting.

"But you were drowned, Jack!" exclaimed the youngest sister, and Jack laughed as he explained:

"No, only partly. Two of us floated for days, reached an island in the Pacific, fell in with friendly savages, and then—waited for a ship. Got my belt full of money, father, but could not wait a minute to buy a rag of decent clothes."

Then the minister said solemnly, "Let us pray," and there under the trees, with uncovered heads, he offered thanks for the wanderer's return. When he had finished every one was softly weeping, and not a soul dreamed that the tragic joy of the occasion could be turned into mirth. Suddenly Jack's mother, wrought up beyond endurance, opened her lips and spoke.

"Jack," said she, sharply, "ain't you ashamed to come to meetin' with such a ragged old handkerchief as that?"

Jack roared, and so did the neighbors. Tears were wiped away, and laughter reigned.

Expensive Collection.

An Augusta, Me., man bought a machine from a Boston firm, and soon had occasion to send for a small spring to replace one that became broken. The spring came along, followed by a bill—2 cents for the spring, 2 cents for the postage—a total of 4 cents. It cost the firm 2 cents postage to send the bill, the Augusta man paid 2 cents more in sending the money, and then the Boston concern expended another 2 cents in sending a receipted bill, so that, all told, it cost 6 cents to collect 2.

ROYAL RANGER RALPH;

—:OR:—

The Waif of the Western Prairies.

BY WELDON J. COBB.

CHAPTER XVII—Continued.

Darrel and his companion disappeared through the aperture in the wall. The two guards, recognizing the scout as an enemy, began firing at him.

The latter sprang behind the bowlder that had blocked the exit from the cave, and which Darrel Gray had forced aside in entering the place. It afforded a strong intrenchment for him, and he had his enemies at a decided disadvantage.

A sharp fussilade ensued, during which one of the men, evidently wounded, retreated down the corridor with a savage howl of pain. His companion followed his example and beat a hasty retreat. Ranger Ralph could hear them calling for help to their companions in the main outer cave.

"They have sounded the alarm and will soon return with increased force," decided the old scout.

He watched at his post for some time, abandoning it only when a wild commotion arose in the corridor.

Armed men bearing torches came rushing in pursuit of the fugitives.

Among them the scout observed Despard and Danton. He glided through the aperture leading to the outside, and found himself in the same moonlit valley into which Darrel Grey had fallen a few hours previously.

Darrel and Inez were nowhere in sight, and the scout supposed that they had succeeded in making their escape. He therefore set about finding some way himself to leave the valley.

The apparently inaccessible walls of the place made the task seem almost a hopeless one, however. His investigations were forced to be desultory and brief, for in a few minutes the outlaws arrived on the scene.

The scout had just time to safely ensconce himself in a small thicket, when Despard and his men came into view.

Immediately the little inclosed valley was the scene of the wildest excitement. The men, with torches borne aloft, scoured every portion of the place.

A shout of triumph thrilled the scout, and a minute later he saw several of the bandits emerge from a smaller cave, where they had found Darrel and Inez.

In the glare of the lights Ranger Ralph could discern the pale, distressed face of Darrel and the despairing one of Inez. With exultant cries the bandits bore their prisoners to the spot where Despard was.

"Remove the girl to the cabin and guard her until morning," ordered the bandit leader. "As to him," and he indicated Darrel fiercely, "he has crossed our path once too often. He shall die."

"No, no!" pleaded Inez, frantically; but she was borne away with her appealing words unheeded.

Ranger Ralph could scarcely contain himself and he grasped his revolvers grimly. Despard, Danton and several of the men were standing near him, but he realized that it would be folly to attempt to fight against such uneven odds.

"There was another of them," he heard a voice say excitedly.

"Ha!" ejaculated Despard. "Who?"

His informant was one of the guards.

"A man dressed like a half-breed."

Despard started violently.

"He was friendly to the girl and the prisoner?" he asked.

"Yes."

"Then he was no half-breed at all. Danton, we have been deceived."

"By Tallula?"

"Exactly."

"You think he is no messenger from the Modocs?"

"That's it."

"Who is he, then?"

"A spy—a friend to the girl."

"Ranger Ralph, probably."

"Perhaps. Boys, search the valley thoroughly. He cannot have escaped," called Despard to the men.

The bandits at once began a systematic scour of the valley. From his covert the scout could see Despard and Danton and several of the men return to the cave.

The outlaw chief repaired at once to the log house on the cliff where the disguised scout had been led by Vance.

Inez, weeping, was seated in the room. Despard, a fierce glitter in his eyes, approached her at once.

"Girl," he said, "I have a few words to say to you."

Inez did not reply, but continued to sob bitterly.

"You are entirely in my power," resumed Despard, "and neither you nor your friends can defeat my plans. You must become my wife."

Despard's words aroused all the resentful womanliness in Inez's nature. She started wildly to her feet, her eyes flashing, her face pale and defiant.

"Never!" she cried.

Her firm reply did not appear to disturb her captor.

"There is no escape," he continued calmly.

"I will die first!"

"No; you will obey me. You will not only become my wife but you will also do as I tell you regarding the fortune your father has left you."

"Take that fortune, then. Release my friends and myself, and it is yours."

"No, my fair Inez," jeered Despard. "Your charms have fascinated me, and I shall wed you. As to the fortune, that is in the hands of a man named Walford. You will visit him with me to-morrow morning. You will tell him that I am your legally wedded husband, and induce him to turn over your fortune to me. Then you will accompany me to some distant country and become my wife."

Inez listened silently until Despard had concluded.

"And if I refuse?" she demanded.

Despard came a step nearer to her. There was a fierce glitter in his evil eye

"Shall I tell you?" he hissed.

"Yes."

"The man you love, Darrel Grey, shall die!"

With a cry of dread dismay Inez Tracey recoiled.

At that moment there was an interruption. One of the outlaws came rushing, excited and breathless, into the room.

"Captain!" he cried, "we have found the half-breed!"

"He is captured?"

"No. He is armed and in a position where we cannot dislodge him."

Despard started from the place.

"I give you an hour to decide your lover's fate," he cried, warningly, to Inez.

What the outlaw had reported was true. Ranger Ralph had been discovered. Driven to a place behind some rocks, however, he held the bandits at bay.

They were forced to retreat before his rapid fire. Still he knew that when reenforcements came he must necessarily be dislodged and captured.

With some dismay he saw Despard and others arrive on the scene. His situation was a critical one. Hopelessly he glanced up at the perpendicular walls before him.

Then he resolved to battle desperately when his foes made another attack. Just then he seemed to hear a voice on the cliff above him. At the same moment a lasso dropped nearly before his face.

"The lasso—seize it, quick!" spoke a low, silvery voice.

The mystified scout obeyed. Some strong hand lifted him foot by foot from the ground.

A series of savage yells escaped the bandits as they witnessed his ascent. A score of bullets flattened against the cliff.

Steadily the lasso was drawn in. The scout reached the top of the cliff uninjured by the shots of the discomfited bandits.

A small but sinewy hand drew him over the edge of the cliff and led him out of view of the outlaws in the valley below.

With profound curiosity Ranger Ralph surveyed his strang rescuer. A cry of amazement escaped his lips as he recognized her. It was White Fawn, the Modoc princess.

CHAPTER XVIII.

THE OLD HERMIT.

For some moments Ranger Ralph stood silently regarding the beautiful Indian maiden who had rescued him from a position of peril in so timely a manner.

"White Fawn!" he ejaculated in bewildered tones.

"Yes, it is the child of Shadow Snake. Who is the half-breed?"

She peered curiously into the scout's face as she spoke.

"I am no half-breed."

The Fawn thought so; at least she knew that he was an enemy of the outlaws.

"She knows you now. You are the great scout."

"Ranger Ralph, yes. But how came you here?"

"The Fawn will tell her friend and rescuer all; but they must not remain here."

"There is danger?"

"Yes; the renegades will soon be on our trail. Come."

She led the scout from the spot to a secluded portion of the valley. Ranger Ralph noticed that near by there was a horse bridled and saddled.

In rapid tones the Modoc princess related how she had rescued Darrel Grey and had led him hither.

She explained that when she left him to reconnoiter the stronghold of the bandits, he must have wandered into the valley and later had been captured.

The scout listened interestedly to her graphic recital, and noticed the fierce, revengeful light in her dark eyes when she spoke the name of her relentless foe, Dyke Despard,

"You have seen him—you penetrated to his haunts to-night?" he asked.

"Yes."

"And you know his plans?"

"I know that with the morning he intends visiting the old hermit they call Walford."

Ranger Ralph started

"You are sure of this?" he asked.

"Yes; White Fawn is not mistaken."

"Then the outlaws have located the recluse?"

"One of their men has, and he will lead the crowd there with the morning."

This information disturbed the scout not a little. The reader already knows that this man Walford was the friend to whom Inez Tracey's father had intrusted the charge of the fortune intended for his orphan daughter.

The old scout knew Walford, but he had not seen him for years.

He did not know his place of residence, however, except that it was located somewhere in the vicinity.

Now that Despard had discovered it, the scout readily saw that unless Walford was warned the former would succeed in his plans to secure the fortune.

"Do you know where Walford lives?" he asked anxiously of the indian girl.

"No. White Fawn only knows that it is about ten miles down the canyon."

The old scout reflected deeply. Inevitable disaster seemed imminent to all his plans for rescuing Inez Tracey.

The Modoc princess watched his face impressively. Finally she asked:

"What will my friend do?"

"I do not know. Grey and the girl are captives, and the cave is well guarded. We can do nothing to rescue them."

"White Fawn will!"

There was a determined look in the dusky face.

"How?"

"By going back to my father. Shame, disgrace at my misery, caused me to fear to return to my tribe. For the sake of the friends who saved her life, the Fawn will go to the Modocs. They shall know all, and a terrible vengeance shall be brought against the Crow and his renegades."

"You will go at once?"

"Yes. I stole a horse from the outlaws. I can reach my tribe in a few hours."

"You must make haste. Once Despard has seen the man named Walford, he will fly the country."

"Fear not. The Modoc warriors shall be on his trail with the earliest morning light."

"They will rescue my friends—they will not include them in their vengeance?"

"Fear not. The Fawn will plead with her father's braves for the safety of her friends."

White Fawn sprang to the saddle of the horse near by as she spoke. Ranger Ralph saw her disappear rapidly down the canyon. He knew that he must remain inactive, so far as the outlaws were concerned, until the morning.

He realized that it would be folly to again attempt to penetrate to their stronghold. The thought of Walford, however, caused him to determine to endeavor to find the recluse, if possible.

He made a wide detour of the cave and started down the canyon in the direction where he supposed the mountain home of the recluse to be.

It proved to be a profitless journey. All the long night through he wandered up and down the valley. Not a trace of human habitation could be find.

The morning light did not materially change the situation of affairs. He finally determined to keep a close watch for Despard, theorizing that the outlaw leader would set out on his journey that morning for Walford's place of abode.

He ensconced himself in a thicket at the side of the canyon, and watched and waited patiently. It was nearly noon when his vigilance was rewarded. Coming down the canyon, he saw finally a dozen or more persons.

As they neared him he made out Despard, Danton and Vance on horseback. On another steed was Inez Tracey, surrounded by several of the bandits on foot.

They had evidently left Darrel Grey a prisoner at the cave with the remainder of the band.

They passed so near to the scout that he could almost hear their conversation.

A look of utter despair pervaded the countenance of Inez Tracey. Apparently the threats of the heartless Despard had induced Inez to agree to his schemes. To save her lover's life she had consented to sacrifice her fortune.

The scout waited for some time after the cavalcade had passed by. Then, cautiously and stealthily, he took up their trail.

The bandits proceeded straight down the canyon, and Ranger Ralph followed them at a distance until they finally came to a halt. They seemed to have some difficulty and delay in locating the hermit's home, their evident point of visitation.

Suddenly the entire party disappeared from view in a break in the canyon. When the scout reached the spot he found a large opening in the rock. Into this cave-like aperture the bandits had evidently disappeared.

Ranger Ralph threaded a dark, low passageway, groped his way blindly around and then paused. Far above his head he could see a light glimmering dimly. A series of steps cut in the solid rock seemed to lead to the point where the light was.

The horses of the party had been left just outside the place.

The scout began to ascend the steps and at last arrived at the top. Beyond him was a large apartment filled with evidences of a long career as hunter and trapper, consisting of trophies of the hunt, the skins of various animals which were hung up about the place.

The apartment was a gloomy one, and was lighted by a lamp hung by a chain from the roof of the cave.

Standing beneath it was a man, white-haired and august in appearance. His clear, steady eyes were fixed upon Despard, who was slightly in advance of the party that accompanied him

At a glance the scout recognized the strange old hermit, Walford, whom he had not seen for many years. The latter was speaking as the scout reached the shadowed extreme of the cave.

"Who are you? What does this intrusion mean?" he demanded, sternly.

"We came from Miner's Gulch," was Despard's ready reply.

"To see me?"

"Yes."

"How did you find this place?"

"From description, Mr. Walford. You were the friend of a man named Tracey."

The hermit started.

"Yes," he said; "what of it?"

"I came in behalf of that man's daughter."

"Ha! Then you know——"

"All concerning the fortune he left. I have come to claim that fortune."

"You!"

"Yes."

"What claim——"

"As the affianced husband of Inez Tracey."

Walford glanced suspiciously at the intruder.

"Allowing that there is a fortune," he said, "I must have some further proof that you are to receive it."

"It shall be forthcoming when you want it," replied Despard, promptly. "Inez."

At his word his despairing captive stepped forward.

Child Life in Siam.

It is always interesting to learn how boys and girls in distant lands amuse themselves. In this account—taken from "Siam and Loas"—the most noticeable thing is that no mention is made of schools.

When the Siamese young folks get up in the morning, they do not go to the washstand to wash their faces, for the simple reason that Siamese houses can boast no such articles of furniture. So our little Siamese friend just runs down to the foot of the ladder—for the house is built on posts—to a large jar of water with a cocoanut-shell dipper.

There she washes her face by throwing the water over her hands and rubbing them over her face. She needs no towel, for the water is left to dry. She does not brush her teeth, for they are stained black by chewing the betel nut. Her hair does not require combing, either, for it is all shaved except a little tuft on the top of the head, and that is tied in a little knot, and not often combed.

After breakfast is over, the children go off and find some pleasant place to play. The girls play at keeping house, and make dishes of clay dried in the sun. Little images of clay washed with lime are their only dolls.

The boys in Siam are very fond of pitching coins, and spend much of their time in this game. They play leap-frog, and very often jump the rope. Now, that so many foreigners come to this country, they have learned to play marbles, too.

In the month of March, though, usually dry and hot winds are blowing. At this time, the Siamese, young and old, are much engaged in playing games with kites, which are fitted with whistles, and the air resounds with noice produced by the boys and shouts of the multitudes of people engaged in the sport.

As the streets in Siam are almost all rivers and canals, the Siamese boys and girls early learn to row, and paddle their little boats almost as soon as they learn to swim, which they do when they are only four or five years old.

A Clergyman's Advice.

The Rev. Dr. Thain Davidson, of Islington, England, in a sermon to young men, made the following remarks on life insurance: "If some of you will act upon the advice I am going to give you you will thank me for it some day. While you are to hope and prepare for a long life you are to contemplate the possibility of being suddenly called away, and you are to make provision, even in this world, against such a contingency. It is meanly selfish for a man, dying in the prime of life, and professing a Christian hope, to be perfectly happy while he knows that as he steps into heaven his wife and children will step into the workhouse. I say it is abominable. If you have the faintest prospect of leaving any dependent upon you, you have no business to spend on gratification all your weekly or your yearly salary. It is not yours to spend. The first few shillings or the first few pounds belong to them, and should go to pay the premium on a policy that at least will keep them from beggary. Excuse me from mentioning this, but I am really provoked to see men, through sheer thoughtlessness, laying up for their families trouble that might easily have been spared had they only assured their lives in some sound and respectable office. Now, next year is not the time to do it, if you can do it to-morrow; for you don't need me to tell you the sooner you take the step the lighter the burden will be."

Swearing vs. Praying.

Old Abner Kirby is one of the best known men in Milwaukee. He owns the Kirby House there, and is generally a good citizen and a prominent man. Mr. Kirby is at the head of a very fine family, who, one and all, with the exception of himself, are regular attendants at the church of Rev. Dr. Ashley. Profanity seems to be one of Mr. Kirby's strong points; he is noted all over the Cream City for his prolific swearing, and one day when he met the clergyman, that individual asked if he could not be induced to attend church with his family, saying: "It will do you good." "In what way?" asked Mr. Kirby; "I am not religiously inclined." "No, I suppose not," said the preacher, "but that doesn't cut any figure; come to church anyway; perhaps if you do you won't swear so much." "Well, now, Doctor," said the old gentleman, "I don't know that it hurts me to swear; you see, I swear a good deal and you pray a good deal, but we don't either of us mean anything by it."—Arkansaw Traveler.

The Most Astonishing Medical Discovery of the Last One Hundred Years.

The Great South American Nervine Tonic

Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stomach. No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incalculable value who is affected by disease of the stomach, because the experience and testimony of many go to prove that this is the ONE and ONLY ONE great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.

HARRIET E. HALL, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to the Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration, and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors, with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly."

MRS. ELLA A. BRATTON, of New Ross, Indiana, says: "I cannot express how much I owe to the Nervine Tonic. My system was completely shattered, appetite gone, was coughing and spitting up blood; am sure I was in the first stages of consumption, an inheritance handed down through several generations. I began taking the Nervine Tonic, and continued its use for about six months, and am entirely cured. It is the grandest remedy for nerves, stomach and lungs I have ever seen."

No remedy compares with SOUTH AMERICAN NERVINE as a cure for the Nerves. No remedy compares with South American Nervine as a wondrous cure for the Stomach. No remedy will at all compare with South American Nervine as a cure for all forms of failing health. It never fails to cure Indigestion and Dyspepsia. It never fails to cure Chorea or St. Vitus' Dance. Its powers to build up the whole system are wonderful in the extreme. It cures the old, the young, and the middle aged. It is a great friend to the aged and infirm. Do not neglect to use this precious boon; if you do, you may neglect the only remedy which will restore you to health. South American Nervine is perfectly safe, and very pleasant to the taste. Delicate ladies, do not fail to use this great cure, because it will put the bloom of freshness and beauty upon your lips and in your cheeks, and quickly drive away your disabilities and weaknesses.

Notice is therefore hereby given, that so much of the foregoing lands and town lots as may be necessary to discharge the taxes, interest and penalty, and charges due thereon [illegible] the owners thereof at the time of the sale, will be sold at public auction at the court house door, in the town of Auburn, in said county, on the second Monday in February, A. D., 1892, (the same being the 8th day of said month) unless such taxes, penalty, interest and charges are previously paid. Sale to commence at 10 o'clock a. m. on said day and continue until all have been offered for sale.

H. N. COFFINBERRY, Auditor.

Auburn, Ind., Jan. [illegible], 1892.

CORRESPONDENCE

WATERLOO.

E. Y. Williamson went over to Auburn Monday.

J. W. Baxter, of Auburn, was in town Tuesday morning.

J. W. Cunningham, of Reading, was in Waterloo Monday.

Dr. Harry Chamberlain went to Auburn Tuesday morning.

Mrs. Dell Locke who has been sick with the grip, is much better, and was out to the reception Friday evening.

The U. B. church held their quarterly meeting Saturday and Sunday. The quarterly meeting of both wings occur on the same date, as we understand, but not at the same place, of course.

Friday evening of last week Mrs. Dr. Carpenter, accompanied by her nephew Wesley Blackburn, went to Lester, Mich., to attend the funeral of his sister's husband, George M. Southworth, who died quite suddenly of heart disease.

Mrs. Frank Beidler recently returned from Michigan where she attended a reunion of the family at the home of one of her sisters. A brother whom they had thought had made his appearance, and was present. They had of course a happy time.

We are having genuine winter at present. For a few days the weather was intensely cold. To-day a little warmer but good healthy weather. It snows every day and night at intervals, and from the leaden hue of the sky, may continue on this line for some time.

The entertainment at the Presbyterian church Wednesday evening of last week was well attended, when the cold blustering and snowy weather is considered. Miss Mae Parker has a sweet voice and a pretty face, understands music and is probably fully equal to all her friends claim for her; but the style of dress she wore on that occasion, and the arrangement of her hair was not only unbecoming to her, but positively disfiguring. More than one felt, and have so expressed themselves, that but for this they would have enjoyed her singing much more. Miss Baker is a fine elocutionist and seems perfectly at home in each impersonation. Her repertoire, as advertised, is quite lengthy, with many fine pieces, far better than the most she delivered that evening. She seems to have a preference for those where a little child is the speaker. "The Brakeman at Church" was excellent. "Lily Servo se's Ride" was very fine, and more of the same or similar style would have pleased better.

Mrs. Josephine Willis gave a reception to the members of the Minerva Club Friday evening of last week; tea at 6 o'clock. One of the honorary members, Mrs. Morell, was also invited, also several other ladies who are members of the L. L. S. C. of this place, Mrs. Barns, of Auburn, and several other ladies from Butler. After all were assembled the tea was served, and a regular feast of good things in great variety. The ladies gathered around the small tables and resumed their chattering, yet did full justice to the dainties that were being served. Immediately after tea came a tray filled with cards on which was printed "Minerva, Waterloo, Indiana, Jan. 8, 1892," and on one corner an exceedingly wise looking owl was perched. After supper Lowell's beautiful poem on Abraham Lincoln, and the lines, "O, Why Should the Spirit of Mortal be Proud," a favorite of our lamented president was read, also facts, statistics, history anecdotes, related by different members of the class, of the early life of Lincoln, Mrs. Lincoln and the time of his presidency. F. W. Willis read an interesting extract of the early history of Lincoln, of his stepmother, between whom subsisted a strong affection. Miss Mattie Maxon gave a fine selection on the piano. After these exercises were over conversation was resumed until the lateness of the hour compelled a separation. Certainly no one who was present who did not enjoy the evening thoroughly. Mrs. Willis' children assisted her in entertaining the Club.

CONCORD.

The thermometer stood 11 degrees below zero on Sunday morning.

Miss Nora Harris is the guest of her grandmother, Mrs. Lotzenheizer, this week.

We are informed that last Thursday was the 63th anniversary of Grandma Wyatt's birthday.

Will Koch was down from Auburn Monday attending to some business affairs. He reports much sickness in town.

Uriah Johnson and his mother are seriously ill with la grippe. Nathan Johnson is also a victim of this terrible disease.

Miss Lily Jones returned Friday to her home near Bryan, O., after a two months visit with relatives and friends at this place.

The chime of sleigh bells are heard for the first time this winter, and although the roads are rather rough, all who can are enjoying the sleighing.

Mrs. Clara Clark and infant daughter, after spending a pleasant week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Howey, returned to her home in Garrett Friday.

Mrs. Matilda Milton was in St. Joe a part of last week visiting her son and daughter and also to receive medical treatment, as her health has been very poor.

Miss Sallie Lyman, Harry Buchtel and George Moore, of Auburn, Sundayed over with their respective parents at this place. They returned to Auburn Monday noon.

Isaac Hornberger was taken suddenly ill with heart disease one evening last week and for a few hours his life was despaired of. He rallied, however, and is slowly recovering.

Quite a number of people from this neighborhood attended Kirk Harris' trial which took place at Auburn Wednesday. Several persons were subpoenaed for witnesses while others were merely spectators of the proceedings.

A jolly play party was given the young people at the home of Orange Herrick on Saturday evening, it being the anniversary of Mrs. Herrick's, and also James Wyatt's, birthday. Del Draggoo and Jim Wyatt took the crowd over from here in their sleds. All report a good time.

Mrs. Uriah Johnson died at her home 3½ miles north-west of this place, Friday Jan. 8, 1892. The funeral sermon was preached at the residence on Saturday, and the remains were laid away to rest Sunday in the cemetery at Robison Chapel, near Fort Wayne, where other relatives are buried.

The Baker Wescott difficulty was satisfactorily settled between the parties most concerned, thereby saving the expense of a law suit. The dispute arose as to who was the rightful owner of a couple of skunk hides. Our knowledge of the settlement is limited. We only know that Bill Baker got the hides.

Old Mr. Greene Brown has been having very poor health this winter, and some of his neighbors, thinking to assist him, got up a wood chopping. There was a good turnout and good work done. About 30 cords were cut ready for the stove. This was a neighborly act, and worthy of praise, as it shows that the people around Concord are ready to lend a helping hand whenever there is need.

BUTLER.

The attendants at the M. E. church last Sabbath were nearly frozen out by the ten degrees below zero temperature of that day. A vigorous effort resulted in getting the edifice in good comfortable condition for the evening services.

A vigorous commencement was made to dig the trenches for the water works mains with a force of about forty men on the fourth of January, but the cold weather coming on compelled them to retire. A long winrow of earth makes the track of the ditch on west North street plainly visible beneath the snow. A considerable amount of pipe has been laid and covered up, and a longer stretch of open ditch yawns at the side of the street, ready to engulf the unwary traveller in the dark. If the weather moderates we will have water works by the first of April.

Another familiar form and face has gone from among us. Peter Noragon, well and favorably known on our streets for the past thirty years is no more. His death took place at his residence in Sacker's addition on the 6th. Mr. Noragon was in his 72d year, and leaves an aged wife and daughter, Mrs. Richard Murch, and several grand children to mourn the loss of a kind husband, an indulgent father and grandfather. His funeral took place from the M. E. church at Hamilton, Rev. Stone officiating. His remains were interred in that old and densely populated cemetery where sleep so many of the early settlers of this part of the county. Mr. Noragon suffered the loss of an arm about ten years ago and since that time has been in feeble health. He was a member of the M. E. church, a consistent christian and ready to answer to the call of death.

BUTLER.
(No. 2.)

Mrs. J. A. Barns was in our city last week.

We come again, after a silence of a few weeks, to say:

Mike Long is gathering in his harvest of ice this week.

Mrs. A. L. Morse has been very sick with la grippe, but is recovering.

Henry Showalter has purchased the property lately owned by Hattie Miller and will repair it for rent.

The U. B. church have begun a series of meetings which are very interesting and we hope will be successful.

The ladies of the M. E. church hold their weekly meetings in their nicely furnished basement of the church.

Clyde Plum returned from Matterson, Ill., where he has been for the past summer. Butler is a good place to be in after all.

Mrs. Mack, teacher in the grammar room of our schools, was called to Adrian Monday on account of the serious illness of her parents.

Mrs. Ed. Fosdick is visiting her parents at Kewana at present. Mr. Fosdick has resigned his position in Kesser's drug store and has accepted a situation as traveling salesman.

Mrs. George Murray is in very poor health and it is feared that her disease will prove fatal. She will go to her parents in Michigan as soon as she is able to travel. She is suffering from lung trouble.

It is a lamentable fact that our school children must lose about a third of the time lately on account of the house being so cold as to be impossible for the teachers to have school. Of course the children are the losers. This should not be, for when teachers are drawing their salary the scholars should receive some benefit.

Mr. Dirrim of this place, accompanied by his family, left for Tennessee about a month ago in hopes that his wife's health might be benefitted by the change, but his hopes were blasted, as many others have been, for Monday evening his wife was brought home a corpse. Mrs. Dirrim will be sadly missed in her home and by her friends.

SUMMIT.

Ira Mortorff is visiting relatives up in Michigan at this writing.

G. D. Conrad's brother Richard and wife of Iowa, visited him last week.

Mrs. Shull of Auburn, visited her daughter, Mrs. A Conrad, this week.

Protracted meeting will commence at Barker's church next Thursday evening, Jan. 14.

Alva Snowberger and family of Steubenville, and Mrs. S. Mortorff were the guests of Henry Snowberger and wife last Sunday.

Joseph Rohm's invited 40 of their friends and neighbors to their house last Friday evening to an oyster supper. The young people enjoyed themselves till twelve o'clock when supper was announced. They enjoy themselves when at the supper which Mrs. R is capable of getting up.

In a Good Cause.

The society of the Church of God, in Auburn, purchased the old Lutheran church on South Jackson street, a few years ago, but being few in numbers, and not wealthy, they had still a small debt hanging over the property. Sometime in December James L. Ferguson, who resides northeast of town, took a subscription paper to various parties, and the result of his labors and the people's generosity is that almost enough has been raised to pay off the debt. "No; just a salesman."

Pronounced Hopeless, Yet Saved.

From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hurd, of Groton, S. D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold, which settled on my lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in consumption. Four doctors gave me up, saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Savior, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds. I gave it a trial, took in all, eight bottles; it has cured me, and thank God I am now a well and hearty woman." Trial bottle free at Robbins & McCords' drugstore, regular size, 50c. and $1 00. 4

Wonderful Cures.

WATERLOO, Sept. 18, 1890.

Facts should not be denied. I have been afflicted with liver complaint and rheumatism for the last six years, and could not get anything to do me any good, but steadily grew worse, and the last year I was so bad that I could do no work, and much of the time was not able to be about with any comfort. I was very stiff and sore about the shoulders and breast, and suffered much pain. I went to A. Y. Rosenbury in Waterloo, and pressed my case upon him against his will, as I was taking medicine at the same time of one of our best doctors. He took my case through a course of treatment and I soon began to improve and now feel quite well and can do any kind of work and suffer no pain whatever. I am satisfied it was his treatment that cured my complaint, for which I am very thankful, for make this statement for the benefit of suffering humanity.

N. J. CRAYS

"I don't see," said Aunt Sary, "why they should want a divorce—their tempers are entirely combatible."

A Mute Recovers Speech.

Alphonce Hemphling, of Summit township, Butler Co. Penn, made an affidavit that his twelve-year-son, who had had St. Vitus dance for twelve years, lost his speech, was completely cured after using three bottles of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine and also recovered his speech. Thousands testify to wonderful cures from using it for nervous diseases, dyspepsia, nervous debility, dullness, confusion of mind, headache, etc. Four doses of this Nervine cured Mrs. W. E. Burns, South Bend, Ind., who had been suffering with constant headache for 3 months. Trial bottle and elegant book free at F. E. Davenport's. 4

WATERLOO, IND., Dec. 15 1890.

This is to certify that I had a tumor growing on the back of my neck, just where the neck joins the body. It had been growing for six years, and was deep to the bone, and pained me very much. The doctors did not like to undertake to cut it out, and I was advised to go to A. Y. Rosenbury, and have him treat my case, and I did, and he told me he thought it could be removed without much trouble and he treated my case. This was about a year ago and the tumor is entirely gone. I have not felt the signs of pain or tumors for the last six months. This is a true statement of my case,

MRS. J. B. SHAFFER.

"This sounds like a big thing, but the

STANDARD

Rotary Shuttle Will Do It.

THE ROTARY MOTION, WHY BETTER?

The difference between the Standard Rotary Shuttle and the old style machine is the difference between the old-fashioned up and down saw and buzz saw. The only machine in use a few years ago had a long lever which drove the shuttle back and forth almost in a straight line, making one stop and start at each stitch.

They were called reciprocating shuttle machines. Then an attempt was made to produce an easier movement by making an oscillating shuttle or one that moves back and forth in a semi-circle, but it involved the same old start and stop at each stitch.

The "Standard" Rotary Shuttle starts and stops only when the machine starts and stops. One Million stitches can be made with only one start and stop. Just think of the friction and wear that are avoided by this wonderful achievement.

The needle bar dips only once at each stitch in the "Standard." In the reciprocating shuttle machines it dips twice at each stitch—twice the friction, twice the strains.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly.

Richard J. Hinton's finely illustrated paper on the great Colorado Desert, and a delightful descriptive and remniscent paper upon "Historic Haunts and Homes in New York," by "Felix Oldboy" (the late Colonel John F. Mines), are the leading features of Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for February. This midwinter number has an exceptionally brilliant list of contributors, including, besides the two already named, Rudyard Kipling, Mrs. E. M. DeLeon, George C. Hurlbut, Douglas Sladen, Louis Engel, A. L. Rawson, David Ker, Etta W. Pierce, Lucy H. Hooper, Joel Benton, J. Carter Beard and Captain W. W. Webb. The range of timely subjects covered is wide, and the pictorial illustrations are of surpassing excellence.

AUBURN AND VICINITY.

Some Reminiscences of its Early Days and Pioneer Citizens.

1858.

Despite the attractions, business and speculative, at Butler and Waterloo, Auburn increased in population and her business men gave no sign of despondency.

Sanders was in the clothing trade, Ward continued to deal in boots and shoes, T. Weldon carried on the work of blacksmithing, J. Grove on the north side of the public square, made carriages and wagons and M. L. Rhoades sold goods at wholesale and retail.

We quote Mr. Rhoades' prophesy concerning the future of Auburn and leave our readers to judge his prescience from the stand point of 1858: "Gentleman, those small villages that spring up like toad stools on railroads are not the places to buy goods cheap, because of the deficiency of capital, and of the irresistible determination to get rich in a short time. Don't be blinded by those ephemeral railroad towns. Auburn is the county seat of the county, and the trade will ever drift here. When the Eel River railroad is finished, and it most probably will be in few years, Auburn will then 'take the rag off the bush' of Waterloo or any of the northern towns."

The merchant was greatly mistaken concerning the northern towns. They did have capital and their business houses bought farmers' produce and sold goods cheap and Auburn was fairly distanced in the race, but when the Eel River railroad was finished, Rhoades prophecy came true and the rag was taken off the bush of Waterloo, her old time rival which finally gave up the struggle and has fallen far to the near.

In these times, much of the antagonism has vanished; and Auburn conscious of her stability, her prosperity, seeing business houses and dwellings, ever building upon sites of removed old buildings or on long vacated lots, noting the growth of her additions, proud of her improvements and the substantial advantages she has to offer to those desiring homes, takes pleasure, like a successful man, in recalling and recounting those early days when patience and courage were required to the utmost to hold her own.

Auburn rejoices in the progress of Butler, feels glad to see the marvelous growth of Garrett and looks with cordial feeling upon the vigorous advances of St. Joe. "Auburn is the county seat" said Rhoades, "and trade will always drift here." Yes, it will as long as our business men of all classes make good to their patrons the attractive statements of their ever fresh and liberal advertisements.

At the May election, eighty-nine votes were cast, a high water mark of the town's population. Among the names of electors, we find those of Christopher S. Hare, George Kuhlman, Russel Bumpus, Thomas Baldock and James B. Morrison, all well known in times past and all of them departed but the last named.

The result of the election was a board composed of Thomas Weldon, W. Griswold, T. R. Dickinson, C. Stimely and T. Tinney. M. F. Pierce was chosen town clerk, and John Butt, treasurer. The vote on treasurer was 44 each for J. D. Davis and Butt. There being a tie, a drawn ballot was in favor of the latter. J. P. Widney was elected assessor and Reuben Ettinger, marshal.

In 1858 the home without a lightning rod or rods, was deemed particularly in danger of being struck during a thunder shower and a species of obloquy attached to the head of the family who refused the interested appeal of a rod agent to give him a job and protect the family. But those days have departed and it is exceptional now to see house or barn decorated by so-called lightning rods. In accord with popular desire, the school house was supplied with rods by T. R. Dickinson and lightning being thus baffled, measures for extinction of fires were supplemented by the purchase of a number of fire hooks.

Mr. Dickinson seems to have been a little short of ubiquitous during this period. We find him counsellor-at-law with cases in court, postmaster in charge of the mails, treasurer of the DeKalb county agricultural society, a member of the school board and town board of trustees, and during the term of school employed as writing teacher, three lessons a week, at a dollar a lesson; and besides this activity, he attended to his landed investments in the three leading villages in the county.

Messrs. Weldon, Griswold and Dickinson, the school trustees appointed to act as such by authority of the town board, made arrangements for a fall term of school of twelve weeks duration and employed J. H. Moore as principal teacher in the completed lower story of the new school house, at a salary of $40.00 per month, Miss Marcia Gray was hired as first assistant at $14.00 per month and Vesta M. Ward at $12.00 per month. Rates of tuition for "foreign" scholars were fixed at $2, $3 and $4 per month, according to the branch studied. The firm of J. and R. Ettinger furnished two tables and two sets of chairs for use of teachers, and on August 22, school commenced and this was the beginning of the graded school system in Auburn.

In November, sealed proposals were talked of for completion of the second and third stories of the school building and J. W. Case was given the contract for $670. The work was to be done by July 1.

Mr. Moore was engaged for the winter term at $45 per month and Miss Gray and Miss Ward for $14 each.

Mr. Moore had been a teacher previously, we infer from the fact of his making sale to the school board of a set of Pelton's outline maps, excellent in design and pleasantly familiar to early students at the old academy. He married a daughter of widow Brandt, went into the army, where he died; later Mrs. Moore died leaving a son Clyde, who we believe is a resident of Chicago.

CALIFORNIA.

California is the most attractive and delightful section of the United States, if not of the world, and many beautiful resorts will be crowded by the best families of the east during the entire winter. It offers to the investor the best open opportunity for safe and large returns from its fruit lands. It offers the kindest climate in the world to the feeble and debilitated; and it is reached in the most comfortable manner over the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad. Pullman Vestibule Sleeping Cars leave Chicago by this line every day in the year and go without change or transfer through to San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego. This is a feature not offered by any other line. Write to John J. They "Sleigh ride"

That's what the town boys did last Saturday. It was a nice day, and the sleighing good, and everybody came to town with sleighs. And the town boys being out in full force, made life a burden to every team and its driver. Afternoon, Marshal Pfefferl, who is always looking out and caring for things, made up his mind he would relieve the incoming team of this annoyance, by giving the boys a free ride. So he got out the big grays, with a long hay rack on the sled, and invited the boys to take a ride, the understanding being that, after he got done with them, they would let the stranger teams alone. It was a grand and exhilarating sight to see the big teams prance about town, with about fifty happy boys in the rack, on the rack, outside the rack, hanging to the rack and to the sled, a moving panorama of rubber boots, cloth caps, red mittens, with a hilarious boy attachment that was perfectly willing to have the sleighing last fifteen months in the year. At last the big team was tired, and Joe dismissed his tumultuous friends, with the warning "not to trouble the farmers now any more by jimminy." With many a promise, the boys left, and in two minutes had forgotten their well meant promise, and piled into the first team they saw. Well, boys will be boys, and how was it once with the rest of us?

Senator Howard for Supreme Judge.

It will devolve upon the next Democratic state convention to nominate two candidates for state judges—one for the supreme and the other for the appellant court—from this, the fifth judicial district of Indiana. The supreme judgeship is the one made vacant by the death of the lamented Judge J. A. S. Mitchell and temporarily filled by appointment of the governor. The appellant court judgeship is likewise at present filled by appointment of the governor, in the person of Judge Crumpacker, of Valparaiso.

Consultation with a number of Democratic lawyers in this part of the state has resulted in designating Senator Timothy E. Howard, of this city, as a suitable person to creditably and ably fill one of these judgeships. His career as a member of the state senate during the past six years has made his name familiar to those who are in the habit of watching the proceedings of the general assembly and unerringly points to him as a man thoroughly conversant with the making as well as the interpreting of the law.

Senator Howard is 54 years of age, in the very prime of life. His higher educational acquirements were obtained at Ann Arbor. He served gallantly in the war for the supression of the rebellion, and after the close of that mighty struggle became associated with Notre Dame university as professor of English literature. In 1878 he was elected clerk of St. Joseph county, filling that office with marked ability. At the close of his term he entered upon the practice of law, for which he had previously qualified himself, and has built up quite an extensive practice, though greatly hampered therein by his duties as a law-maker at Indianapolis. In his career as state senator he has developed qualities that clearly point to him as a man of strong judicial mind and as possessing in an eminent degree the elements and qualifications that enter into the make-up of an upright, capable and conscientious judge.

As a man and citizen Senator Howard is without reproach. As a lawyer he takes high rank in the profession. His ability as a painstaking legislator is freely acknowledged. In presenting his name to the consideration of the Democracy of Indiana, the Times feels assured that no mistake will be made in selecting him to succeed the lamented Judge Mitchell on the bench, and that his nomination would lend strength to the ticket. In proposing him for this exalted position we are mindful of the fact that high qualities are expected. This requirement is fully met. We name for public consideration a gentleman of learning, a citizen of probity of character, an experienced lawmaker, a gallant soldier, and an unflinching Democrat.

The way of the transgressor is hard—until he reaches the Canadian line.

IT WILL BE UPHELD BY FORCE OF ARMS.

A St. Louis Sleighing Party's Sad End—Motor Cars Burned—France's Threat—Rifled Mail Boxes—Sentenced to Hang.

WAR CLOUDS

Hovering in the National Sky.

In Washington the feeling of impending war is rapidly assuming the aspect of a certainty, as indicated by groups of politicians and citizens who seriously discuss the question and express indignation and determination to maintain the dignity of the country.

The Navy and War Departments are as busy as ever in preparing to meet the most serious emergency which might arise. Secretary Tracy sees no hope of a peaceful settlement, and he has not relaxed in any way the preparation for war. The entire plan of campaign has now been mapped out so far as is possible. The publication of any of the details would be manifestly improper, as it would furnish valuable aid to the Chilians and would enable them to map out a line of defense.

The plan of the Department contemplates an attack in force when the proper time comes, and that cannot be made until all the ships have been concentrated, as they are now widely separated—some at San Francisco, some at San Diego, some at Montevideo, some in the West Indies and still others at New York and Norfolk. Considerable time will necessarily elapse before they can all be gathered in the neighborhood of Valparaiso.

The rumors, that the delay in sending in the President's message and correspondence was due to the expected offer of arbitration by a friendly power, or the receipt of advices that a more friendly spirit prevails in Chilian official circles, are untrue. Neither of these occurred.

An official of the State Department, referring to the reported offer of arbitration by a friendly third power, said: "A third party does not offer to arbitrate. The offer is to mediate, and its good offices may lead to a settlement under any one of three different names, the practical result being the same, however. Another form of manifestation of outside interest is known intervention. In that case the intervening power usually insists upon enforcing its views or suggestions by force if necessary. A good illustration of the effects of intervention is shown in Egypt when England intervened there."

Four Thousand Dollars Found Under a Tree.

Considerable excitement has been occasioned near Bedford, Ind., by the finding of $4,000 in greenbacks at the roots a tree on which Stephen Clark was hanged by a mob several years ago. It was supposed that Clark had hidden large sums of money and the boys in the neighborhood have from time to time been searching for it. The other night Clark's widow was awakened by the light of a lantern under a tree in her yard and discovered some boys at work with a pick. They dug about two feet in the ground and secured broken pieces of a wooden box. Continuing their labors they dug out an old coat, and upon unrolling it found a revolver, some counterfeit molds and $4,000 in greenbacks.

A Ride to Death.

St. Louis special: As a four-horse sleigh load of twenty-one persons, members of the Clover Leaf Club, was going north on Sarah street, and as the rear pair of horses and forward bobs of the sleigh were on the track, they were struck by a Wabash west-bound passenger train at the Wabash railroad crossing. The colored driver and seven of the party were instantly killed and ten or eleven more or less seriously injured. Only two escaped uninjured. The dead were taken to the morgue, while the injured were brought on the train and were taken to their homes.

Rifled Mail Boxes.

A gang of thieves opened and robbed a dozen mail boxes in the business portion of Wheeling, W. Va. The thieves had keys to the boxes and opened them without the slightest difficulty, securing all the contents and rifling them at leisure. A large number of envelopes that had been robbed of their contents have been found. From partial investigation it is believed the thieves got money and paper valued at over $15,000.

Monsignor Kirby, the Pope's secretary, replying to questions on the subject, has written a letter to the effect that the Pontiff's health is excellent, in spite of the assertions to the contrary. Monsignor Kirby adds that His Holiness takes deep interest in the state of Ireland and everything concerning the spiritual and temporal happiness of the Irish people.

France's Threat.

The Republique Francaise, in a stirring article on the situation of affairs in Morrocco, says that France would oppose with all her strength a British occupation of Morrocco, which, it says, would be at last humiliation for Europe. In conclusion the Republique Francise says that "if the British blue jackets want to sleep in Tangiers, they shall have bed-fellows."

Motor Cars Burned.

Fire destroyed the car house of the Toledo Electric Street Railway Company, on Canton avenue, Toledo, Ohio. There were between twenty-five and thirty motor cars in the house at the time and all were destroyed. The building was a one-story brick, 80x100 feet in size, and nothing is left standing but the walls.

Telegraphers Have the Grip.

Out of the 2,400 men on the staff of the London Central Telegraph Department, 800 are disabled on account of influenza.

Resting on Their Oars.

A special from Washington says: Secretary Tracey and Assistant Secretary of State Aidee say the reported flight of Minister Egan from Santiago is untrue. Nothing has been received from Chili for several days and the published reports of messages from Egan and Montt are pure inventions. The negotiations are at a stand-still and have been for several days. The President and Secretary Blaine are now resting on their oars, and expecting that the Chilian Government, when its investigation is completed, will make a suitable apology. If they do not, the President says he will act promptly and effectively. He has completed his message to Congress so far as dictating a resume of the entire correspondence is concerned, but he has not yet prepared any portion of the recommendation which will accompany the communication about this matter.

WRECK AND FIRE.

A Special Train Goes Over an Embankment.

Brainard (Minn.) special: A horrible accident occurred on the Northern Pacific railroad at Jonesville, the first station east of here, by which two women met death in a horrible form, being burned to death, while twenty others were injured.

The train was a special, consisting of sleeping car Petrel and a baggage car, and was running as the second section of No. 9, the regular train from Superior. The special left South Superior, having on board the Andrews Opera Company, going from Duluth to Grand Forks. The train was running at the usual rate of speed when it struck a broken rail. The sleeper left the track and went down an embankment, landing bottom side up. The flames broke out from all sides of the car immediately, and burned so rapily that the crew could do nothing but extricate the passengers from the wreck.

When it was thought all had been rescued, a search revealed the fact that Mrs. Ed. Andrews, wife of the proprietor of the troupe, and her nurse, Mrs. Lilly Wallace, were missing. By this time the flames were burning so fiercely that it was impossible to get near the car. When the flames were finally subdued the remains were discovered, but so badly burned that it was impossible to identify one from another.

Mrs. Andrews and Mrs. Wallace had occupied an upper berth at the forward end of the car and were wrapped in the bed clothes. There was no outcry from this berth while the work of rescuing the injured was progressing, and it is supposed that both occupants were killed instantly.

It is not known whether the car caught fire from the lamp or stove, but it is supposed from the rapidity with which the flames spread that they caught from the lamps.

Twenty passengers, more or less seriously injured, were taken from the wreck. Physicians were taken from Brainard on a special train. The injured were brought back to this city and taken to the Northern Pacific Hospital as soon as possible, where they were given the best of care and medical attention.

Conductor Ball, who was in charge of the train, says the sight was the most appalling of any he ever witnessed. The shrieks and moans of the women could be heard half a mile away. Miss Douglass, when she was brought from the car, was literally enveloped in flames, her hair being on fire. Many of the women were nude, but were wrapped up as they were taken out. Mr. Andrews rescued his little baby and supposed his wife was safe. He is wild with grief.

BLAINE SAYS

Peaceful Results Are Highly Improbable.

Secretary Blaine, in the course of conversation, conducted with a friend, left it to be inferred that the probability of an amicable settlement of the difficulty with Chili is highly improbable, in fact he broadly hinted as much when asked how the latest phase of the quarrel, the gross insult to Commander Evans, of the Yorktown, have affected the situation.

The seeming puerile action of the Chilian Minister of Foreign Affairs in connection with the refugees on board the Yorktown and the spirited reply of Commander Evans of that vessel was the subject of much comment among members of Congress, and many remarks were made in the sanctity of the cloakroom or committee-room which might be considered significant by the Chilian Government as falling from the lips of American representatives in Congress.

While it cannot be said with absolute truth that there is a radical war spirit prevailing among congressmen, it is certain that many of them (and this includes a number of members usually considered conservative in their views and their actions) will not hesitate to vote for war if the situation does not improve. There is a unanimous feeling in favor of doing what is best to maintain the dignity of the United States, but members differ as to how that result should be accomplished, some being in favor of war at once, while others think patience and arbitration the better policy. From interviews with prominent congressmen, it is obvious that no partisanship will enter into the controversy if the matter is brought forward in the House. "Patriotism, not Politics," will be the motto of nearly every man on the floor whether he is in favor of war or against.

Secretary Tracy has cabled to Commander Evans, commanding the Yorktown at Valparaiso, to proceed at his own discretion to Calleo, Peru, and there land the Chilian refugees who are now under his protection.

GHOST DANCE.

The Osage and Pawnee Indians On the War Path.

Guthrie (O. T.) special: A courier coming in from the Cherokee Strip reports that there will surely be serious trouble on the Osage and Pawnee reservations in the western part of the strip. The Osage Indians have been very insolent for a year past, and when a month ago their agent advised them not to treat with the Government Commissioners for the sale of their lands, that they owned it and should keep it, they at once became imbued with the idea of running things to suit themselves. Within the last week the blanket Indians of this tribe have been holding a ghost dance, which grows larger and more vigorous each day. The participants have now become worked up to such a pitch that it is unsafe for a white man to venture near.

Across the river from the Osage Reservation the Pawnees are having a dance, and a few days ago a large party of the Osages captured some straggling Pawnees, tied them to a tree and held a mock scalp dance about them all day. Should any number of these two tribes come in contact while they are excited from dancing an open and bloody war will surely follow.

He Was in Earnest.

Cairo (Ill.) special: A local paper printed a letter written by James C. Lighner to his wife in St. Louis, in which he threatened to drown himself. The substance of the letter was telegraphed to the St. Louis papers. She laughingly said that writing such letters was one of Lighner's favorite amusements, and she did not believe he meant it. He did, though, and it was learned from an officer of the New South Steamer that Lighner after writing the letter referred to and sending it ashore, had jumped overboard and was drowned as the boat was going to Memphis. The facts were not ascertained until it returned.

Money Mad.

A special dispatch from Alliance, Ohio, says: Several weeks ago Mrs. Rosa Northrop, accompanied by her 7-year-old daughter left Sandiago, Cal., to visit relatives near here. Mrs. Northrop took considerable money with her. This so preyed upon her mind that when the train stopped at a way station in Iowa, she took her child and started across the prairie. After wandering around for a day and a night they were found nearly dead from exposure. An aunt in Nebraska took charge of them, bringing them to this city. Mrs. Northrop is now at the home of her mother, Mrs. Baldwin, a raving maniac.

JUDGE BOTKIN

Charged With Complicity in Murder.

Topeka (Kas.) special: Mrs. S. N. Wood has written a letter to Governor Humphrey in which she denies that she and her friends are plotting to take Judge Botkin's life. She further says that she has ample proof of the fact that Botkin was one of the chief instigators of the murder of her husband, Col. Sam Wood, and that the evidence can be produced in court when the witnesses can go there and tell what they know without fear of assassination.

W. F. Rightmier, Secretary of the National Citizens Alliance, has written a letter to the Topeka Advocate in which he declares that Judge Botkin told John R. Garrison in his room in a Topeka hotel, "If I can ever get Wood to Hugoton he will never get out alive, as all arrangements are made to kill him there."

Mr. Rightmier then declares on his word as an attorney he believes that he has in his possession sufficient evidence to convict Botkin of complicity in the murder of Col. Wood.

Another Horror.

Another street crossing horror occurred at Chicago. A Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago limited passenger train crashed into a Forty-seventh street horse car, at Stewart avenue. In an instant all was confusion, the car was smashed into kindling wood and a number of persons were undoubtedly seriously if not fatally injured. Amid the mass of wreckage were half a dozen bleeding and senseless human forms. These were tenderly raised and carried to a saloon, while their fellow passengers, less seriously injured, were helped to the same place, where the doctors waited on them.

Robbed Mail Bags.

Batavia (N. Y.) special: A bold and successful robbery of United States mail occurred at the Erie depot. The mail for the west-bound train, consisting of two pouches, was on a baggage truck on the platform awaiting the train's arrival. The employe having them in charge stepped into the depot for a moment and on his return the bags were missing. They were found later under some planks near the freight house. They had been cut open and the contents abstracted. A tramp who had been lounging about the depot is suspected of the robbery.

Harben Hanged.

M. V. Harben was hanged at Poplar Bluff, Mo. When placed on the scaffold Harben was smoking a cigar. He was asked if he desired to say anything, and replied: "No, gentlemen, I can only say I am innocent." The crime for which Harben suffered death penalty was the murder of an old man named Smith, on July 4, 1888. Smith sold a farm to Harben and held his note as part payment. It was proved that Harben murdered him to secure possession of the notes.

Found Dead in a Ditch.

While two residents of South Milford, Ind., were passing a ditch, their hunting dog sprang into it and almost instantly leaped out with a startled howl. This drew the attention of the men to a dark object half buried in the snow, which proved to be the lifeless body of Eugene Nichols, who was subject to epileptic fits, and probably fell into the pit in a fit and either broke his neck or froze to death.

Walter A. Wood, the Inventor of Harvesting Machines, Dead.

He was a representative in Congress for two terms.

The Garza Revolution Is Over.

A special from Laredo, Texas, says that it is believed there the Garza Revolution is at an end, and that armed men reported to be moving through the country are supposed to be Garza's men on their way to their homes. Garza himself is thought to be in the neighborhood of Laredo, and it is the opinion of some that he may surrender at Corpus Christi.

The glove contest at Dubuque, Iowa, between Con Doyle of Chicago, and Dan Henry of Dubuque, lasted for six rounds. ALBERT VICTOR DEAD.

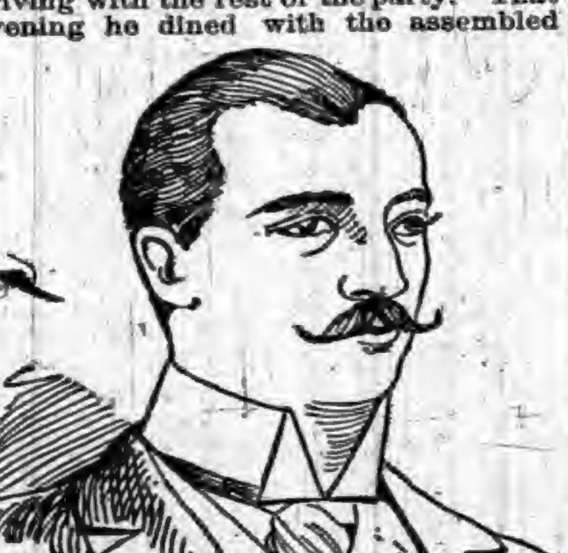
HEIR TO THE BRITISH THRONE PASSES AWAY.

Great Excitement Shown by All Classes—Sympathy Being Extended from All Sources—Scenes at Sandringham—Cardinal Manning Also Is No More.

Death of a Duke.

His Royal Highness, Albert Victor, Duke of Clarence, and heir to the British throne, is dead. His death was caused by congestion of the lungs, brought about by a severe cold contracted while hunting. The Duke of Clarence was a member of a party which was shooting over some covers situated a long distance from Sandringham Hall. At luncheon he complained of not feeling as well as usual, was seen to shiver, and said that he felt that he was taking cold, but after the meal he continued shooting. At the conclusion of the sport he walked home instead of driving with the rest of the party. That evening he dined with the assembled company, but was obliged to retire early. On the following day efforts were made to dissuade him from joining the shooting party, but he insisted on doing so, saying that he felt equal to the exercise. After luncheon, however, he said that he felt compelled to return home and left the party, going on foot.



ALBERT VICTOR.

The next morning he was unable to leave his bed, and continued growing rapidly worse until the seventh day, when death came to him.

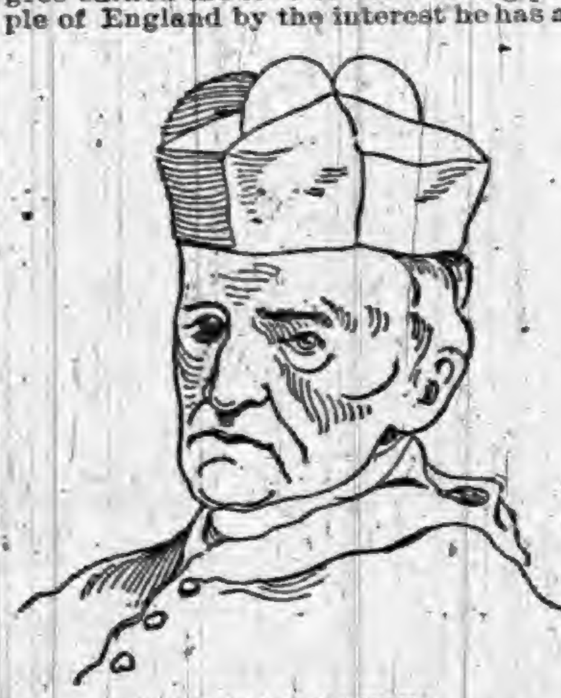
London and all England is wild with excitement, and business is entirely suspended. It is characteristic of the deep affection felt by the entire British people for the Princess of Wales that the most sincere and heartfelt expressions of sorrow are heard on every hand and a deep feeling of sympathy pervades every class of society from the highest to the lowest and every shade of political opinion from the Tory to the Radical. In the vicinity of Sandringham, where the Duke's death occurred, the excitement cannot be described.

CARDINAL MANNING.

The Noted Catholic Divine Passes to the Beyond.

Cardinal Manning, who, as was announced from London, was suffering from a severe cold, had the last sacrament of the church administered to him and soon after expired.

It is now fourteen years since the distinguished churchman was invested with the cardinal's hat, and forty years since he left the Established church, in which he had won high honors, for the Roman communion. He has in an eminent degree earned the love of the working people of England by the interest he has always taken in their welfare, and in the last few years he has been instrumental in adjusting a number of serious differences between the industrial classes and their employers. He has also been active in temperance and other reform works.



CARDINAL MANNING.

As a clergyman of the English Church, Dr. Manning officiated as one of the select preachers of the University of Oxford as long ago as 1834, and in 1840 was made Archdeacon of Chichester. After transferring his ecclesiastical allegiance to Rome, Dr. Manning founded a religious order at Bayswater, entitled the Oblates of St. Charles Borromeo. He succeeded Cardinal Wiseman as Archbishop of Westminster in 1865.

JUDGE RICHARDSON of the Evansville Circuit Court, has decided in favor of the County Auditor in the injunction suit brought against him by a number of citizens of Evansville. The case was the outgrowth of the increase in valuation made by the State Board of Tax Commissioners on three and a half million dollars of property in the city of Evansville and Pigeon Township outside of the city. The County Auditor, as was his duty, proceeded to enter this increase on the tax duplicate, hence the suit.

THE citizens of Columbus are delighted with the change that is taking place there in railroad matters. Since the completion of the old Madison and Indianapolis railroad to this place, in 1844, to the present time there has been a railroad in the very heart of the city, and passenger and freight engines have annoyed the citizen, the stranger and the business man during all this time. Now a great change is taking place. A freight-yard has been put in on low lands to the south of the city, and the work of removing the tracks from the city will begin in a few days. This change has cost the Pennsylvania Company about $40,000, and was brought about without expense to the city. This has made many friends for this company. The benefit to the city will be hard to estimate.

DOINGS OF CONGRESS.

MEASURES CONSIDERED AND ACTED UPON.

At the Nation's Capital—What Is Being Done by the Senate and House—Old Matters Disposed Of and New Ones Considered.

The Senate and House.

In the House on the 13th, Mr. Holman presented a resolution opposing the granting of subsidies or bounties by Congress in money, public moneys, bonds, or by pledge of the public credit to promote special private industries or enterprises. Considerable confusion succeeded the reading of the resolution; but, without giving time for debate, Mr. Holman demanded the previous question on its adoption. "Will debate be in order after the previous question is ordered on this resolution?" inquired Mr. Henderson, of Iowa. "The Speaker is of the opinion that debate would not then be in order," replied Speaker Pro Tem. McMillan. "And this House will cease to be a deliberative body," added Mr. Reed, of Maine. The repetition of the charge which had so frequently been hurled against himself caused the House, Democrats and Republicans, to break into a roar of laughter. The yeas and nays on the previous question were demanded and resulted—yeas, 154; nays, 80. When the vote was announced Mr. Holman asked unanimous consent that an hour's debate on each side be allowed. Mr. Reed wanted two hours on a side, and to this Mr. Holman consented. Mr. Simpson, of Kansas, asked if this arrangement included two hours for the People's party as well as the Republican and Democratic parties. In the Senate the time was taken up by the introduction of bills.

In the House on the 14th the session was consumed in debate on the Holman resolution, which in substance declares that Congress in its appropriations shall be strictly limited to the moneys necessary to carry on the several departments of the Government. The Senate took up the calendar, the first bill on it being one to aid the State of Colorado to support the school of mines. It appropriates 25 per cent. of all moneys paid to the United States for mineral lands in Colorado for the maintenance of the school of mines established at Golden. Mr. Teller moved to amend the bill by making the percentage 50 instead of 25. Agreed to and the bill was passed. Other bills passed as follows: Authorizing the construction of a bridge across the Mississippi River in Chamberlain, in Brule County, and Lyman County, South Dakota. Appropriating $300,000 for the purchase of ground and the erection thereon, in the city of Washington of a building to be used as a hall of records. Adjourned till the 18th.

On the 15th, the debate was continued in the House on the Holman resolution. After exciting debate the resolution was adopted without amendment. It is known as the anti-subsidy resolution. The House then took up the reports of the Committee on Accounts assigning clerks to the various committees of the House. After debate the minority substitute, providing for twenty-four clerks, was defeated—yeas, 84; nays, 104—and the majority report, which provides for thirty-seven clerks, was agreed to. Mr. Fyan, of Missouri, who has been absent on account of sickness, was then sworn in, but his health was so feeble that he was obliged to take the oath of office from his seat. Mr. Hatch, of Missouri, introduced a bill amending the Presidential succession act so as to add the office of Secretary of Agriculture after that of Secretary of the Interior. No business in the Senate. Both houses adjourned until the 18th.

There were six Senators on the Democratic side and about twice that number on the Republican side when the Chaplain opened with prayer the seventh week of the session on the 18th. Mr. Sherman, for the first time since his re-election occupied his seat. The House bill fixing the time for holding District and Circuit Courts of the United States in the Northern District of Iowa was reported by Mr. Wilson from the Judiciary Committee and was passed. A bill was reported and placed on the calendar to pay the State of West Virginia its proportion of the amount claimed under the direct tax. The rest of the session was consumed in a discussion of the La Abra claims. The World's Fair question was the first subject to receive the attention of the House. Mr. Reilly, of Pennsylvania, presented a resolution requesting the Secretary of the Treasury to inform the House of Representatives what amount of money has been appropriated and available under the act of Oct. 25, 1890, relating to the World's Columbian Exposition at Chicago, and about what amount of the money appropriated had already been expended. The resolution was adopted by acclamation. A moment later Chairman Durborow introduced and asked for the immediate consideration of resolutions authorizing the selection of the Committee on the World's Fair to have printed such documents and papers as it may deem necessary relative to the matters referred to it. Mr. Holman and Mr. Oates of Alabama joined in the protest against granting to the World's Fair Committee such unlimited powers of incurring expenses. Upon these objections the resolutions were referred to the committee. After introduction of bills, adjournment was taken.

CHAPTER XIX.

THE MODOCS.

Walford, the old hermit, started slightly as Inez stepped before him. He peered anxiously, curiously into her face, and then seized her hand, his impressive face aglow with sudden emotion.

"Yes," he murmured, "it is indeed the daughter of my old friend—I could not mistake that face."

Inez stood with downcast eyes and pallid countenance and did not reply to his words. Despard hissed but one menacing sentence into her shrinking ear:

"Remember your promise!" he breathed fiercely. "Your lover dies if you fail me now."

Then aloud he said to Walford: "You are satisfied that this is Inez Tracey?"

The hermit bowed assentingly.

"She has a letter from her father written just previous to his death. If you wish to see it she will show it to you."

"I would like to see it."

Inez produced a missive she had received some weeks before.

The hermit perused it, returned it to her and asked, "This gentleman is your intended husband?"

For a moment Inez faltered. She seemed about to deny the query when she met the fierce, threatening glance of her captor.

"Yes," she gasped, almost inaudibly.

"And you wish me to deliver to him the trust left me to execute by your dying father?"

"If you will."

Warford drew a time-worn paper from his breast.

"In this document," he said, "your father left his fortune to you in my charge. The fortune consists of lands in California near the sea coast, which are already deeded to you, and a description of which is contained in this paper."

He handed Despard the document as he spoke.

"These lands," he continued, "are comparatively worthless; but, besides them, Mr. Tracey left a fortune in tangible shape. It comprises a casket containing diamonds, into which he converted his wealth in Peru; diamonds which, while they only fill a small metal box, represent a value exceeding one hundred thousand dollars."

"And you have these diamonds?" asked Despard eagerly.

"Yes. My friend Tracey told me to deliver them to his daughter. I now do so."

The hermit retired to a darkened portion of the apartment, and was gone for some moments. When he returned he bore a small black box in his hand.

The avaricious eyes of Despard gleamed with secret exultation. The coveted fortune of the Traceys was within his grasp at last, and he could scarcely contain himself for joy.

The old scout, a silent and interested spectator of all that had transpired within the past few moments, was terribly excited.

He saw the apparent accomplishment of all Dyke Despard's evil plans. He saw the Tracey fortune wrested from its rightful owners, to enrich a desperate villain. He saw Inez the wife of the renegade.

He resolved to act boldly. Drawing his revolver he sprang past the bandits.

"Hold!"

His voice was clear and commanding.

The startled Despard recoiled.

Ranger Ralph had wrested the casket from his grasp just as the old hermit had handed it to him.

"Walford, do you not know me? It is I—Ranger Ralph!"

A cry of amazement broke from the old hermit's lips.

"You!" he cried.

"Yes, yes. Yonder man is Dyke Despard, the outlaw, and the girl is acting under his threats."

"Down him!"

The enraged Despard shouted the order to his men hoarsely. He himself sprang upon the scout as he spoke.

The box fell with a clanging sound from the hand of Ranger Ralph to the hard stone floor of the cavern.

The other outlaws were about to press forward to aid their companion and leader, when a sudden episode diverted them from their purpose.

A lithe form, that of a woman, darted suddenly into view. Springing from a dark corner of the cave, she revealed the face and figure of White Fawn, the Indian princess.

She glided to where Despard and the scout were struggling in deadly combat. With one blow she drove a knife into the back of the outlaw leader.

Then, stooping, she seized the box of jewels and disappeared like a flash down one of the dark corridors of the place.

With a cry of pain and rage Dyke Despard staggered back.

"Shoot them down!" he cried hoarsely to his men as he retreated to their ranks.

The old hermit seized the scout as the latter was about to spring forward to rescue Inez. At the same moment the outlaw fired at them.

"This way," spoke the hermit quickly.

He drew Ranger Ralph out of range of the bullets of their foes.

"Follow me," he ordered.

"But the girl!"

"You cannot rescue her now."

Walford had darted down a dark corridor. Suddenly he paused. A series of savage yells emanated from the apartment they had just left. They were mingled with the alarmed cries of the bandits.

Loud reports of continuous firing awoke all the silent echoes of the place.

"What does that mean?" demanded the mystified scout.

"The Indians."

"Modocs?"

"Yes. They have penetrated the cave. See! They are coming this way. Haston, old friend and partner, I have a safe retreat if we can only reach it in time."

The truth flashed across Ranger Ralph's mind as he obeyed his companion and stumbled down a dark corridor.

White Fawn, he reasoned, had reached the tribe, and they had returned with her to wreak vengeance on the renegades.

In this theory, however, the old scout was only in a measure correct. What had really happened was this:

White Fawn had rode toward the place where she supposed the Modocs were encamped. She had seen her father and had told him all the cruel story of her wrongs.

Within an hour the warriors were aware of Despard's treachery, and were on the war-path, wild with emotions of revenge and rage.

One hour after Despard had left the outlaw stronghold with Inez Tracy, the savages arrived there. The bandits left behind fell immediate victims to the vengeance of the Modocs, but White Fawn managed to induce her father to spare Darrel Grey.

Provided with a horse, he was led out of sight of the tribe by the chief and told to hasten to some of the settlements, as the savages were bloodthirsty and intoxicated, and he could not restrain them.

The Fawn then led them after Despard.

She was the first to enter the cave of the old hermit, and as has been seen she secured the diamond casket and fled.

She was lurking in one of the numerous corridors of the cave when the Modocs penetrated to the place.

A scene of the wildest confusion ensued. The savages attacked the renegades mercilessly.

The alarmed Inez was borne away captive by two of the Indians.

Despard had disappeared mysteriously at the very commencement of the attack. The wily outlaw leader foresaw his peril, and, wounded as he was, managed to escape.

Shadow Snake ordered a thorough search for the Crow, and by accident the savages went down the corridor where the hermit and Ranger Ralph had gone.

Walford glanced back as he heard the savages.

"They are following us," he said to his companion.

"Is there a way out of the place?"

"There is a place of safe refuge for us, yes," replied the hermit. "As to these savages, we will stop their pursuit."

"How?"

"That you shall see."

The hermit had halted at a place where the corridor widened. Watching his grim features silently, the scout saw him draw a keg from a recess in the rock.

Walford placed it across the corridor. A minute later a flaring, spluttering fuse, emitting brilliant sparks, told the scout that the old hermit intended in a summary manner to close the pursuit of their savage foes.

CHAPTER XX.

THE HOUSE IN THE AIR.

"Powder!" ejaculated Ranger Ralph, as the hermit hurried him from the spot.

"Exactly. The Indians would have overtaken us, and we had to cut off our retreat."

"Have we done it?"

"Wait and see."

The corridor they were pursuing came to an end at last. It terminated at a shelf of rocks overlooking a little ravine that was a branch of the main canyon.

So precipitous was the descent, and so frail the area of the rock they had reached, that the scout looked dismayed.

"I see no way of escape," he remarked.

"Wait."

Both stood silent for some moments. Suddenly there was a deafening explosion.

"The powder?"

"Yes."

"You believe it will block up our retreat?"

"I am sure of it."

"And now how are we going to leave here?"

"Look out and see."

Ranger Ralph advanced to the edge of the rock. He uttered a cry of interest and delight, as his eyes met a curious spectacle.

From the rock a dead tree ran like a bridge across to a high perpendicular column of rock. Twenty feet beyond this was another rock.

Between the two, held firmly in place, was a rude, dilapidated hut formed of logs.

"That is my retreat," said Walford.

"And a safe and strange place it is," remarked the scout. "But how did that house ever come there?"

"It was built by me ten years ago, when the two rocks were one."

"I understand."

"Gradually they crumbled away."

"And left the house between them?"

"Exactly."

"Is it safe?"

"For the present, yes. Some day it will go crashing down. Cross over on the tree."

A few minutes later they had reached the first rocks. Thence they gained admittance to the hut. It was a singular place, indeed.

From the window they could look for many miles down the ravine. Beneath them was an open space for many hundred feet. The hut seemed tightly wedged in between the two rocks.

"What do you intend to do?" asked the scout, after a careful survey of the strange surroundings.

"Remain here for a while."

"Until the Indians go away?"

"Yes."

"But the girl?"

"We will think about that later. We can do nothing by precipitate action."

"You saw the Indian girl?" asked the scout.

"I saw a quick form dart through the cave and secure the diamonds, yes."

"It was White Fawn."

"And an enemy—one of the Modoc spies?"

"No, a friend."

"She has disappeared."

"But she will return the diamonds."

And Ranger Ralph related what he knew of the Indian princess.

For over an hour the two men discussed the situation. It was just coming on nightfall, when the scout happened to glance from the window.

"Look!" he said.

The hermit hastened to his side. The valley below them was filled with Indians.

They could see that the savages were about to camp in the ravine for the night. Among them the scout made out the girl prisoner, Inez Tracey.

"See," he said, "the girl is safe."

"Yes, and we will rescue her if they remain for the night. Too late! We are discovered."

Both men drew back from the window hastily. Evidently they had been seen by some of the Indians in the valley below. They could see them point to the strange house in the rocks. Then several shots were fired at them.

"I am sorry they saw us," remarked Walford.

"They cannot injure us."

"Perhaps not; but they will try to dislodge us."

"They are trying it already, cried Ranger Ralph excitedly.

"What do you mean?"

"Look yonder."

"At the tree bridge?"

"Yes."

A cry of alarm parted the hermit's lips. On the shelving rock were several Indians just about to cross the tree-bridge that led to the strange house in the air.

CHAPTER XXI.

NIGHT ADVENTURES.

The attention of the two bordermen was now entirely centered upon the tree that had crossed the ravine.

At exactly the place whence the scout had first seen the house in the air, several savages were visible. The explosion in the cave had evidently only temporarily blocked their progress.

So far, apparently, they had not seen the occupants of the cabin, but as they regarded the strange hut, and pointed to it, the hermit knew that they meditated a visit.

"They must not come here," he said to his companion.

"Of course not," replied the scout; "but how are we going to prevent them?"

"Get your revolver ready."

"All right."

"Now take a position by this rock."

Ranger Ralph did as directed.

"If any of them attempt to cross, fire at them," said Walford.

"And you?"

"I am going to destroy the means of access to our place of refuge."

"And cut off our own retreat!"

"Not at all. There is an outlet by the other rock."

The scout remained on guard behind the rock. The old hermit crept cautiously toward the spot where the dead tree rested on the first cliff of stone.

Ranger Ralph could observe all the movements of the savages without being seen. He saw one of them finally make a movement as if to cross the impromptu bridge. The scout drew a bead on him and fired.

The astonished Modoc fell back with a cry of pain. His companions, too, retreated further into the cave. They were completely mystified at the strange attack. Their bewilderment increased when they saw the tree go hurtling down the ravine.

The hermit had pushed one end clear of the rock, and it fell, depriving the savages of any opportunity of crossing to the rock. A minute later he rejoined the scout.

"There is no danger to be apprehended from our enemies that way?"

"None."

"They may fire at us."

"The rock intervenes, and they cannot reach us. No, they will soon retire from the cave as they came."

"And then?"

"An attack from below, I presume."

"That won't amount to much."

"I don't know," remarked Walford concernedly. "Now they have discovered us, they will exercise all their cunning to dislodge and destroy us."

For over an hour, however, there was no especial commotion visible in the valley below. The Modocs had moved their camp farther down the valley.

Quite a party of them had sought shelter behind some rocks directly under the cabin. From their frequently pointing to the cabin the hermit and the scout realized that they were forming some plan of assault.

Ranger Ralph looked anxiously but vainly among the savages for some sign of White Fawn. He believed that she could induce Shadow Snake to cease hostilities if she was there. The Modoc princess, however, was nowhere to be seen.

As the scout learned later, she had met with adventures that prevented her appearing to her friends for many a long day.

Finally, just at dusk, the Modocs below were joined by several more savages.

"They are the Indians who tried to cross on the tree," explained Walford.

Their enemies seemed to discuss the question excitedly. They separated, but the watching men in their strange eyrie could see that they were disposing themselves for a combined attack upon the cabin in the air.

The hut was perhaps a hundred feet from the ground. The savages first began to fire at the windows of the cabin. Then, realizing that this was a useless expenditure of powder and ball, they ceased all hostilities for some time.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Our Railroads.

The marvelous growth of railroads in the United States is shown by the following statement, which gives the mileage finished at the close of the decades named:

	Miles.
1830	23
1840	2,818
1850	9,021
1860	30,626
1870	52,922
1880	93,296
1890	166,817
August, 1891	170,000

The aggregate capitalization of these roads represented by their share capital and funded and unfunded debt reaches the enormous sum of $10,600,000,000, or a little more than $60,000 a mile. In rolling stock there is an average of one locomotive engine and one passenger car for every five miles of track and seven freight cars for every mile of track. Our estimate of the rate of increase in the wealth of our country to-day is $2,200,000,000 a year, or at the rate of $6,000,000 a day, and an average of $1,100,000 of this wealth goes daily into the expansion of our railroad system. We now have nearly one half of the railroad mileage of the world.

It is a fact that the cost of carrying freight and passengers has steadily grown less in the past twenty-five years, greatly to the benefit of the people, as the decrease has tended to cheapen the necessaries of life. If a barrel of flour is now carried a thousand miles for sixty cents when twenty-five years ago the cost of such service was $3.50, it means a saving of $2.90 a barrel to consumers. In the present mode of distributing breadstuffs 62,000,000 barrels of flour (which is our present home consumption for a year) are carried on an average 1,000 miles. The saving of $2.90 a barrel to consumers means the aggregate of $180,000,000. Nothing more forcibly than this statement exhibits the enormous gains to the masses of the people which mechanical appliances bring, but which they do not adequately appreciate. And bread is only 10 per cent. in its cost of the food consumed by our people, and mechanical industry, including railroads, gives almost an equally large saving to the masses in the other foods consumed. Some idea of the magnitude of the work done for our people by railroads alone is shown in the fact that during 1890 they carried one ton of freight 1,250 miles for every man, woman, and child of the population. In the end all these wonderful appliances have not favored individuals alone, but the whole race. The earnings of the year per passenger mile were 2.185 cents, against 2.198 cents the year before, and the earnings of the roads per ton mile of freight were .935 of a cent, against 1.057 cents in 1889. The net earnings on the capital invested averaged 3.4 per cent. Railroads have been the greatest civilizers of the world. The missionary enterprises of Christendom have been as nothing compared to them in raising the human race to higher levels, and securing food, clothing, and shelter, and the manifold blessings which come with the better modes of life which those tendrils of the earth's great heart have made possible. The cause of true civilization has been advanced further during this century than during all the other centuries of the historic period, for more has been done during this time to subjugate the forces of Nature to man's uses. No matter what may be the intentions or motives of the men who have built the railroads, they have simply been agents in the hands of an all-wise Intelligence in carrying out His plans for the betterment of the whole human family.—Pullman Journal.

Armies of Civilized Nations.

The armies of the world, or rather of the civilized nations, include 3,600,000 men. These men, and almost as many more who are required to wait upon them in some form or other, are consumers, and not producers, of the world's supply of food. Besides the loss of their time and labor, they cost at least $1,000 a year each, and that amounts to $3,600,000,000.

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN NERVINE TONIC
—AND—
Stomach AND Liver Cure
The Most Astonishing Medical Discovery of the Last One Hundred Years.
The Great South American Nervine Tonic
Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stomach. No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incalculable value who is affected by disease of the stomach, because the experience and testimony of many go to prove that this is the ONE and ONLY ONE great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.
HARRIET E. HALL, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to the Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration, and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors, with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly."
MRS. ELLA A. BRATTON, of New Ross, Indiana, says: "I cannot express how much I owe to the Nervine Tonic. My system was completely shattered, appetite gone, was coughing and spitting up blood; am sure I was in the first stages of consumption, an inheritance handed down through several generations. I began taking the Nervine Tonic, and continued its use for about six months, and am entirely cured. It is the grandest remedy for nerves, stomach and lungs I have ever seen."
No remedy compares with SOUTH AMERICAN NERVINE as a cure for the Nerves. No remedy compares with South American Nervine as a wondrous cure for the Stomach. No remedy will at all compare with South American Nervine as a cure for all forms of failing health. It never fails to cure Indigestion and Dyspepsia. It never fails to cure Chorea or St. Vitus' Dance. Its powers to build up the whole system are wonderful in the extreme. It cures the old, the young, and the middle aged. It is a great friend to the aged and infirm. Do not neglect to use this precious boon: if you do, you may neglect the only remedy which will restore you to health. South American Nervine is perfectly safe, and very pleasant to the taste. Delicate ladies, do not fail to use this great cure, because it will put the bloom of freshness and beauty upon your lips and in your cheeks, and quickly drive away your disabilities and weaknesses.

THE AUBURN COURIER

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY.

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana, postoffice as second-class matter.

THURSDAY.........JANUARY 21, 1892.

To the Democrats of DeKalb County.

Pursuant to the call of the State Central Committee, democrats and all others who wish to co operate with the democratic party, will, on

SATURDAY, JAN. 30, 1892,

at 2 o'clock p. m., meet at the usual places of meeting in their respective precincts: First, for the election of precinct committeemen, who will become members of the county central committee.

The members of the county committee will meet at Auburn, Feb. 6, 1892, at 2 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of organization, election of chairman, vice-chairman, secretary and treasurer and executive committee.

I earnestly request a full attendance at each of the above meetings.

Ab Kelley, Chairman.

J. F. Shuman, Secretary.

Walter A. Woods, one of the reaper men, died at Hoosick Falls, N. Y., this week.

State convention of the Indiana prohibitionists will be in Indianapolis, June 8 and 9.

The Grant family have realized nearly half a million from the sale of the general's memoirs.

Geo. V. Howk, ex judge of the Indiana supreme court, died at his home in Evansville, Jan. 13.

Judge Woods' appointment as Federal judge on the new court, will be fought. Vorhees and Turpie, will help to expose his rottenness.

Blaine was suddenly taken sick the other day, while working at the Chile matter. Is he really sick, or is this one of his old Mulligan tricks?

Preparations for war, especially in the navy, are going on, for while we hope for peace, it is well to be ready for war in case we must have it.

Hon. Hiram Iddings of Kendallville, died last Thursday, Jan. 14. He was about 80, and one of the most widely known citizens of Northern Indiana.

Republican district meeting is held in this city to-day, and we presume that all great minds that believe high import duties are blessings, will be on hand, to tell the dear people how it is done.

Judge Holman's resolution passed the House, pledging that all appropriations must be kept within the needs of the country, and not in favor of subsidies or any class legislation. That's right.

Judge McClellan's first bill offered in this congress, provides that judgment rendered in the United States court shall not be a lien on real estate in any other state than the one in which the court is situated.

Prince Albert Victor, eldest son of the Prince of Wales, died last Thursday of congestion of the lungs. He would have been king next after his father. Now, his next brother, Prince George takes his place.

Where, oh where is that American tin industry? Will some of our republican exchanges copy something from the Indianapolis Journal, the Inter-Ocean or the New York Press, on this rapidly expiring subject?

The triumph of John Sherman over Foraker is not particularly a triumph for honesty, for one is as dishonest as the other, and both are accused of using money. The great difference is Sherman has more sense and ability than Foraker.

Sergt. John Levich of Indianapolis, is one of the few survivors of the famous Light Brigade that Tennyson wrote about. One of them, Michael Lehan, died in Pittsburg about three years ago, and it is claimed that Thomas Day, a farmer near Vevay, Ind., is another.

Bussey, assistant secretary of the interior has decided that the legal date of the beginning of the rebellion is March 4, 1861, as the acts of congress indicate that date. The supreme court had, however, fixed on April 19, 1861, the date on which Lincoln issued a proclamation that he would blockade the rebel ports.

Springer has already put in a bill to place wool on the free list, and reduce the duty on imported woolen goods. Bryan, of Nebraska, has also a bill, putting lumber, lath, shingles, twine, salt, barbed wire etc., on the free list. The intention is to make cheaper, all those articles of necessity in use by the common people.

Ft. Wayne did not secure the democratic state convention. It goes to Indianapolis as usual. The date of the convention is fixed for April 14. This is rather early, but we presume no one will seriously object. Many years ago it was the custom to hold it Jan. 8, "Jackson's Day," but for several years now it has been about the middle of summer.

Democrats should begin to talk up the system of making nominations by a regular primary election. And it would not be a bad idea to use the Australian system.

There is a growing sentiment in congress and out in favor of electing postmasters by a vote of the people. Had this been the law for ten years past, Cleveland would have been re elected.

Nitrate beds in Chile constitute what is down on geographies as the "Desert of Atacama," once supposed to be worthless. The earth contains niter, soda, potassium, magnesia, chlorine, iron, sulphur, etc., all valuable in commerce.

Chile has a population less than three millions, and some of these, mixed blood. We have over 65 millions. We agree with Blaine and Alger, that to make war on so weak a nation, is not desirable if it can be avoided. Blaine's enemies say he don't want war, because he has money interests in Chili. But whether he has or not his position seems reasonable.

The Lagrange Standard has by the assistance of the "usual" Indianapolis Journal, again unearthed the "prominent democrat, who once resided in the Ft. Wayne congressional district." Of course, like the others, this one is a myth, and if real would be the prince of liars. But certain republican papers not having the ability to write their own editorials, borrow such truck of the Journal.

The democratic district meeting at Ft. Wayne elected W. Rockhill as committeeman for this congressional district. He is on the staff of the Ft. Wayne Journal, and will be a good man. At the meeting of the district committee men, in Indianapolis January 13 Mr. Thomas Taggart, auditor of Marion county, was made chairman of the state committee. He is already chairman of his county, where he has done good work in keeping the city of Indianapolis in the democratic column.

One of the Vanderbilts is trying to bring a foreign built pleasure yacht into this country without paying the duty. Now will some republican editor explain why he objects to a duty, which as they claim the foreigner pays? And in any case, they say the duty makes a thing cheaper. The very fact that a duty is levied on foreign made ships, ought to make ships cheaper here, and in fact start up the building of ships same as they claim for tin business. How is it, republican editors?

At the democratic meeting at Ft. Wayne Jan. 8, a resolution was passed, complimenting Ex-President Cleveland on the succes of his administration. Some of those present wanted to have him endorsed for president this year, but Harry Colerick the "man-not-afraid-to-hear-his-own-voice-frequently," objected. So that part was left out. Among other notes of this meeting that we find in the Lagrange Democrat, are these two, which will interest our people.

"Under the new rule forty-six delegate votes will be required to nominate a congressmen. Allen has 38; DeKalb, 15; LaGrange, 7; Noble, 14; Steuben, 6; Whitley, 11."

"Judge Zollars is frequently spoken of as an excellent candidate for Governor. He at least belongs to the heavy-weight class from which the nomination should this year be made."

"There is some sentiment in favor of a third term in Congress for Mr. McClellan. Outside of his personal friends in DeKalb county some leading citizens, and among them Judge Zollars, are said to be quiet advocates of the scheme."

War with Chile is not probable. Nations do not go to war generally, at the present time for quarrels of this kind. True, Chile has insulted us, but she will likely apologize and make other reparation. The origin of the trouble, was the foolish and imprudent course of Mr. Egan, our minister there. He was a lately imported Irish agitator who had helped to elect Harrison and was paid by being made a foreign minister. He has proved himself totally unfit. Had Harrison promptly recalled him, when the dissatisfaction against him first was made known by the Chileans, there would have been no trouble. But Harrison seems to have desired a fuss, for he knew that with a weak nation like Chile he was sure our government would be the winner, and that would make the people like his administration. So Egan was retained against the wish of the Chileans, and trouble began. A good chance for a row occurred when a lot of sailors belonging to our warship, Baltimore, were allowed to go on shore in the city of Valparaiso. Whether they or the Chileans drank too much is not yet known, but a racket was soon started. Two of our men, one being an English subject, were killed and several injured. Our government properly asked Chile to disavow the act, and to make reparation. This she will probably do, but she has been slow about it, the delay being caused partly by the unfriendly feeling towards us. Harrison in his message to Congress said some things that Chile denied, and her foreign secretary went so far as to intimate that Harrison lied. This is the worst feature of the whole business, and the hardest to smooth over. She will have to take this back squarely and fairly, and as she had sent the original insult all over the world to her ministers she will now have to send them the full retraction or fight. It is a bitter pill for her, but we have no doubt she will do it. While our people are solid in their devotion to our own country, we do not forget that our own imprudence, has helped to create and keep up the trouble. A prudent man like Cleveland would have ended the trouble early by decisive yet respectful action. It should be noted right here, that Mr. Blaine, who was thought most anxious for a foreign war, has been much more wise and conservative than Harrison. He evidently feels that a powerful nation like the United States can afford to be patient and dignified in a quarrel with a nation that is one of the weakest. After Chile apologizes, as we believe she will, then she should pay a good money indemnity for the one English man and one American killed, and for the injured. Then our own government should call Egan home, and send in his place a man who would properly represent us. But of course, if Chile does not apologize, we will have to send ships there at once, capture their chief seaport, Valparaiso, then their nitrate mines, and so cut off their revenues, and then when the war is over, give the nitrate mines back to Peru, from which nation Chile stole them.

An Auburn Inventor.

Rev. J. W. Stringfellow is coming to the front as an inventor. It was not long ago that he invented a nut lock, a device to keep a bur or iron nut from turning off and getting loose. On this he procured a patent, and we believe he sold the right for the United States. Now he has brought out another invention, and one that will we believe not only be a success, but will come into general household use. It is a bread trough, and is so arranged that the dough will be kept warm and at a nearly uniform temperature while it is rising. This will prevent delays and the accidental changes that so often prove vexatious to the good house wife and fatal to the quality of the bread. His plan is to have the bread trough lined with tin, and then inside of this, is a second trough, of the same shape as the other, but an inch or two smaller, and wholly of tin. In this interior trough the dough is placed, and the space between the two troughs is filled with warm water. This arrangement secures uniform temperature, the dough rises quicker, and so regularly, that much trouble and care are avoided, and we get much better bread. It can also be used in summer as a milk cooler, by keeping cold water between the troughs instead of warm water. He has applied for a patent, and parties in Goshen, are going to make and handle them for him. We hope he will not only do mankind a service, but himself reap a solid benefit.

Indianapolis and her Resources, is the title of a finely illustrated book issued by the Indianapolis Sentinel Company. As its title indicates, it deals with Indianapolis business and her business men, including of course many of the names otherwise well known over the state. It is profusely illustrated by business blocks, monuments, etc., and by portraits of the men who have done much to make our capital a prosperous and enterprising city. Among the faces one sees, are those of Ex-Senator McDonald, the present state officers, including Gov. Hovey, Hon. Nicholas Ensley, and many others, who are well known all over the state. It is a handsome volume and should be a valuable advertisement to the city, as it is a credit to the good taste and enterprise of the Sentinel Company.

Making the Fog Less Dangerous.

A machine for automatically blowing a fog whistle has just been patented. A vessel equipped with the machine may travel at any rate of speed and continue to blow one or three blasts of the whistle per minute while proceeding through a fog. Many steamers use it—on the lakes, for instance.—New York Journal.

Mole, Remove Hence.

To remove moles get five cents' worth of muriatic acid, and three times a day touch the mole with a toothpick dipped into the acid. It will come off in about a week leaving a red spot on the face. Let that spot alone and it will heal.—New York Journal.

The Washington Star of Jan. 9, has likenesses of nearly every member who is chairman of a committee. Judge McClellan's picture is by no means a flattering one but we ought to be satisfied, as we never before had a member in the list of chairmen, and a poor picture in that honorable list is better than none.

Frank Forlow, the well known Hicksville lawyer was last week arrested at Defiance on a charge of forgery. It is claimed he had forged notes on his father and grandfather. A prominent professional man of Garrett, who has heard Dr. Jahu DeWitt Miller a number of times at the various assembly meetings. In speaking of his lecture to be given in this place said, "Auburn will no doubt show its appreciation of having such a lecturer, by giving him a very large audience. Well it can not afford to do otherwise."

The familiar face of Byron Grube shone into our sanctum Monday. He was on his way to visit his people south of here, and the old neighbors generally, and wouldn't go through town till he had paid up the COURIER. His home is now at Flint, Steuben county, and he is doing well. He and his family came through in a sleigh and in spite of the storm found it a pleasant trip.

Mrs. John Robbins has sung in the Presbyterian choir for a Sunday or two, and last Sunday there was, except Mr. Scott, an entire new choir. Mr. Hanna, Mrs Robbins, and Mrs. Cuppy sang with Mr. Scott, and Myrtle Dills played the organ. But they all got along well. Miss Hoffman and Miss Hartman were sick and Walter Hartman and Mr. and Mrs. Yesbera were absent.

J. W. Baxter has purchased the machinery and other material of the Waterloo buggy box factory, and leased the ground and will continue the business as it was before the stop. He will likely have J. R. Duncan as foreman, which will insure good management. Orders for several thousand bodies are already in, and any amount more can be had, thus insuring a reliable patronage. We believe this step will prove a profitable one and that the industry will under this management be prosperous and build up a large and successful business. We hope so anyway.

Mr. McIntosh's big iron fence and outside hitching post seem to have the luck in catching runaway teams. Tuesday afternoon a team with a light sleigh ran off down Main street, and after getting loose from the sleigh, struck one of Mr. M's posts, and were thrown in a heap. They were not damaged much.

"Tales From Town Topics," No. 2, has made its appearance with all the airy self-satisfaction of the first volume. Possibly a real nice young lady should not read the book. Real nice young ladies should not read de Maupassant, Gautier, Byron or Swineburne, and perhaps the publishers of "Tales From Town Topics" have given as little thought to the sensitive souls of real nice young ladies as the writers named did when they went into literature so boldly. The stories, poems and witticisms contained in the volume are evidently selected with much discrimination from the files of the well-known society journal. [Town Topics Publishing Co., 21 West 23d street, New York.]

Harper's Magazine for February will contain an article on the "Old Shipping Merchants of New York," written by George W. Sheldon, and illustrated by C. D. Gibson and F. H. Schell. It will be a surprise to some to learn that these merchants, who exercised so important an influence on trade during the first half of the century, left no successors. They were men who owned, wholly or in part, the packet and clipper ships of the Trans-Atlantic service, and they did a large business in exporting. But where is the American house that exports to day? The business is in the hands of foreigners, and is done so differently that were the doers of it fifty years ago to make their appearance on 'Change, they could not understand what is going on.

There was a sound of hollering by night, and DeKalb's capital aroused up then her shivering chivalry; and bright the electric lights shone o'er half frozen men. A score of feet skipped rapidly, and when——they reached the Catholic parsonage in the west part of town, the head and shoulders of a man appeared at an open window shouting out through the frozen air, "murder!" It was the priest, who had become frightened at some noise that made him feel certain that burglars were breaking in. No trace of them could be found, however, and the shivering neighbors soon dispersed. The reverend gentleman has a good voice, for it was plainly heard down at the public square by Nightwatch Baker and Frank Benedict, both of whom went to the scene of the trouble. All this happened Monday evening in the snow storm.

JOHN H. SCOTT.

The Course of True Love.

Some one says it never runs smooth. This may however, be only an old-time notion. But some cases, seem to prove its truth. One cold evening last week, Deputy-prosecutor Garwood was aroused at the unpleasant hour of eleven p. m. by a vigorous ring at the door. Hastily doing a little needed toilet work, he came down stairs and cautiously opened the door. There stood several men talking excitedly, and one held in his strong right hand a good sized club. The group had such an uncanny look, that Mr. Garwood hesitated, till he could find out something as to what they meant and wanted. They replied, they had had a racket at the Junction, and wanted a man arrested. It turned out that a young man down there, named Morton Reeder, had been paying attentions to one of the men's daughter, a Miss Steffen. The girl's parents objected, and Reeder had armed himself with a revolver and club. To make a long story short the parties met by accident at the home of a Mr. Howlett, and a row ensued. Reeder, got in some blows with his club, but this was taken from him. Then he pulled out his revolver, and this too, was captured, and he was obliged to get out The men came up town, as before noted, having both captured weapons along. The next day when ~~Constable Stoner~~ went to make the arrest, he found Reeder parading about the Junction with a shot gun. Stoner persuaded him that "this cruel war was over," and he was brought up town, and on Monday, was fined $5 and costs in the court, for carrying concealed weapons, and after that was put under $300 bonds to appear at next term to answer the charge of attempting to use a deadly weapon.

Court.

Business is booming in the halls of justice. As noted before, Timmerman, one of the parties who burned Ab. Kelley's barn at Waterloo, was sent to to prison two years, his partner getting clear. We note in another article the result of the cases against Morton Reeder. James D. Campbell, of Waterloo, was appointed receiver for the Waterloo factory that had failed, giving $1000 bonds. The material had already been purchased at sheriff sale by J. W. Baxter, and a receiver was needed to enable Mr. B to lease the ground and go on with the business. Abigail and Henry Frick have got their divorce. She gets $500 alimony, payable $100 at a payment, the longest to run three years. McNagny, of Columbia City, and T. E Ellison, of Fort Wayne were here Tuesday and Wednesday trying a case brought here on change of venue, Ferguson Lumber Company vs. Deether. It was a case on account and was not concluded when we went to press. After this case came that of Gaskell vs. Keller, a case from Fort Wayne. Gaskell, a young man, worked for J. O. Keller, in a factory where he makes dental instruments In adjusting a small belt or transmitter Gaskell got his arm broke, and now sues Keller for damages. It will be an important case and a hard fight. The case of Van Anken vs. Hook came up last week in the court at Albion but was dismissed on account of some technical irregularity.

The Auburn Lecture Course.

Auburn will have a first-class lecture course, beginning Feb. 10. This is settled and all arrangements have been made. The first of the course will be by the famous Drummer Boy of Shiloh, proved to be the youngest boy to enter the service as a drummer, and who is besides, a drummer of most marvelous skill and power. He is also a great traveler, having traveled extensively in the East, and especially in Palestine, the "Holy Land." These travels will be the subject of his lecture Feb. 10, when he will give

"IN EASTERN LANDS."

The next evening he will give his no less famous lecture, or narrative to which so many ex-soldiers have listened with rapture,

"THE BATTLE OF SHILOH."

These lectures will be illustrated with his superior Stereo Scopticon Tarnsparencies, and on each occasion, he will display his wonderful skill as a drummer.

The next in the course will be the famous impersonator whose wonderful powers of transforming his appearance, some of our people have seen. In this, he is unapproachable. He will be here Feb. 18.

G. PAUL SMITH,

On March 4, we have

MISS JULIA F. LEE,

the "Queen of the Platform," as she is regarded by those who have heard her. She is a lady of wonderful gifts.

The next in the course, March 25, will be the great Shakespearian reader,

JAMES KAY APPLEBEE,

who will appear in Hamlet, one the most wonderful of the Shakespearian plays.

Following this, and concluding the course, will be,

LIEUT. L. B. BAKER,

who captured Wilkes Booth, the assassin of Lincoln, and who will lecture on that terrible tragedy, the assassination and the capture, with all of which he is personally familiar.

The price of a ticket to each lecture is 35 cents, except that of G. Paul Smith, which is 50 cents, making the cost of the entire course, $2.25. But season tickets will be sold for the entire course at $1.50 each, thus making a great reduction to those who take the entire course. These season tickets will be so arranged, that anyone holding them can have any one of the tickets or coupons, used by any one of his family, or by a friend, so that in case he cannot go himself, the ticket can be used by another, and no loss can result. It is hoped that everyone who can possibly do so, will assist in sustaining this lecture course. Auburn has not had one for some time, and has in this regard been behind some other towns. The gentlemen who have undertaken this, are not only public sprited themselves, but they feel that our citizens generally feel the same way, and will help to make it a grand success.

Unclaimed Letters.

Unclaimed letters remaining in the postoffice at Auburn Ind., for the week ending Jan. 15 1892. Alice Hamilton, C. E. Campbell, Patrick Welch.

Claimants will please call for letters in advertised list.

IT will cost nearly $1,000,000, it is said, to put new wings on the White House. What we need more than this is new wings for certain politicians in that neighborhood.

A NEW edition of the Bible is being prepared by some American scholars. If they wish to dispose of modern skepticism they would better add a foot-note giving the authority for that whale story.

PUBLISHERS of religious papers make a mistake when they try to force their publications upon unwilling people, as in the case of the Baptist editor with Col. Ingersoll. But Ingersoll's rude fling at the faith of a great denomination does not suggest that he has a higher plane as a gentleman than the impertinent editor.

TWENTY prisoners in the Michigan penitentiary are to be released because of the decision that the law providing for undeterminate sentences—under which they were sent to prison—is unconstitutional. It is no new thing to see rascals go unpunished because of legal technicalities, but a wholesale release of convicts is a new thing even for quibbling lawyers.

FRANCE has lost no time in moving into line with Russia's policy, and has picked a quarrel with Bulgaria because that plucky little nation has expelled a French journalist, who was maligning all things Bulgarian. Will France now take the liberty of going up past the Sultan's forts into the Black Sea, with a view to giving Bulgaria a lesson? This would be pretty certain to bring about a disturbance in Europe.

KING LEOPOLD of Belgium, who passes for a very liberal monarch, has just been entertaining at lunch several hundred workmen long engaged on the repairs of one of his palaces. This is mentioned in the European papers as indicating a wondrous condescension of kingship. But it will hardly attain the end for which it was done. Belgium is filled with workingmen's societies between which and monarchy there can be no reconciliation.

THERE is sore trouble in Harvard College because a secret society brands its novitiates on the arm with lighted cigars. "Six deep and savage burns from elbow to shoulder" is the way in which a young gentleman recently initiated into this organization of educated youth characterized the ordeal. Under the present theories of higher education the parent who sends a son to college should cultivate the same spirit of resignation to possible disaster manifested by him who sends his first-born to the war.

IT may be felt that the action of the Belgian Government in prohibiting the exercise of hypnotism for exhibition unless permission is given by a special license costing 20,000 francs is a trifle arbitrary, but there can be no question of the general assumption that the hyhnotic power is too dangerous to be a legitimate means of popular amusement. Physicians and scientists are still at liberty to make scientific investigations, but in Belgium, at least, there is to be no more idle trifling with the mysteries of hypnotism.

GERMAN newspapers are printing the assertion that the weight of the World's Fair buildings will cause them to break through the crust of the earth, with the result of precipitating the entire city of Chicago forty feet and submerging it under Lake Michigan. But nobody need stay away from the fair on this account. It is probable that the German papers are mistaken, but if their prophecy were fulfilled the city and the show would go on just the same. Chicago is not only a phœnix in a fire—it is a duck in a deluge. The elements are Chicago's most humble servants.

PROF. BILROTH, in an address in Vienna recently on casualties in battle, said that the percentage of combatants wounded by bombs or cannon balls on modern battlefields is slight compared with those incapacitated by rifle bullets. From observations of battles in the Franco-Prussian war he found that wounds inflicted by cavalry or artillery are comparatively rare. About 80 per cent. of all casualties were inflicted by bullet wounds, 15 per cent. came from artillery and 5 per cent by the saber or bayonet. Furthermore, it is a fallacy to suppose that the majority of wounds caused by artillery or bombs end fatally. The deduction is that the principal study of army surgeons sholud be directed toward relieving wounds caused by rifle bullets.

W. R. GOODALL, a Chicago newspaper man, has just sold a play to Roland Reed which the actor declares gives him the best opportunity of his life for genuine comedy work. The play will be first given next spring at the Boston Museum and will doubtless score a splendid and immediate success. Boston does not produce much of anything nowadays in the way of literary or dramatic art, but what it has lost in the creative faculty it has gained in the critical. Chicago is glad to write books and plays for Boston—proud of the honor and confident of the verdict. Boston naturally demands what Chicago gives—the best.

IN the case of Kraus, the New York druggist's boy who sold oxalic acid for salts, the proprietor of the pharmacy who left an ignorant youth in charge is the one that should be prosecuted. Important lessons are often conveyed in the "true words spoken in jest" in humorous writings. Charles Dickens excelled in the art of corveying needed public monitions in this this way. In Bardwell vs. Pickwick a dispensing chemist whom the judge refused to excuse from serving on the jury said: "My lord, there will be murder. I have left, to come here, my shop in charge of a young assistant whose prevailing opinion is that epsom salts and oxalic acid are the same thing."

CHINA, as was expected, will take no part in the World's Fair at Chicago in 1893. It is to be regretted, because the Chinese exhibit at the Centennial was one of the most beautiful and interesting of all. The exhibition, however, will be a success. Attention is being directed to it all over the world. New York is now coming forward, and although the Sun is doing its best to prevent an appropriation being made by that State, its opposition will not avail. New York is a great State and a wealthy one. It owes its prosperity almost entirely to the rest of the country—particularly the West. New York cannot afford to be mean or small in matters of this kind.

IT is now time to call John Chinaman to a halt. The Chinese "rebellion" appears to be another name for a deliberate wholesale attack upon civilization, wherever it has taken root in the miscalled Celestial Empire. If China expects to escape punishment for such misdeeds as the slaughter of more than a thousand native Christians, the massacre of missionaries, and the spreading throughout the empire of documents reviling Christianity, she will find herself vastly mistaken. Let us hope that the United States will be represented in Chinese waters, when the time comes to bring John back to his senses, by at least two or three good war ships. John is anything but Celestial just now.

IT has always been cause of wonder that in the act of Congress authorizing the World's Fair the women's portion of the national body was designated the board of "lady" managers. With precisely like right the commission should have been called the board of "lord" managers. "Lady," whatever its original source, when used in conjunction with public duty means in good English the wife of a lord. We dispensed with "lords" in this country a little more than a hundred years ago. Man is the noblest work of God, and woman is correlative of man. President Palmer said at the Delmonico banquet that he regretted the mistake. To express this regret—which every person not illiterate or vulgar, if American, must feel—in so conspicuous a place and to make no effort to correct the implied flunkeyism, which is laughable as well as vulgar, is not becoming the most distinguished national officer of the World's Fair. Let the official designation be altered by authority to "the Women's Board, World's Columbian Exposition." Does President Palmer know that another egregious error was committed in issuance of commissions to the women? They were described as "Mrs. General" Tom Thumb, etc., instead of by the names they bear as women, not as wives or daughters or widows or other relatives of men having no relation to the World's Fair. Since the fair is to stun the world with its wonders, it would be well to have all its incidents arranged decently.

The Pasha and His Watch.

On the occasion of the Empress Eugenie's visit to Cairo in 1869, Nubar Pasha was presented by Napoleon III. with a valuable watch richly set with diamonds. This watch he was in the habit of laying before him on the table during the meetings of the council which were generally held in the evening. At one of the sittings the electric light suddenly went out. When it was turned on again Nubar's watch had disappeared. The Pasha scrutinized the faces of his colleagues one after the other, but not one winced under his gaze. At length he said: "Gentlemen, the watch that, according to my custom, I had lying here before me, has been removed. The door is locked on the inside, nobody has entered the room in the meantime and nobody has gone out. I attribute the loss of the watch to a bad joke or a fit of abstraction on the part of one of you gentlemen. I will now turn out the light once more, feeling convinced that when it is turned on again the watch will be found in the usual place." The light was then put out. When it shone brightly a minute later, not only was the place where the watch had lain still vacant but Nubar's bejeweled inkstand, a present from Victor Immanuel, had also vanished. Nubar Pasha never saw these articles again.—National Zeitung.

THE DUTY ON LEAD ORE

HOW IT INJURES THE LEAD INDUSTRY.

Building Up Mexico at the Expense of the United States—Reduce the Duties on Cordage and Rope—Why They Oppose Free Wool.

One Year of the Lead Ore Duty.

McKinley granted the demands of the lead miners of Colorado, and imposed a duty of 1½ cents per pound on the lead content of imported ores. Previous to the passage of the McKinley tariff such ores had been free of duty. The mass of our imports of these ores come from Mexico, being shipped thence to Kansas, Missouri, and other States having large smelting works, where they are smelted with the silver-lead ores of the United States. The mixture of these ores in the smelters reduces the cost of production considerably. The lead ore miners of Colorado believed that were a duty put on Mexican ores the price of their lead would be advanced. They cared little for the injury which such a course would bring to the smelters and miners of silver-lead ores.

The duty has been in force a year, and its effects can therefore be shown. The production of lead in the leading States, the miners of which secured the duty of 1½ cents per pound on lead ore, in 1890 and 1891 has been as follows:

	Production 1890. Tons.	Production 1891. Tons.
Arizona and California	1,000	1,000
Colorado	60,000	64,000
Idaho and Montana	24,000	25,000
Nevada	2,500	2,500
Utah	24,000	25,000
Total	111,500	117,500

The production of lead in these States increased during the year only 6,000 tons.

The producers and smelters of lead in Missouri, Kansas, Illinois and Wisconsin, who use the imported ores as a flux in the smelting of our own more refractory silver-lead ores, opposed the duty and declared that it would greatly injure their business. The production of lead in these States in 1891 as compared with 1890 was as follows:

	1890. Tons.	1891. Tons.
Lead produced	55,000	40,000

A falling off of 15,000 tons, making the net demand in the production of lead in the States enumerated in 1891 9,000 tons.

How this was brought about is shown by Mr. Bothwell, of the engineering and Mining Journal, in his annual review of the lead industry. Says Mr. Bothwell:

"For a short time indeed, toward the end of 1890, the price of lead was advanced by the McKinley bill, and the smelting charges on dry silver ores were also increased quite heavily, owing to a temporary scarcity of lead fluxing ores, but a more liberal interpretation of the bill of the Treasury Department again allowed the Mexican ore to enter. The price of lead thenceforward declined (though smelting charges did not), and as a final outcome it must be apparent to every one, from a study of these statistics, that the McKinley bill has been an injury rather than a benefit to the lead, and especially to the silver miners of the West.

"This result must set some of the intelligent miners to thinking who profited when they were injured, or at least not benefited, by the legislation which they were told would prove so greatly to their advantage. But had Mexican lead ores continued to come in free, what would have been the result? Undoubtedly the smelting of the Mexican ores would have been done in this country, to the obvious advantage of our metallurgical industry, instead of in works built with American capital in Mexico.

"Lead might have ruled lower in price had a very large amount of ore come in from abroad, but this would have greatly stimulated consumption, and would have kept down smelting charges on dry ores, the mining of which gives occupation to more men than does the mining of lead ores."

Turning from the injurious effects of the duty on the production and smelting of silver-lead ores in the United States to the effect on the production of lead in Mexico, Mr. Bothwell says:

"Previous to 1890, only a few unimportant smelting works existed in Mexico, the product of which was very small, but when the American market was closed to the Mexican miners, who could not afford to pay the heavy freight charges to Europe on the low grade ores, nothing was left for them to do but to establish a smelting industry of their own. The opportunity was promptly seized, not only by them but also by some of the larger American smelters, who found themselves deprived of a portion of their supplies; they, too, went over to Mexico and started up smelting works, which are now partly in operation, and will be entirely so early this year.

"At present the production of lead bullion in Mexico goes on at the rate of about 1,200 tons per month, but very shortly this will be increased to about 2,500 tons, and may by the end of this year amount to 3,000 tons. If this latter figure is reached it will mean that Mexico will thus produce about one-sixth as much as the United States, and there can be no doubt that most of this bullion would have been produced here had not the law been altered in a most deplorably narrow-minded spirit."

Since the duty on imported ores benefits no one in the United States, but has caused great injury to the silver-lead ore producers and smelters, why should it not be repealed?

Truth Will Out.

At the hearings before the Ways and Means Committee, of which Major McKinley was Chairman, and which drafted and passed the tariff bill bearing his name, the woolen manufacturers who testified claimed that there were used in the making of a pound of cloth at least four pounds of greasy wool. These men induced the Ways and Means Committee to adopt the above as the basis of the specific duties on goods to compensate the manufacturers for the duty of 11 cents per pound on wool. They did so, and during the debate declared over and over again that the 44 cents per pound duty on woolen cloth afforded no protection to the manufacturer but merely offset the wool duty.

Truth cannot long be concealed. Now that the present Ways and Means Committee are considering the introduction of a bill putting wool on the free list, and at the same time taking off the pound duty of 44 cents on cloth and reducing the ad valorem rate to 40 per cent., certain manufacturers are opposing this on the ground that such a bill would deprive them of a great deal of protection. Says a writer in The Manufacturer, the organ of the high tariff manufacturers' club of Philadelphia, who signs his article "One who sees only danger to manufacturers in free wool:"

"Manufacturers under the McKinley bill pay 11 cents per pound duty on wool. By importing the light-shrinkage Australian wools, which are the kinds mostly imported, a manufacturer can get out of two pounds of unwashed skirted wool one pound of scoured wool, which is nearly the equivalent of one pound of cloth.

It is claimed that it takes nearly four pounds of unwashed wool to make a pound of cloth. This may be true of the faulty 75-per-cent. shrink wools used in Europe, but never imported; but it is not true of the light, open, shafty, skirted Australian wools that are imported. The waste on the latter averages but slightly above 50 per cent. (A good deal is imported which shrinks only 48 per cent.) This class of wool is so well skirted on the ranch as to require little or no further sorting in the mills.

"The clear shafty wool is all that is imported by American manufacturers. One pound of scoured, clear-sorted wool, free from inferior bits and pieces, as already stated, is almost the equivalent of one pound of cloth. The manufacturer imports two pounds of such wool in the grease, paying 11 cents per pound, or 22 cents on the one pound scoured. As the McKinley bill gives a specific duty of 44 cents per pound—which is in no way assailed by undervaluations, as may be the case with an ad valorem duty—manufacturers have a clear margin of nearly 22 cents per pound protection on every pound of cloth made of these light, fifty per cent. shrunk, skirted, Australian fleeces.

"Assuming that fifty per cent. ad valorem duties wholly cover the difference in wages between the foreign and American mill labor for which purpose this fifty per cent. was imposed, we find that the only margin of real protection against undervaluation is the specific duty on cloth which the free wool advocates now propose to remove.

"The only real margin of surplus protection which American manufacturers now have under the McKinley bill is the margin (be it 22 cents per pound more or less) which they now get as a compensatory duty for the duty upon wool.

"The duty on cloth was fixed under the assumption that the manufacturer paid 44 cents per pound duty on the scoured wool needed to construct one finished pound of cloth. In point of fact he pays but little (if any) over 22 cents per pound on that wool, leaving him a margin of about 22 cents per pound. With free wool he loses this. Will he favor free wool and also favor being brought into closer competition with foreign manufacturers, with only an ad valorem rate on goods that can so easily be avoided by undervaluations and false invoices?"

No wonder that certain woolen manufacturers who, during the last Presidential campaign, paid so much to get the permission of Congress, by a tariff law, to charge a clear bounty of 22 cents per pound on cloth over and above the bounty given them by the duty of 50 per cent. object to being deprived of it so soon. The manufacturer who turns out in his factories legitimate woolen goods and the wool growers, who have the prosperity of the wool and woolen industry at heart, know that free wool will benefit both. It is such wool growers who hope to get political prestige from their labors, and such manufacturers as believe in a tariff for bounty, included with whom are the users of shoddy and other bogus materials, who believe in the McKinley tariff on wool and woolen manufactures.

Reduce the Duties on Cordage and Rope.

The gentlemen who have introduced in Congress bills to put binding twine on the free list, and certain journals which continue to demand that a binding-twine bill shall be the cornerstone of the Democratic policy, can obtain some very useful information from current commercial reports and the statute known as the McKinley tariff act. The commercial reports which might enlighten them are those relating to the price of cordage. Several advances have recently been made by the powerful combination or chartered trust which controls the supply. The Iron Age of the 7th inst. published the following:

"The associated manufacturers (the National Cordage Company) have within a few days made two advances in price, which they are enabled to announce and maintain in view of the fact that they are almost in undisputed control of the market, the outside competition being relatively unimportant. The first of the two advances occurred Dec. 28, when the following prices were announced: * * * The above advanced prices were followed Dec. 30 by the announcement of another advance of ¾ of a cent per pound on manila and 1 cent per pound on sisal and New Zealand. The trade was hardly pepared for such radical advances as the above, especially as the price of the raw material is about the same as for some time."

The Iron Age announced an advance on Oct. 22, and at that time published the new price-list. We give below the prices for rope announced at the three dates mentioned:

CORDAGE PRICES.

	Oct. 22.	Dec. 28.	Dec. 30.
Manila rope	9½	11½	12¼
Sisal rope	6	4¼	9¼
New Zealand rope	5½	7¾	8¾

It should not be forgotten that the first of these lists sets forth an advance of ¾ of a cent per pound, and that the complete lists include hay rope, hide rope, bale rope, lath yarn, and many other kinds of cordage. In the middle of October the price of manila rope was only 8½ cents, and sisal was selling at 5½. The advance in less than three months has been 44 per cent. for manila rope, 68 per cent. for sisal, and 59 per cent. for New Zealand.

The power of the tariff to increase the price of binding twine is now limited to 7-10 of a cent a pound at the outside. The astute Manufacturer, the organ of Mr. Dolan's high-tariff association, recently spoke of "the increased duty upon binding twine, which has tumbled the price of that article within a single year from 12 cents a pound to 8 cents." The truth is, that not only was the duty on binding twine almost entirely cut off, but also the raw materials out of which such twine is made were removed from the dutiable to the free list. The cost of production was thereby largely reduced, and at the same time the power of the ring to raise prices by the aid of a duty on the finished product was almost entirely taken away. This is one of the few good features of the McKinley tariff.

If our friends will stop talking about binding twine and will take up the other kinds of cordage, which are still "protected" by considerable duties, they will show that they have not wholly overlooked the McKinley tariff act and the changes it has made. In the exactions of the chartered trust which so boldly makes these great advances in the other kinds of cordage—advances ranging from 44 to 68 per cent.—there is something which may well engage the attention of the Ways and Means Committee at Washington. A demand for free cordage would mean something. In the case of binding twine there is scarcely anything left to talk about.—New York Times.

THERE is a bright chap sending news from Los Angeles to the papers. He sent an account of a horrible suicide in which the miserable wretch was described as having "first mutilated himself in a horrible way, then cut his head with an ax, took laudanum, stabbed himself over the heart with a big jackknife, and shot himself in the head." The much-lacerated individual lived for several hours because, as the correspondent says, "the knife fortunately glanced on the breastbone and thus saved him instant death." That was fortunate indeed, not so much for the suicide, who escaped instant death to linger in agony for hours, but for the world of newspaper readers, who but for this incident might have never discovered how droll a rural correspondent can be when he doesn't want to.

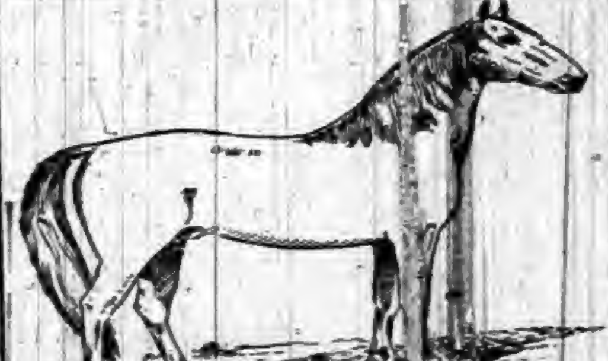
HORSES AND HORSEMEN.

MATTERS PERTAINING TO THE STABLE AND TRACK.

Incidents of the Inaugural Meeting at the Independence Kite-Shaped Track—How to Cool a Trotter—Essential Qualities of a Successful Breeder.

Chestnut Wilkes.

Those who were fortunate enough to attend the now memorable inaugural meeting at the Independence kite-shaped track carried away unfading recollections of more than one exciting contest of the trotters. Among the never-to-be-forgotten struggles of this assembly of star performers was the finish fight in the 2:45 class for trotters, on the closing day of the meeting; not so amazingly fast, to be sure, as the contests of the older campaigners, yet an equally searching test of gameness and stamina and genuine racehorse qualities, and as bitter a fight from start to finish as ever was seen on a race-track. The starters numbered four, and every horse was a heat-winner before the judges awarded the moneys. For three exciting heats the struggle lay between Forest D., an even-money favorite, Williams' good mare Epithet and the bay horse Silas G. Then the race took a turn. McHenry's entry, a large, magnificently formed and richly colored chestnut stallion, who had come out somewhat rank, after bringing up the rear while the race was young, now toned down and seemed positively to improve under the gruelling ordeal of divided heats, as he gave battle to the leaders in the next succeeding mile. From the word to the wire it was war to the knife. Down the long stretch and around the far-away turn the field went closely bunched in the deepening evening twilight. This time McHenry, with the chestnut stallion, was seen to be near the front. Rounding into the homestretch, the contending trotters, one after another, came at the leader with disheartening drives. It was a crucial test of gameness that none but a racehorse will stand. And a racehorse then and there Chestnut Wilkes proved himself to be. With one of those magnificent rallies which come with peculiar fitness in the lengthening shadows of evening, and which mark unmistakably the trotter of unconquerable resolve, he fairly outlasted and outtrotted the party in a succession of desperate drives, landing the heat by an open length from Silas G. at the finish. Chestnut Wilkes in racehorse style proved equal to the occasion and won as he liked.



CHESTNUT WILKES.

The victor, at the conclusion of this drawn-out combat, was at once the cynosure of admiring eyes. The clean, flat legs; the eye, intelligent, mild, yet determined; the broad, smooth back and loin; the enormous propelling power of his hind parts; the depth of shoulder and the general symmetry of form were leading points in his structural excellence greatly to be admired.

How to Cool a Trotter.

When the horse comes in rub him all over, from his ears to his tail and down to his knees, with wash as near the temperature of his body as possible. To make this wash, take one part alcohol, two parts pure witch hazel and three or four times as much soft water as the combined quantity of alcohol and witch hazel. Every muscle should be rubbed thoroughly. Throw a medium weight blanket over the horse now, and let him stand until you have put the bandages on. Use the same wash for the legs as for the body, but have it cold.

After putting the wash on the legs rub them well with the palm of the hand, always rubbing down, never up. Put bandages on immediately after the rubbing. Rub all his heels perfectly dry, with clean, dry rags; care should be taken in this, as cracked heels are very stubborn and often lay a horse up for the season. Throw the blanket back from his head, and scrape out all the wash that remains. Most of it will have entered to pores of the body.

Cover up his shoulders and scrape the the rest of the body; take a clean, dry rag and rub him all over lightly, always rubbing with the hair as much as possible; now put a light hood on him and an extra blanket over his loins, and after looking after his heels again, walk him out for about five minutes; then bring him in, and should he have broken out any while walking, scrape him again lightly, after which give him another light rubbing for say four or five minutes, when he should again be walked for about ten minutes, and again taken in and rubbed slightly, after which put on lighter blankets, and continue to reduce the weight as the heat leaves the body.

Great Two-Year-Olds.

Notwithstanding the remarkable progress made within ten years in breeding trotters and developing early speed, the two-year olds in the 2:30 list are scarce, and any two-year old that trots in 2:30 in a race must be regarded as a horse of rare and exceptional precocity and promise. In 1877 the great Wilkes mare So-So trotted to a two-year-old record of 2:31 and set the world agog, and this record stood unbeaten until 1880. Among some of the best horses of the day we find those that were great as two-year olds. So-So has proved a splendid brood mare, producing All-So, 2:20½; the phenomenal Stamboul, Palo Alto, and Axtell were wonderful two-year-old trotters, and the success of these horses makes the triumphs of other youngsters doubly gratifying to their owners.

Breeding as a Business.

There is no business in the world that requires as perfect knowledge, as thorough training, or the combination of as many essential qualities, both natural and acquired, to make it successful as that of breeding horses. To become so a man must be able to know a horse. This does not mean that he must be able to tell a horse from a street-car, or a draft horse from a thoroughbred, but that he must be able to tell at a glance the degree of perfection at all points that the animal has attained. He must know what families, crosses, and combinations are most likely to bring the best results, and why they will do so. He must know how to buy and handle his brood mares, how to feed them, and how to manage them during foaling time.

After dinner, if you have discomfort and suffering, take Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, or Anti-Bilious Granules. They're made to assist Nature in her own way—quietly, but thoroughly. What the old-fashioned pill did forcibly, these do mildly and gently. They do more, too. Their effects are lasting; they regulate the system, as well as cleanse and renovate it. One little Pellet's a gentle laxative; three to four act as a cathartic. They're the smallest, cheapest, the easiest to take. Unequaled as a Liver Pill. Sick Headache, Bilious Headache, Constipation, Indigestion, Bilious Attacks, and all derangements of the stomach and bowels, are promptly relieved and permanently cured.

They're the cheapest pill you can buy, because they're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned.

You only pay for the good you get.

DONALD KENNEDY
Of Roxbury, Mass., Says:

Strange cases cured by my Medical Discovery come to me every day. Here is one of Paralysis—Blindness—and the Grip. Now, how does my Medical Discovery cure all these? I don't know, unless it takes hold of the Hidden Poison that makes all Humor.

VIRGINIA CITY, Nevada, Sept. 9, 1891.

DONALD KENNEDY—Dear Sir: I will state my case to you: About nine years ago I was paralyzed in my left side, and the best doctors gave me no relief for two years, and I was advised to try your Discovery, which did its duty, and in a few months I was restored to health. About four years ago I became blind in my left eye by a spotted cataract. Last March I was taken with La Grippe, and was confined to my bed for three months. At the end of that time, as in the start, then it struck me that your Discovery was the thing for me; so I got a bottle, and before it was half gone I was able to go to my work in the mines. Now in regard to my eyes; as I lost my left eye, and about six months ago my right eye became affected with black spots over the sight as did the left eye—perhaps some twenty of them—but since I have been using your Discovery they all left my right eye but one; and, thank God, the bright light of heaven is once more making its appearance in my left eye. I am wonderfully astonished at it, and thank God and your Medical Discovery. Yours truly, HANK WHITE.

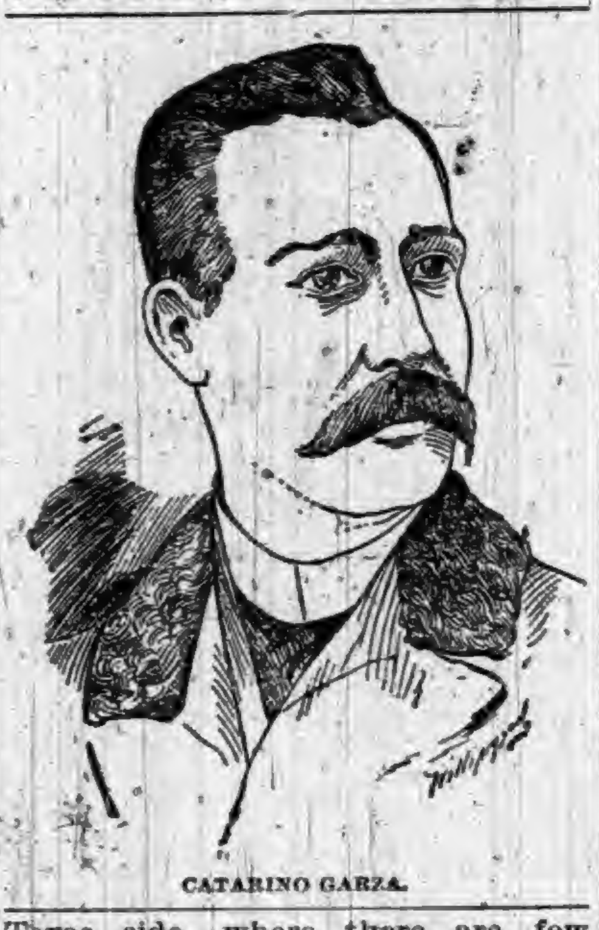
FIGHTING IN TEXAS.

The Little War that Is Raging Along the Rio Grande.

The United States has a little war on hand along the Rio Grande, the dividing line between Texas and Mexico. The fact that so many men have risen to the Presidential chair of Mexico by means of military filibustering has left an influence that is keenly felt in that territory, and thus it is not surprising that at present we find the adventurer, Catarino Garza, trying to create a division that may elevate him to the place now filled by President Diaz. Did Garza confine his operations to Mexico the United States could remain a mere spectator, but unfortunately Garza has violated and is violating the neutrality laws of the United States and as a consequence our Government is opposing him with military force. Already conflicts have taken place between Garza's troops and the United States forces in Texas.

So long as Garza's forces are few there may be enough glory in a conflict for United States troops, but as the Texas side of the border abounds in sympathizers for the adventurer, there is no knowing how many men he may at any time become leader of, and no doubt if able he would plunder our border forts. Garza's policy is to create a small army on the border and then march toward the center of Mexico, trusting to internal disaffection with the present Government to cause a reaction in his favor as President. As the Mexican States bordering on the Rio Grande are well supplied with soldiers, Garza naturally is collecting his followers on the Texas side, where there are few troops and many sympathizers. United States troops under Capt. John Bourke recently defeated the Mexican revolutionists, who then crossed the Rio Grande and marched toward Mier, a stronghold of Garza. Here, however, they again suffered defeat by the Mexicans and once more recrossed the river into United States territory. Along the line of the Rio Grande the United States has now 1,000 troops and preparations are being rapidly made to augment them. Between these two fires Garza seems to be in rather hot quarters, but the changes in Mexican affairs are so many and startling that we would not be much surprised to hear of a considerable number of Mexican troops declaring for the adventurer.



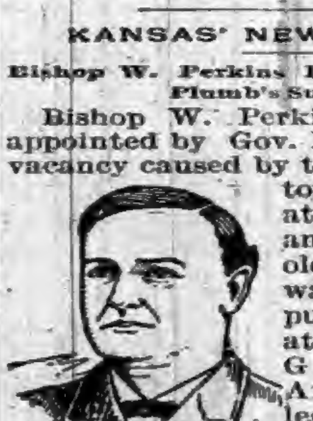
CATARINO GARZA.

Catarino Garza was born in Mexico and reared in Texas. After graduating from the University of Mexico he entered the army, but an act of insubordination sent him to the Texas side of the Rio Grande. While living in Rio Grande City he shot a man named Sebree, and is said to have killed two customs inspectors. At Duval, Texas, he started a paper in opposition to the Mexican Government. Disappearing for a time, he reappeared last September at the head of a revolutionary force, crossed the Rio Grande into Mexico, and was there defeated by Government troops. Since then he has lived the life of an outlaw until a few weeks ago, when he again began active opposition to the Diaz Government.

KANSAS' NEW SENATOR.

Bishop W. Perkins Is the Late Senator Plumb's Successor.

Bishop W. Perkins who has been appointed by Gov. Humphrey to the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Plumb, was born at Rochester, Ohio, and was 59 years old Oct. 18 last. He was educated in the public schools and at Knox College at Galesburg, Ill. After leaving college he went to Colorado and on his return in 1862 enlisted in Company D, Eighty-third Illinois Volunteer Infantry. He served as sergeant and lieutenant and in December, 1863 was appointed Adjutant of the Sixteenth Colorado Infantry. Later he was assigned to duty as Captain of Company C, of the same regiment. He was mustered out at Nashville in May, 1866. He returned to Illinois and resumed the study of law, reading with O. C. Gray, at Ottawa. After being admitted to the bar he located at Oswego, Kas., in April, 1869. The same year he was appointed County Attorney and the following year Probate Judge, which office he held till Feb. 1, 1873, when he was elected Judge of the Eleventh Judicial District. He was re-elected in 1874 and 1878, and in Nov. 1882, was elected a member of Congress as a Republican. He was a delegate to the Chicago convention in 1880. He was re-elected to Congress for three successive terms, but met defeat a year ago at the hands of the Farmers' Alliance. He was editor and proprietor of the Oswego Register from 1871 until appointed District Judge in 1873.



BISHOP W. PERKINS.

THERE is only one real remedy for the weak and wavering mind that finds it so difficult to meet the ever recurring questions of life promptly and decisively, and that is continual practice. He who is conscious of this infirmity of purpose may do much to cure it by strict self-discipline. Having weighed the arguments on each side, or compared the advantages of different courses for a reasonable time, let him compel himself to choose one and refuse the other without longer delay. If he does this regularly and constantly, in small things as well as in great, it will gradually become more and more practicable, and what once appeared to be a herculean task may at length become natural and easy.

STEPHEN B. ELKINS.

Recently Named by the President as Secretary of War.

Stephen Benton Elkins, without having held any high official position, has been a conspicuous figure in national politics for twenty years. He was born in Perry County, Ohio, fifty years ago, and graduated from the University of Missouri when 19 years old. He began the study of law, but before he got a chance to go into practice the war broke out, and he enlisted in the Seventy-seventh Missouri Infantry, serving as a Captain throughout the campaigns of 1862 and 1863. In 1864 he left the army and went to New Mexico, where he was admitted to the bar. He also engaged in mining and stock-raising, and amassed a fortune. In 1865-6 he was a member of the Territorial Legislature, in 1868 and 1869 Attorney General of the territory, and from 1870 to 1872 United States District Attorney. He was elected a delegate to Congress, and served two terms from 1873-77. It was while in Congress that he formed a close friendship with James G. Blaine. He was a member of the Republican Committee for twelve years ending 1884. Since 1875 he has spent most of his time in New York City, though he has made his legal residence in West Virginia.

OUR FIRST BATTLE-SHIP.

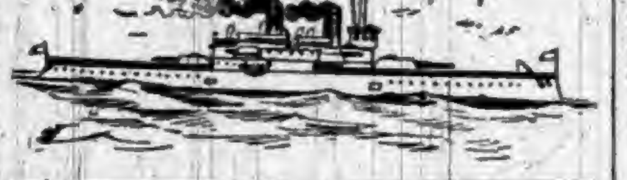
The Magnificent Oregon, Now Building in San Francisco.

The first great modern battle-ship of our new navy, to be known as the Oregon, is now under construction at the Union Iron Works of San Francisco. This is a monster, beside which ships like the Chicago and Newark will look small. She is one of the three largest ships yet planned by the Government.

The Oregon is to have a displacement of 10,000 tons and will be 348 feet long, 69 feet 3 inches wide, and 42 deep. She will cost, exclusive of her armament, about $4,000,000. Her minimum speed is to be not less than fifteen knots. The hull is of unsheathed steel.

Her framing will be on the bracket system, and she will have a double bottom extending from armor shelf to armor shelf and forward and aft. The sides, from armor belt to main deck, will be protected by not less than five inches of steel armor.

Her armament will aggregate 631 tons. It includes four 13-inch breech-loading rifles, weighing sixty tons each, with their mounts, shields, and equipments; four 8-inch breech-loading rifles; four 6-inch breech-loading rifles; sixteen 6-pounder rapid-firing guns; six one-pounder rapid-firing guns, and two Gatlings, will all necessary mounts and shields therefor. It will require 306 tons of ammunition to complete the vessel's fighting outfit.



The Oregon will carry twelve torpedoes. There will be seven above-water torpedo tubes—two forward, one aft and two on each side.

Strange Conduct of a Squirrel.

One day in October last, while walking through a public park, I came suddenly on a remarkable sight. A reddish animal was careering in rapid circles around a wood-pigeon stationed on the ground, and which, in a dazed fashion, kept turning slowly round and round to watch the whirligig performance; in fact, the procedure was almost exactly that which I have seen when a stoat, before killing a rabbit, proceeds to mesmerise it by cutting circles around it, except that the stoat accompanies his circles by wonderful somersaults, which were lacking on the present occasion. The wood-pigeon's behavior was almost an exact repetition of the rabbit's. Arriving so suddenly on the scene, I unluckily startled the principal performer, who stopped; and, to my surprise, I then saw that it was a squirrel. The bird was at first so utterly bewildered that it was several seconds before she sufficiently recovered to fly away. When at last the wood-pigeon had flown off, and not till then, the squirrel also left the scene and betook himself up a tree. It would be interesing to know whether such conduct on a squirrel's part has been noticed before, and what would have been the upshot of the affair had it not been interrupted? Is it to be supposed that the squirrel intended to kill the ring-dove?—Mechanical News.

FREQUENT burglaries alarmed the residents of a Japanese village, as no clew whatever could be obtained regarding the perpetrator. An ingenious fellow, whose home had been plundered, proposed that each villager should write the name of the man he suspected on a slip of paper and put it in a ballot-box. On the votes being examined, it was discovered that fifteen named one man, and the rest were blanks. The robber was so astonished at the result of the balloting that he actually confessed his identity.

THE city of big things. Chicago, is about to erect an apartment house which will contain 707 rooms.

In the Nick of Time.

The nick of time to stop the course of bladder and kidney complaints is when the organs concerned exhibit a tendency to grow inactive. The healthful impulse toward activity that they receive from Hostetter's Stomach Bitters rescues them from impending danger, and averts such dangerous maladies as Bright's disease and diabetes. Sluggishness of the kidneys increases a liability to chronic rheumatism, gout, and dropsy, and since the blood is filtered by these organs in its passage through them, the operation of the Bitters serves a doubly happy purpose. The medicine acts without exciting, like the fiery stimulants of commerce. Malarial, dyspeptic, constipated, and nervous invalids are thoroughly relieved by it. Since the advent of that shocking malady, la grippe, it has been widely demonstrating its usefulness as a curative and preventive of it.

But a Giddy Girl.

"I am not old," says Mrs. Mary A. Livermore, aged 70. "I was at a little gathering of people some four years ago, in which were Dr. Holmes and Mr. Whittier. They got to talking of ages. Mr. Whittier and Dr. Holmes were then near eighty, to which they confessed. 'By the way,' said Mr. Whittier to me, 'you have not said how old you are?' I was then approaching sixty-seven, and when I told them Mr. Whittier said: 'Get thee along, get thee along. Thou art but a giddy girl.'"—Boston Traveler.

"German Syrup"

A Throat and Lung Specialty.

Those who have not used Boschee's German Syrup for some severe and chronic trouble of the Throat and Lungs can hardly appreciate what a truly wonderful medicine it is. The delicious sensations of healing, easing, clearing, strength-gathering and recovering are unknown joys. For German Syrup we do not ask easy cases. Sugar and water may smooth a throat or stop a tickling—for a while. This is as far as the ordinary cough medicine goes. Boschee's German Syrup is a discovery, a great Throat and Lung Specialty. Where for years there have been sensitiveness, pain, coughing, spitting, hemorrhage, voice failure, weakness, slipping down hill, where doctors and medicine and advice have been swallowed and followed to the gulf of despair, where there is the sickening conviction that all is over and the end is inevitable, there we place German Syrup. It cures. You are a live man yet if you take it.

I, H. N. Coffinberry, Auditor in and for said County of DeKalb, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and complete list of all the lands and town lots in said county returned delinquent for the taxes for the year 1890, with the delinquent tax, penalty and interest, and also the tax for the year 1891, to the best of my knowledge and belief.

Notice is therefore hereby given, that so much of the foregoing lands and town lots as may be necessary to discharge the taxes, interest and penalty, and charges due thereon or due from the owners thereof at the time of the sale, will be sold at public auction at the court house door, in the town of Auburn, in said county, on the second Monday in February, A. D., 1892, (the same being the 8th day of said month,) unless such taxes, penalty, interest and charges are previously paid. Sale to commence at 10 o'clock a. m., on said day and continue until all have been offered for sale

H. N. COFFINBERRY, Auditor.

Auburn, Ind., Jan. 11, 1892.

CORRESPONDENCE

WATERLOO.

Isaac Speer is on the sick list.

Our lawyers are now busy over at court.

Geo. Shoner and daughter drove over to Auburn Monday.

Rev. J M. DeWeese began a series of revival meetings Monday evening, at Barker's Chapel.

C. F. Taylor, of Fort Wayne, visited in Waterloo last Wednesday in the interest of an excursion to California.

Mrs. Ryan Clutter was up from Fort Wayne last week giving attention to her property in Waterloo and vicinity.

B. F. Kennedy, who has been in ill health so long, remains about the same, at least no worse—but better if any difference.

J. Lowenstein is reducing his stock of goods at low prices as fast as he can, and will locate at some new point in a few months.

Wm. Swartz, from south of town, was up here on some business, Tuesday. Farmers don't have to clear land in the winter now-a days.

The directors' meeting for the agricultural society is called here for Jan 28, at 10 a. m, in the secretary's office. See Mr. Shuman's notice.

Mrs Chamberlain and daughter, Nettie, and Wilson Shull, have had an attack of the grip. Many others have suffered from it in a less severe form.

Mrs. Knepper with her two children left Tuesday night for Audubon, Iowa, which is to be her future home. Rev. Knepper has been there for some months.

Miss Lulu Rempis entertained the Milton Club last Saturday evening. The members report a very pleasant time, and a delightful sleigh ride going and coming.

Chris Ashleman, of Auburn, was in town Tuesday, and found it rather a cold sleigh ride coming north against the sharp wind. But going home it was better.

Mose Zerkle looks cosy enough in his flag house at the Main street crossing, this cold weather. The Lake Shore road did a sensible thing in putting a flagman here.

The beautiful snow and the jingle of sleigh bells gently reminds us of an old-time winter. Many took advantage of the opportunities for pleasure riding, Sunday.

L. S. Goodwin is extensively in the wood business. He has just bought ten acres of timber from Mrs. Clutter, which will probably make him at least 600 cords. He sells here and at Auburn.

Among those in attendance at Miss Dickinson's wedding last week, was Mr. Henry Willis, her great uncle, who was that day, 82 years old. He is still in pretty good condition for one of his years.

Reuben Ettinger and family, of Angola, were here at the wedding of his son, Edward, last week. Many of our older people, and those at Auburn, will remember him well, as he long resided at both places, and his name occurs often in the "Reminiscences" now running in the COURIER.

Miss Ola Lieb, of Lansing, Mich., came to Waterloo last week to officiate as one of the bridesmaids at the Kennedy-Dickinson wedding. Miss Dickenson and Miss Lieb were classmates together and were graduated at the same time. Miss Lieb is now visiting friends north of town and will visit others before her return home.

The leap year ball given last Thursday by the young married, and young ladies who dance, at the opera house, was a success. The ladies of course, had everything in charge, invited the gentlemen, and entertained them. Probably the hall never looked as well. Handsome curtains at the windows, pictures on the walls and decorations where necessary, completely transformed the place.

As predicted, the buggy box factory has been purchased by Auburn parties, and the business will be continued here, thus giving employment again to a large force of men. Several thousands of bodies are already ordered, and the outlook is for a big summer's work. J. D. Campbell has been appointed receiver, so the change could be made legally, and we suppose J. R. Duncan will be in charge as foreman. A good choice as to both.

The marshal is now ready and at work collecting town taxes. He can be seen at the engine room any day. This reminds us that a COURIER man met the marshal there the other day and had a friendly talk, the two being friends from the ancient days. Mr. Fisher has everything in good shape at the engine room, and a good fire is kept up there day and night during cold weather, so that the fire apparatus will be in good shape, no matter where "old zero" goes to. Everything about the room is neat and in convenient shape, and on the desk lies the big book ready to fix out your tax matter at short notice. There is one thing the writer has heard of in regard to Mr. Fisher, that is especially commendable. He has an eye out to the truant school boys, and when one who is known to have a duty up at the big brick, is seen cavorting on the street, Frank gently reminds him to fly. And he flies. And we are told that school truants on the street are about as scarce as seersucker coats. The plan is good for the schools, and doubly so for the boys. But to return to our call on him. We find him deeply interested in the welfare of his town, not only as to its financial matters, but to its social, moral and educational interests.

A nice little baby boy called on Grant Owens Saturday evening, but Grant was considerably disappointed, but Grant just stop your swearing and you will get your wish next time.

We were aware that Fred Jenkins had a very large heart. Last Sunday it was fully demonstrated. Noticing the large number of girls, would it not be advisable for a double decker while there is sleighing.

DEKALB.
BY F. O. B.

Cedar Chapel was dedicated last Sunday.

The ice crop has been cared for the past week.

The literary is still in good running order at DeKalb school house.

The girls make more disturbance at the literary at DeKalb school house than the boys.

The grip has made its appearance in our neighborhood. George Weygandt is a victim, but has almost recovered.

Mrs. J. F. Housel is able to sit up nearly all day at present, but still continues to be very week. She has had typhoid fever.

Protracted meeting commenced last Sunday evening and a large number of people were present. We hope to see much good done before the meetings close.

James Monroe has made his appearance in DeKalb once more. His mother returned with him from Nebraska where she has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Stroh.

The following mail matter for the month of January, 1892, remains uncalled for at DeKalb postoffice: Miss Jessie Grate; Mr. Geo Vanzile; Mr. John Hardwick. Persons calling for the above will please say advertised.

Jared F. Housel, P. M.

The farmers have been hauling elm hub timber during the past week.

Thomas Cool is on the mend but gains very slowly. He has been sick for several weeks.

The debating society at No. 9 seems to be making some progress. They meet every week.

Electric Bitters.

This remedy is becoming so well known and so popular as to need no special mention. All who have used Electric Bitters sing the same song of praise.—A purer medicine does not exist and it is guaranteed to do all that is claimed. Electric Bitters will cure all diseases of the Liver and Kidneys, will remove Pimples, Boils, Salt Rheum and other affections caused by impure blood.—Will drive Malaria from the system and prevent as well as cure all Malarial fevers.—For cure of Headache, Constipation and Indigestion try Electric Bitters—Entire satisfaction guaranteed, or money refunded.—Price 50cts. and $1.00 per bottle at Robbins & McCord's Drugstore. 5

"Money talks," but to most people it says good bye.

ALAS!

How wretched is the man who has fallen a victim to Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, or diseased Liver, with all the horrible attendants. Look upon the picture. Poor man, being tired of dragging out a miserable existence, he is the picture of despondency; altogether, he is rather a forlorn specimen. Do we pity him? Of course; but at the same time feel assured that in a measure he is to blame for the bad state into which he has fallen. A sure, safe, speedy and easy cure can be found in Simmons Liver Regulator—Nature's own remedy. No mercury or deleterious drugs, not unpleasant to the taste, and always reliable—just such a remedy as you can pin your faith to without a shadow of disappointment. Read the testimonial, don't take our word for it:

"I have been subject to severe spells of Congestion of the Liver, and have been in the habit of taking from 15 to 20 grains of calomel, which generally laid me up for three or four days. Lately I have been taking Simmons Liver Regulator which gave me relief, without any interruption to business." J. HUGG, Middleport, Ohio.

Obituary.

Gladys, only daughter of J. E. & M. E. Dilgard, was born March 29th, 1887, and died Jan. 6, 1892, age 4 years, 9 months and 7 days. Funeral services were held at the residence, conducted by Rev. W. S. Tracy. A goodly number of relatives and friends were present to show their sympathy and give consolation to the bereaved parents. The little form once full of glee and mirth lies cold and silent beneath the earth in the Waterloo cemetery.

But its sweet spirit has taken flight,
As we faithfully trust, to a land of light,
Where is no sickness, sorrow, pain or night
Where Jesus and the angels dwell.

It Should be in Every House.

J. B. Wilson, 371 Clay St., Sharpsburg, Pa., says he will not be without Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, that it cured his wife who was threatened with pneumonia after an attack of "LaGrippe," when various other remedies and several physicians had done her no good. Robert Barber, of Cooksport, Pa., claims Dr. King's New Discovery has done him more good than anything he ever used for lung trouble. Nothing like it. Vick's Floral Guide, 1892.

True and tried friends are always welcome, consequently "Vick's Floral Guide" is sure of a warm reception, especially when dressed as daintily as this year. The "Nellie Lewis" carnation on the front of the cover, and "Brilliant Poppies" on the back, are unusually attractive, and the numerous colored plates of flowers and vegetables are certainly works of art and merit. The first twenty-four pages, printed in violet ink, describes novelties and specialties. Send ten cents to James Vick's Sons, Rochester, N. Y., and procure a copy of this attractive and useful catalogue. It costs nothing, as the ten cents can be deducted from the first order.

Financially Embarassed.

A large manufacturer, whose affairs were very much embarassed, and who overworked and broken down with nervous exhaustion, went to a celebrated specialist. He was told that the only thing needed was to be relieved of care and worry, and have a change of thought. This doctor was more considerate of his patient's health than of his financial circumstances. He ought to have advised him to use Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, the best remedy for nervous prostration, sleeplessness, dizziness, headache, ill effects of spirits, tobacco, coffee, opium, etc. Thousands testify to cures. Book and trial bottle free at F. E. Davenport's. 5

Attracts the attention of every property holder in this city. But when Dr. Franklin Miles, the eminent Indiana specialist, claims that heart disease is curable and proves it by thousands of testimonials of wonderful cures by his new heart cure; it attracts the attention of the millions suffering with short breath, palpitation irregular pulse, wind in stomach, pain in side or shoulder, smothering spells, fainting, dropsy, etc. A. F. Davis, Silver Creek, Neb., by using four bottles of Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, was completely cured after twelve years suffering from heart disease. This new remedy is sold by F. E. This is to certify that I have suffered with hay fever and heart trouble for the last eight years and at times would get so bad that my folks would ring the dinner bell to call the neighbors in and would think I must die. I had four doctors to see me and all that could be done did not seem to help me in the least Then I went to see Dr. A. Y. Rosenbury and at that time I was suffering very much, and he took me through a course of treatment and I soon began to get better, and now I must say that I feel quite comfortable and well. The hay fever don't bother me any and I haven't felt but very little heart trouble for some time. I give this certificate that it may do others good as it has done myself.

CHAPTER V.

WHY IS THE STANDARD

THE ONLY ROTARY SHUTTLE MACHINE?

The "Standard" is the only Rotary Shuttle Machine in the market today. This is not because other companies do not believe in the Rotary principle. On the contrary there are not less than half a dozen Old Timers who have models of Rotary Shuttle Machines in their possession. Why don't they put them on the market? Because there are patents on the "Standard" that are vital to the success of a rotary machine, and although hundreds of thousands of dollars have been spent in trying to devise some means for getting around these patents, they remain impregnable as Gibraltar.

All that is left for our jealous rivals to do is to cry down the Rotary Principle and abuse the "Standard."

Pay no attention to them.

Buy a "Standard."

AUBURN AND VICINITY.

Some Reminiscences of its Early Days and Pioneer Citizens.

It was at this winter term that Cosper Altenburg and W. W. Jones, country scholars did the sweeping and our good friend Philip Noel will recollect that he built the fires to lesson the expense of education. From then till the present time, the attendance of country scholars has been not only a financial help but their assiduity in study, their model deportment, have contributed to the fine reputation of the schools, and influences to a great and valuable extent the ambition of the less studious town pupils.

The school examiners appointed for 1858 were Wm. E. McGonigal, M. F. Pierce and Sylvester Kutzner. These gentlemen were advised to hold at least one public examination in each commissioner's district during the year and possibly there were those who deemed this unnecessary trouble but the people have gradually come to see that to obtain the greatest results from teaching, not only character and scholarship are essential but supervision as well and the county superintendent of schools in this connection is an invaluable officer.

In the fall of 1858, William T. and John M. Kimsey concluded to buy a press and start a paper in Auburn. They conferred with Rev. Ward asking his opinion of the enterprise and he frankly confessed that he did not know whether a republican paper could be sustained or not in this county. It was conceded that Mr. McGonigal of the DeKalb Democrat would for a while, at least, get most if not all of the county printing and the paper would have to take some chances.

The Messrs. Kinney were willing and anxious to make a trial provided voluntary aid was given in the editorial department. This was promised and Orrin C. Clark who ran that fall on the republican ticket for sheriff, vividly recalls his journey from Angola to Auburn with the press for the proposed paper.

The first number was issued October 8, and the outlook measured by advertisements was unfavorable. It was named "The DeKalb County Times" and its motto was "Truth, virtue and righteousness exalteth a nation." The publishers proposed to stand clear of low personalities of every kind and to edit a paper fit for the family circle.

The three months of its publication at Auburn demonstrated that its patronage was insufficient to maintain its continuance, and the establishment was sold and removed to Waterloo.

On the first Monday in February, 1859, was issued the Waterloo Press, the first paper ever printed in the county outside of Auburn and this standard newspaper may justly claim to be the first permanent paper printed in DeKalb county.

T. Y. Dickinson was the original publisher and proprietor, succeeded by Dickinson & Baxter, T. Y. Dickinson, C. K Baxter, Radcliffe & Long, Radcliffe & Kennedy, Baxter & Kennedy, C. K. Baxter, and Frank W. Willis.

The initial number of the "Times" reports what was probably the first fire in Waterloo as follows: "The citizens of the quiet little village of Waterloo four miles north of this place on the railroad were aroused from their slumber about 1 a. m. Sunday morning by alarm of fire. The residence of Mr. Gramling and the almost finished store-room belonging to the same man, which was soon to receive a large stock of goods by J. Kahn & Co., were burned to the ground. It was with difficulty that the American Home, R. J. Lent's and D Till's stores were saved from its ravages. The fire was supposed to have been the work of an incendiary."

Despite the warmth of political controversy, the deeply aroused feelings of parties respecting the disposition of slavery and the rights of slave-owners, the resolutions of antagonistic county conventions and the rivalry for office, the business of the county was conducted with habitual routine and officials then as now made the most of their opportunities in ambiguous constructions of the law on fees. At a special session of the commissioners, called to lease the county poor farm, sealed proposals were received and on comparison, the bid of Peter Barnhart was found most favorable to the county and he was given the position.

The cost of assessing the twelve townships was $447.50, and among the assessors was James Cather, who for many a year, up to 1890, had been the assessor for Stafford township. Mr. Cather was a pioneer preacher and a pleasant companion, fond of a joke and good at telling a story. His reminiscences would be entertaining and interesting reading could he be prevailed upon to place them on record.

Bridges were ordered constructed across Cedar Creek, at Uniontown, and at the east end of Seventh street Auburn. Alpheus Wheelock was the builder of a bridge across Little Cedar, in Richland township. Mr. Wheelock has been identified with public works in Auburn, and DeKalb county, more or less up to the present He came from Monroe county, N. Y., in 1855, and alone or in company with John and Joseph McKay and with others, he has built bridges, bridge abutments, put in cement walks, and erected public and private buildings to a greater extent than any other person in the county.

He has a patent for iron abutments examples of which are in use at the bridges at Auburn Junction and at 9th street Auburn, and the iron bridge at the latter place is of his construction.

(To be continued next week.)

Live While You Live.

Human life is not merely an animal existence. The Lord and Master over all created things, intelligent, progressive and aspiring, created us all for some high and noble purpose. That purpose does not consist merely in personal gratification and selfish pleasure, but the end and aim in life is, or should be, to seek to have it said of us that the world was benefited by our having lived in it. How is that end to to be attained? Surely not by a life of inactivity and indifference regarding the welfare of others, but through unceasing exertion--aye a life of energy and toil, and very often one of privation.

"Work while the day lasts," was a wise saying of Him who doeth all things well. We have a duty to perform in this life, and is it not true, that no person can experience real and lasting happiness, where that duty has been neglected? This world is a large field of action, arranged so that there is a place for every willing worker. On all sides are fields of labor, and if one way is closed, another is soon open to those showing inclinations toward industry. Then, does it not become us to live as we should, while we live, and not sit with folded arms, waiting for something more suitable to our tastes and more gratifying to our desires? Ought we not to do whatever our hands find to do, that will better our lives, and add to the comfort of those around us?

"A little word in kindness spoken,
A smile or a tear,
May often heal the heart that's broken,
And make a friend sincere.

A person who speaks a kind word or looks with an appeciative smile upon some lonely, downhearted and low spirited being, who is struggling against the obstacles of an unfortunate career, may be the means of throwing a gleam of sunlight in upon his or her dreary pathway. As long as life lasts, our acts of kindness will not only live in the memory of those who have been benefited by them, but they exert a sweet influence upon our own hearts and have a tendency to make our lights shine brighter in this land of blighting sorrows.

Life is what we choose to make it,—a time of self-improvement and labor for the good of others, or a season of ease and self-indulgence in shallow, uncertain and unsatisfactory pleasures, which vanish like dew drops before the morning sun. We should not in our egotism disdain the aid of others, where willing hands are held out to assist us. We should strive to live, while we live, improving each flitting moment, and seek earnestly to help others. If we endeavor thus to live, the reward will be ours just as surely as the exertions are made to live properly. This will require great patience. We must not become disheartened if we do not at once see the results of our labors, but like the husbandman, patiently await the gathering in of the autumnal fruits. If we misuse the benefits we receive, slight the privileges afforded us, or if we are not influenced by those ennobling emotions, belonging to our higher natures, shall we not be held accountable to Him who is the author of our being? Will not our lives be filled with blighted hopes and sad disappointments, if we pass aimlessly along regardless of life's duties? Does not punishment follow a misspent life? Then let us earnestly contend for the right and live while we live.

In Memoriam.

Mrs. Nancy Wyatt, nee Strong, daughter of Daniel Strong, was born in Geauga county, Ohio, January 8, 1825. In her tenth year, with her parents, she came to DeKalb county, Ind., and found a home on the banks of the St. Joe river, near Newville July 17, 1842, she united in marriage with Wm. Wyatt. In August of the same year they began life on his farm at Concord, where she spent the remainder of her days. To this union 14 children were born, five of whom has died. The husband also preceded the mother to the spirit land.

After a lingering illness Sister Wyatt calmly passed away Jan. 20, 1892, aged 67 years and 12 days. She leaves to mourn her loss, seven sons, two daughters, eighteen grandchildren, and a large number of other relatives and friends.

She was the fourth child in her father's family and lived to see her father, mother and sisters pass over the silent river of death. When sorrow and affliction overtook her, she stood firm, ever looking unto him who is the Rock of our salvation. In her last illness, even while her feeble body was racked with pain, she continued patient, addressing all who came to her bedside, in kind and loving words. She was a gentle, affectionate mother and a good, obliging neighbor.

The funeral services conducted by the writer, were held in the Concord church. It was very largely attended. The sermon was based on Psalms xxxv, 14, the latter part of the verse. The remains were laid in the Bear Creek cemetery.

KING SOLOMON'S MINE.

Money Has Just Been Taken from Mount Ophir, of Bible Renown.

(Chicago Herald.)

On the identical spot where King Solomon procured "gold dust, peacocks and monkeys," a syndicate with $5,000,000 stock issued and a ten-stamp mill erected, has just pounded out $55,000. Mount Ophir, of scriptural renown, is close by. The old rocks, which were too low grade for King Solomon's reduction processes, are being ground up, and they average half an ounce to the ton. This gold field of Solomon's, which has been idle all the centuries till now, is on the Malay peninsula. The people who have gone in to develop it have had to cut seven miles of road through the jungle and clear sixty miles of river. They are just beginning to realize on their investment. The company with the big capital has a concession on twenty square miles of this gold field. The formation is black slate. A shaft sunk 100 feet on the lode has uncovered enough ore to keep the mill going a year. The ore will yield two ounces to the ton. In one place on the concession there is a hill 250 feet high and half a mile long. The company has tunneled into this hill about half way from the bottom and found ore ranging from seven pennyweights to seven ounces of gold. The reef varies in width from two to nine feet. Even the loose rocks scattered about on the hillside yield half an ounce of gold to the ton. The superintendent said to the American consul recently: "I did not think there was anything of this kind so extensive in the world. Wherever you try you find gold." Raub is the modern name of the ancient El Dorado.

Died.

Mary Edna, little daughter of William and Rebecca Swank, was born September 8, 1891; died January 17, 1892.

One little star in the beautiful west—
One little window of light,
One little gleam from the kingdom of rest,
Up through the pathway of stars she's gone,
Up from the shadows to welcome the dawn,
Up from the sorrows of earth's estate,
Safely within the golden gate.

One little tress of her silken hair,
Over my fingers I twine,
One little blossom tenderly fair,
Over near the heavenly shrine,
Gone where farewells come not again,
Gone from this country of anguish and pain,
Gone to the land for which we await,
Safely within the golden gate.

One little flower she plucked long ago,
One l ttle dress that she wore,
One little mound out in the snow,
One never seen there before,
Gone where the beautiful gates are ajar,
Gone where the many mansions are,
Gone where our darling will await,
Safely within the golden gate.

Obituary.

Samuel Swihart was born in Washington Co., Pa., April 11th, 1823. His parents migrated the same year to Stark Co., Ohio, where he lived with them till his marriage with Miss Harriet Traister, on the 22d day of Jan. 1846. In 1848 they came to Auburn, where they have since resided living a quiet, happy, and peaceful life. Mr. Swihart had been a great sufferer from disease for many years, and the last few days and nights of his life were filled with suffering till about 10 o'clock Saturday morning, Jan. 23, 1892, when his spirit quietly and gently left its tenement of clay. Mr. Swihart leaves a wife and four grown daughters to mourn his departure. The daughters are married and all except one are living in distant states. They have lost a kind father; the wife a dear husband; the community has lost an honest, upright and worthy citizen.

The funeral services were at the German Methodist church, at 2:00, p. m., on Sunday, Jan. 24, where were gathered his friends and life-long neighbors to pay the last sad tribute of respect to his memory. The services were by Rev. J. D. Brosy, of the Lutheran church, and he was laid to rest in the Evergreen cemetery. Mr. Swihart was a man highly respected for his honesty and integrity and for many worthy traits of character.

A GOOD many pleasant things are being said about the Czar of Russia because he gave a large slice of his fortune to starving subjects. But who gave the fortune to the Czar, and why are the affairs of his country in such a deplorable condition?

JAY GOULD boasts that he never took a salary from any corporation with which he was connected. To amass such a fortune without drawing pay, suggests that none of the corporations had a cash register or a "look out." There must have been some very tall "knocking down" done.

ASK a girl of 14 who a young man is you see on the street, and she will say, "That is Miss ——'s fellow." A girl of that age always classifies a young man in her mind as some other girl's fellow. She may not know his name, or anything else about him, but she knows whose fellow he is all right enough.

THERE are two classes to be feared, one the dangerously bad man whose life tends to degrade and degenerate; the other the dangerously good man whose personal life may be blameless, but who through fear of contamination withdraws from society, hermit-like, and gives no thought or effort in the direction of improving his fellows.

LARGELY by the recommendation and earnest efforts of Dr. Baruch, the poor of New York are now offered a chance to get a good bath at any season. Commendable charity organization has provided bathing houses in which men and women can for only five cents obtain soap, towel, warm rain-bath (shower), and a cup of coffee after it. If they can but appreciate it, that's the greatest single blessing ever provided for persons of small means.

THE grip is epidemic once more. This unseasonable weather, with the thermometer flirting with 45 and 65 degrees in the same day, is doubtless responsible for the reappearance of the troublesome and in some cases dangerous malady. The popular cry, "Oh, for a week of good hard, cold weather!" comes from the rebellion against a summer temperature in December. Yet we ought to be getting accustomed to these mild winters, for we already have the third without the interruption of a real old-fashioned cold season; and there may be a dozen of them still ahead of us.

THE recent decision of the Supreme Court in Michigan in respect to the grounds on which a will can be properly contested ought to aid the New York courts materially in determining a knotty case which has come before them. The will in the case is contested on the ground that the testator was in the habit of making execrable puns, especially on the names of friends and acquaintances. Under the spirit of the Michigan decision this habit is not conclusive proof that the capacity to make a will is wanting; and we believe the New York courts will so hold. The relatives of a man so afflicted ought to be contented with the knowledge that he has abandoned it, and let his will stand.

SELDOM do we stop to think, on taking a book from a public library, who might have handled the book last. Books are loaned out, and go from family to family, no attention being paid to the fact that they may have been handled by a patient having a contagious disease. The British Medical Journal mentions a case where a physician recognized in the house of a patient suffering from scarlet fever a book which he had noticed a few days before in the room of a patient suffering with the same disease. On inquiring, he learned that a few days after borrowing the book the symptoms of the second case appeared. The paper used for covering library books soon becomes roughened, and undoubtedly furnishes the means of transmitting infectious diseases. Libraries should be notified, either by the boards of health or by attending physicians, of cases of infectious diseases.

THE challenge issued by George A. Fuller, the Chicago contractor, has excited considerable discussion among real estate men and others. Mr. Fuller offered to wager $100,000 that he could start a fire in the top story of some down-town fire-proof building; that he could let the fire burn for half an hour and could then extinguish it without the aid of the fire department and without serious injury to the building. The wager has not found a taker for obvious reasons. It is too large a sum of money to be covered on such a proposition in the first place, and, in the second place, the experiment would be of a foolhardy nature, and would not be permitted by the authorities. To the other proposition made by Mr. Fuller there seems to be less objection. He announces his intention of constructing a fire-proof building for experimental purposes out on the prairie, or in some isolated spot. If he does this he will be giving an exhibition of great popular interest, and will also create an opportunity to disprove the widespread impression that fire-proof buildings are not all that is claimed for them.

IT is a very just observation that one reason and perhaps the greatest reason, it might perhaps be added, why there are so many stories of ghostly adventure afloat is because folk do not like to be outdone by their neighbors. When one is attracting attention by the relation of some sort of an uncommon and apparently supernatural adventure, it is the natural instinct of mankind and even of womankind to cap the tale with one still more remarkable if possible. Under such circumstances—and such circumstances are very common—the most ordinary mystery assumes proportions which are startling, while a shade of mystery is given to things which are easily capable of the most simple and straightforward explanation when once they are correctly stated. The supernatural is after all largely the result of human vanity as it is the obvious consequence of human credulity.

THE wheat crop of Canada the past year is estimated at 60,000,000 bushels, or one-tenth that of the United States. Manitoba is credited with 23,000,000 and the farther west with enough to leave one-half of the production for the eastern portion of the country. The total was at first estimated at only 48,000,000 bushels, but the thrashing returns were such an agreeable disappointment that 26 per cent. was added to the original figures. The total is a large one, but is far from measuring the possibilities of Canada as a wheat producer in case the world should find itself in danger of running short in the supply from other sections. So long as plenty can be looked for in ordinarily good seasons elsewhere, the severe climate in the western part of the Dominion may prevent much extension of wheat culture there. Adding together the big and the little the wheat production of the northern half of this continent is found to be fully one-third that of the whole globe, a pretty large proportion, and especially when it is remembered that it is only a few years since North America began to rise towards that important position of feeding one-third the wheat-eaters of the world. Plenty of people are now alive in whose day the United States barely raised enough wheat for home consumption by the relatively small population of their childhood. Now the United States uses up close to 1,000,000 bushels per day and has exported to Europe at nearly that rate during several weeks since our last crop was gathered in.

THE proposition to unite the great lakes with the seaboard by a ship canal has been agitated many years, and the recent convention in Detroit drew to its discussions those who have given much attention to improve our methods of internal transportation. Since DeWitt Clinton gave us the Erie Canal engineers have pleaded for an opportunity to enlarge it so that ocean vessels could navigate it, and thus be able to reach the ports on our Western waterways. One plan to accomplish this is to dredge the upper Hudson so that vessels carrying twenty-one feet of water can reach Albany. The Erie Canal would have to be widened as well as deepened to admit the passage of ocean craft to Lake Erie. The Detroit River would have to be deepened, and changes made at other shallow points. A second plan is to construct a canal along the Niagara River from Buffalo to Lake Ontario, and continue on to Oswego. From here the Oswego Canal would be enlarged so that vessels could pass through to Oneida Lake, thence on to Rome, where the Mohawk River could be utilized most of the distance to Troy. To make the proposed changes would involve the expenditure of many millions, and Uncle Sam is expected to foot the bill. Congress has never encouraged the ship canal business, and without its aid it would be impossible to enlist individual capital. Besides, the influence of the railroads, which is potential in Congress and out, would be arrayed against the measure. Its establishment would make serious inroads on the roads between the Atlantic seaboard and the West, as Chicago, Milwaukee, Detroit, Cleveland, Buffalo, and other points could receive freight direct from Europe without patronizing the railroads. This would diminish earnings and cheapen railroad property—something that the stockholders and officers of corporations would fight to the bitter end.

DEMOCRACY CAN WIN.

EMINENT MEN POINT THE WAY TO SUCCESS.

Prominent Democrats at the Reform Club Banquet Give Their Views on Leading Issues—Tariff Bills that Should Be Introduced.

Talks at the Banquet.

At the annual dinner of the Reform Club in New York, William F. Vilas, Senator from Wisconsin, responded to the toast "The Presidency of 1892." He said the subject was being considered by millions in the streets and the columns of the press. The speaker scored the Republicans for what he termed their specious schemes. He recommended organization, the use of all proper means, the enlistment of all justifiable influences. He deprecated impractical methods, and said that Democrats would always be outmatched in fraudulent acts by Republicans. Mr. Vilas told of many ugly things for which the Republican party was responsible. The Democratic party would be false to every principle of life if it be not truly of the people, standing for the common good, bending to no man. The way to win the national government is the good, old-fashioned Democratic way; of honestly deserving that trust at the hands of the people as their wisest choice for their own good and the unerring public judgment will best discover that deserving in faithful adherence to the Democratic party. He concluded as follows:

It is for the Democratic party to win if it will. We do not look upon the Democratic party as the be-all and end-all of endeavor, but as a great instrumentality for the benefit of our country. We want no platforms for the sake of words. We do not care to formulate a policy merely to win an election. But we want to win an election to execute a wise policy. The Democratic party must lead and win those reforms or years of despairing will pass over our heads. Now is the day and now is the hour. Men and brethren of New York, it is upon you in this hour of national exigency to decide whether the Democratic party shall go forward to a great end, to true prosperity, by the establishment of justice and the equal rights of all. I believe, I feel, we shall not lose patriotism, and determination will subdue differences, repress ambitions, guide our obvious counsel, and we may justly hope to see the Democratic party true to its name and origin, sincere in heart and strength, in purpose wisely gathered, in harmonious co-operation, behind a leader, loved and trusted by the people, to go forward to the deliverance of labor, the promotion of our true prosperity, the country's honor and glory, by the establishment of justice and equal rights for all, and we shall see the fifth century of the new world begin with a firm, advancing step by the great republic in that path of human progress where with flashing orb the queen shall head the grand procession around the world.

Mr. Springer was the next speaker and began his remarks by pointing out the difference between the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives and the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Commons of England, continuing in substance as follows:

I presume, however, that you are not concerned so much about the history of the Committee of Ways and Means in this country and in England as you are about the opinions and purposes of the Democratic members of that committee in the present House of Representatives. I have no authority to speak for them, nor can I state what measures will be reported by the committee hereafter. No definite action has been taken by a majority of the committee up to this time. They will at an early day bring forward for the consideration of the House such measures in reference to the tariff as will in their judgment best meet the requirements of the situation and respond to the demand of the country for a genuine reform of the tariff. Any measure for the reform of the tariff, as this is a political question which would pass the House of Representatives, would in all probability fail in the Senate, or if it should pass the Senate, would be vetoed by the President. A general revision of the tariff therefore, by this Congress is utterly impracticable. The position of the Democratic party in reference to tariff reform is scarcely a subject of doubt. What the Democratic party would do if the law-making power were in its control is well known. It will be the duty of every Democrat and tariff reformer of the United States at the ensuing election for President and Representatives in Congress to use every effort to secure a Democratic President and a Democratic Congress. If this issue is kept steadily in view and is made paramount to all others there can scarcely be any doubt of the result. In fact, upon this issue success is already assured. The question which most concerns the Democratic majority in the House of Representatives, and the solution of which is especially imposed upon the Democratic members of the Ways and Means Committee, is what can be done during this session which will improve our chances of success, and if possible bring some immediate relief to the people. It is my opinion, and I speak for myself alone, that much good can be accomplished by the introduction and passage through the House of separate bills having for their object the enlarging of the free list, the securing of free raw material, and the cheapening of the many necessaries of life to the great mass of the consumers of the country. Something should be proposed also which would more clearly define the position of the Democratic party on the subject of reciprocity. Our party is in favor of that kind of reciprocity which will bring reciprocal benefits. If free trade with some countries, or lower duties upon some articles of commerce is desirable, why not extend the principle to all countries alike situated, and where important results may be anticipated. I would favor the admission into this country of all the products of the soil and mines of Canada and Mexico and all the products manufactured in either country from the products of such country or the United States or of materials which might be imported into the United States free of duty if similar products of the United States could be admitted into those countries. I do not know what position will be taken on this subject by the Committee of Ways and Means, or by the House itself, but I am confident that some measure will be proposed which will be more in harmony with the views and policies of Democrats generally than that which is contained in section three of the McKinley act, nor can I state what measures generally will be adopted by the committee and reported to the House for its consideration. Every member of the committee in my judgment earnestly desires to do that which will best promote the public weal. They are all genuine tariff-reformers and will do that which they deem best to promote this great reform. They may differ among themselves and with others upon methods, but there is no difference among them, so far as I know, upon the great question which has become a cardinal principle of Democratic faith. I am proud to be associated with gentlemen so distinguished for their ability, for their patriotism, and their devotion to the cause of tariff reform. They will not disappoint their constituents who are looking to the Democratic party for relief from the burdens of high protective tariff. I ask of all true Democrats and tariff-reformers that our motives may not be impugned, and that criticism upon our acts and upon the measures which we will bring forward will be reserved until our work is done, and when it is finished I hope and believe it will receive the approbation of the people and be ratified at the polls November next by the election of a Democratic President and a Vice President and a Congress Democratic in both branches.

Representative Breckinridge, the next speaker, referred to the elections of 1891, and declared that the only issue was the question of the tariff, and though but State officers were to be elected the question of tariff kept Democratic success up to the high mark of the year before. Mr. Breckinridge next referred to the depleted state of the United States Treasury, and made a comparison between the revenues and disbursements, and showed that $30,000,000 of last year's appropriations had not yet been paid. Relative to the McKinley bill and the time it had been in force, he said:

Our exports have exceeded our imports, presumably an evidence of profit, by nearly $130,000,000. Yet the commercial failures for the last twelve months are roundly $198,000,000, compared with $175,000,000 for the much-talked-of hard year before, an increase of 13 per cent., and for the same period the failures have increased 16 per cent.

Congressman Warner said: It is the essential of the tariff tax that it is levied on consumption and not on wealth—that it is paid in the increased price of whatever the citizen finds it necessary to have. It is a tax which stands by the cradle, and as every babe enters the household vigilantly and pitilessly increases its father's share of public burdens, but which sleeps unmoved while bond is piled upon bond in the strong box and broad acres are added acres outside. Is it fair thus to bar the necessities of the poor and leave untouched the accumulations of the rich? Is it fair thus to burden the unfortunate in proportion to his wants and thus to let the miser go free in proportion to his stinginess? Is it fair thus to discourage the rearing of children and thus to encourage the breeding of dollars? There is no reason why self-supporting men should heed the shrill clamor of those who croak disaster. You will recall how when Cœur de Leon escaped from his Austrian prison and the news came westward to his kingdom, his people, devouring courtiers that stood about the usurper, John, turned pale and passed about the word: "The devil is broken loose." But through the length and breadth of England the same news was passed as a holiday benediction from village to village and church to church until to the humblest subject it came as a glad cry. "The true king is coming again to his own." And so the general downfall of the protective system, which the obstinacy of its beneficiaries is fast preparing, their startled cry, "The free-trade devil is broken loose," will be lost in the glad answer of a re-enfranchised nation. The people are coming to their own.

Harrison as an Importer.

A dispatch giving an account of a recent reception and luncheon at the White House contained the following statement: "The new service of cut glass was used for the first time, and it was the intention to use the 'new china also,' but the formalities of the custom house could not be complied with in time to make this possible."

How is this? Does President Harrison import china, made by the pauper labor of Europe, for use in the White House? The allusion to custom-house formalities forbids any other conclusion. And yet this is the same Mr. Harrison who in his late message remarks that, "in view of the somewhat overcrowded condition of the labor market, every patriotic citizen should rejoice" at the result of the McKinley policy, which has given employment to labor by excluding foreign products. It is the same Mr. Harrison who, in the course of his journeyings last spring, repeatedly described the "ideal condition" as one in which the farmer would swap his corn and potatoes over the tailboard of his wagon for manufactures (china included, of course) made by his near neighbor in the same county. Such is the difference between Harrison in theory and Harrison in practice. In theory his heart overflows with sympathy for the American workman standing all the cheerless day in the overcrowded labor market. In practice he buys his china abroad and leaves the American to stand unemployed. As the official head of the party of "home industry" and "ideal condition," Mr. Harrison should be more consistent.

In his next and last annual message he will have an opportunity to explain why he does not conform his practice to his theory. In the meantime the "protected" workman in the overcrowded labor market may think that American china is good enough for a patriotic protectionist in the White House. At the same time Mr. Harrison may improve the opportunity to state whether it was he or the foreign manufacturer who, in complying with the formalities of the custom house, paid the 60 per cent. tax on that china; or, if the china was paid for out of the contingent fund, whether it was the foreigner that paid the tax to the Government, or the Government that paid the tax to itself, as provided by the McKinley act.—Chicago Herald.

The Producers' Need.

The cotton crop in the South the past season, like the wheat crop of the country, was one of the largest, but there was no cotton famine in Europe, and the prices have ruled so low as to leave the planters little or no margins on the cost of production. The superficial view is that there has been too much cotton grown. In touching on this subject recently, Mr. Mills finds that the great need of the cotton growers is less obstruction to traffic abroad. He estimates that a reduction of the tariff to 25 per cent. above the revenue basis would so increase the demand abroad for cotton as to raise the price several cents per pound, and add $150,000,000 to the receipts of the planters. If English goods are shut out, they will have less use for American cotton. In ordinary years the same effect will be had upon the demand for grain and meats. The farmers in the West need more than a home market for their products. A famine in Russia and short crops in other countries cannot be expected to come very often. The great consuming nations of Europe will prefer to buy their breadstuffs of the countries that invite their barter most liberally. There will be hard lines for the Western farmer when he is shut in to the home market, however large his crops may be.

They Continue to Come.

Nebraska Democracy has a new convert whose position and ability will render him a great help in the redemption of that State and the permanent establishment of its political virtue. This is Gilbert M. Hitchcock, editor of the Omaha World-Herald. Mr. Hitchcock is the son of the late Senator Hitchcock, of Nebraska, a life-long Republican. The young man naturally began life with Republican tendencies and for many years he has been conducting an independent paper. But McKinleyism, Thayerism and prohibitionism were too much for him, and on the recent anniversary of Andrew Jackson's victory at New Orleans he threw both hands and in the presence of Gov. Boyd and many other enthusiastic banqueters declared his conversion in earnest and eloquent terms.

READERS of protection organs know that tin-plate mills are springing up all over the country like mushrooms; still the operators insist that the present tax of $16,000,000 is not enough to get the infant on its feet. They would have Congress raise the tariff wall about one-half higher. But that sort of thing is becoming obsolete.

THERE was but one spot on the North American Continent, it is said, of which there is authentic account, where man-eating people dwelt, and that dark spot was withing the geographical limits of what is now the States of Indiana and Illinois. These horrid rites were performed by the Miami Indians even where Chicago now stands.

A CIRCULAR being sent out to postmasters intimates pretty clearly to the officials that their positions will be safer if they send $5 each to the Republican League to aid in the diffusion of political literature. Of course, Mr. Wanamaker does not know about this.

EX-PRESIDENT McCOSH, of Princeton College, has undertaken a very ambitious literary work. He proposes to issue a full set of volumes on the various departments of the human mind, and is at present writing a little book on ethics to begin the series.

CURING INTEMPERANCE.

DR. BORTON'S GREAT WORK AT WARSAW, IND.

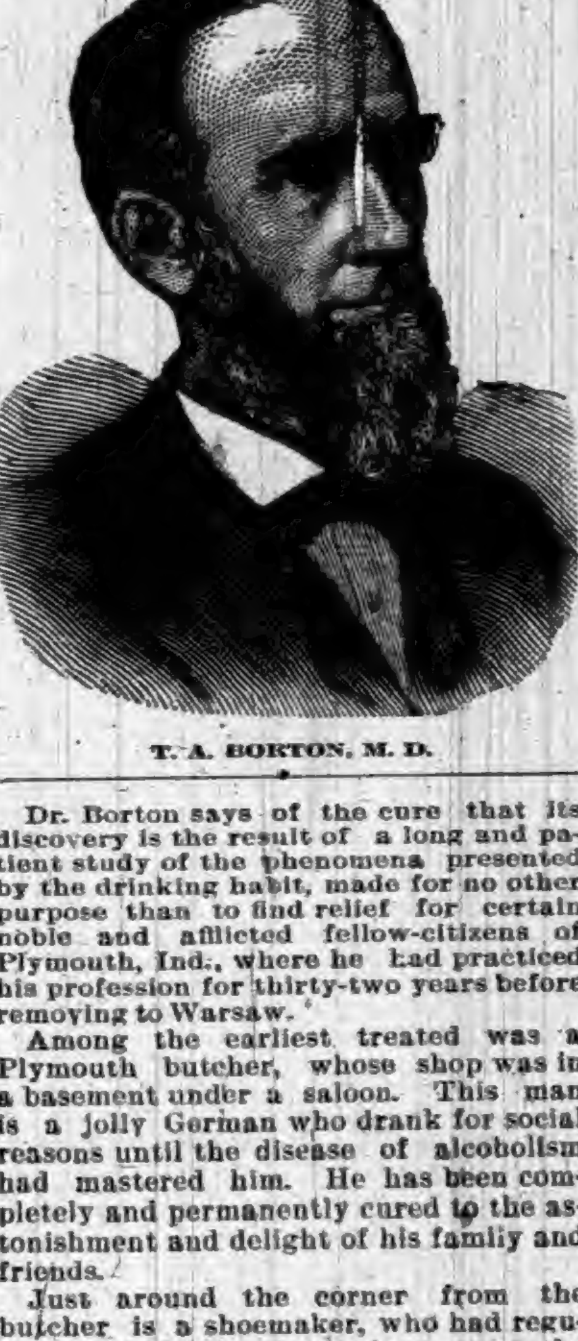
An Unbroken Record of Cures—A Remedy for the Drinking Habit that Is Effectual in all Stages of Disease—Plain Story of a Heaven-sent Remedy that Is Restoring Fallen Men to Usefulness.

Plymouth Institute Sights.

He who changes a confirmed inebriate into a reputable, rational, self-respecting member of society is worthy to take rank among the greatest benefactors of mankind. For his good work not only restores to usefulness a man whose time, energy and opportunities have been worse than mis-spent, but he confers the boon of peace to many homes, the harbinger of joy to many bruised hearts.

Just such a benefactor appears to be Dr. T. A. Borton of Warsaw, Ind., and in the work of redeeming fallen men he has earned a heavenly crown of glory. Of scores of suffering persons, who have sought him out, not one has failed to find complete and permanent relief, not one has relapsed into the drinking habit, an unbroken record of cures that has nowhere been equalled.

The "Borton Cure," as it is becoming to be widely known, depends entirely for its reputation upon the unsought and willing testimony of those who have experienced the treatment. No attempt has been made to acquaint the public with its merits, and it might almost entirely have failed to attract the attention of newspaper readers but for the fact that certain clergymen who visited the doctor at his office, felt impelled to send to the Chicago Interior and other religious papers some accounts of the astonishing things they had witnessed.



T. A. BORTON, M. D.

Dr. Borton says of the cure that its discovery is the result of a long and patient study of the phenomena presented by the drinking habit, made for no other purpose than to find relief for certain noble and afflicted fellow-citizens of Plymouth, Ind., where he had practiced his profession for thirty-two years before removing to Warsaw.

Among the earliest treated was a Plymouth butcher, whose shop was in a basement under a saloon. This man is a jolly German who drank for social reasons until the disease of alcoholism had mastered him. He has been completely and permanently cured to the astonishment and delight of his family and friends.

Just around the corner from the butcher is a shoemaker, who had regularly spent his hard earnings over the bar until his family was in sore distress. He had promised reformation again and again but as often had fallen. He came to Dr. Borton many months ago and soon the old desire for liquor was supplanted by a detestation that he eloquently expresses to all who will cross the street from the Plymouth Postoffice and enter his neat and busy workshop.

A brilliant telegraph operator had lost his place through drinking and had become almost a tramp. He was cured and last week he visited Warsaw with his happy bride, proud to show to her the man who had redeemed him.

These cases had been multiplied into scores before Dr. Borton was willing to permit the use of his name in connection with the cure. He wanted first to satisfy himself that he could, with an abiding confidence, announce to fallen men that there was relief at last at hand that would be effectual in all stages of the drinking habit. His general practice was large and very remunerative but victims of intemperance soon presented themselves in such numbers that he could not fail to extend to them all the Christian sympathy and medical aid that would surely lift them out of bondage into a life of hope and joy.

The story is almost told. Since the beginning of the present year he has consented to devote all of his time, all of his skill, all of his effort to this heart-work of rescuing fallen men. What will be his reward he cannot say, but if the abandonment of his general practice will enable him to enlarge the usefulness of his cure, if many more shall be led from paths that take hold on death to take their places again among their fellow men, their appetite for liquor gone and full of the ambition of their youth, an ample reward will come in the blessings of redeemed men, in the joy of families restored to happiness and in the love of children whose fathers have been newborn into lives of affection. No man's monument will be higher, none more enduring.

The citizens of Warsaw have known of Dr. Borton and his work for a long time, and they are in hearty sympathy with him. The best homes in the city are thrown open for the reception of his patients and every effort is made to surround them with influences of the right sort. They come to him in various conditions and if they are nervous he supplies them with pure Bourbon whisky without the least fear of prolonging their sprees, for the appetite for liquor never outlasts the second or third day of treatment. It yields and for the first time in years the drinking man finds, to his great joy, that he cares for liquor no more.

After that his stay at Warsaw becomes a pleasant relaxation from business cares. He presents himself to Dr. Borton four times a day for treatment and spends the rest of his time in the charming parks, on the beautiful streets or on the three lakes which almost touch the city. In summer he is welcomed in the pretty cottages by the lakes, he may skim over the waters in one of the graceful steamers, bend his back in rowing or while away the lazy hours in fishing. In whatever relaxation he may engage he is sure to go to his home with pleasant memories of the pretty, hospitable lake-city, and of the Christian gentleman who presides at the Plymouth Institute, as Dr. Borton calls his sanitarium. It should be added that Warsaw is situated at the crossing of the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago railway, and the Cincinnati, Wabash and Michigan railroad. It is 108 miles east of Chicago, forty miles west of Fort Wayne, and 125 miles north of Indianapolis.

CHICAGO GETS THE CON.

THE NATIONAL COMMITTEE SO DECIDES.

The Garden City the Place, and June 21 the Date Chosen—Many Cities Wanted It—How the Decision Was Reached—Party Leaders Satisfied.

The Democratic Convention.

The next Democratic National Convention will be held at Chicago on June 21. The date was fixed at an executive session of the Democratic National Committee in Washington, and after fourteen ballots the same committee selected the place. Eight cities had put in their claims as candidates for the honor, and two cities not candidates were voted for, one of the latter carrying off the prize. The result was a surprise to the friends of Chicago, since they had not sought the convention for their city, and had, indeed, tried to prevent its location there, fearing, as they did, that it might create antagonism and endanger the chances of the [illegible] World's Fair appropriation. Still the statement was frequently repeated that Chairman Brice, Senator Gorman and other leading spirits of the committee were determined to locate the convention in Chicago for reasons best known to themselves, and that when the proper time came in the executive session of the committee during the balloting for location the vote would be forced to Chicago.

Whether this statement is true has not been thoroughly established, but the result tends to verify it, and it is furthermore certain that Brice, Gorman, and Hill are well pleased with the selection.

When the committee went into executive session and began balloting, much to the surprise of everybody Kansas City led on the first ballot with 13 votes. Milwaukee and San Francisco had 10 apiece; St. Paul got 7; New York, 5; Cincinnati, 3; Indianapolis and Detroit, 2 each; and Chicago, although not a candidate, received 1. Kansas City lost one on the second ballot and Milwaukee gained two, their votes standing respectively 12 and 10. St. Paul's vote remained unchanged, and so did San Francisco's. Cincinnati dropped to only one, and Chicago gained one. Indianapolis got three instead of two, New York was reduced to four and Detroit held her own with two. On the third ballot several complimentary votes went to San Francisco, running that city's support up to fifteen. Chicago gained another one, and Kansas City lost seven, her vote being thus suddenly reduced to five. Milwaukee dropped to eight. St. Paul took third place with Cincinnati and got three, Indianapolis two and New York and Detroit only one apiece. The fourth ballot was about as badly scattered. St. Paul shot up to first place with thirteen votes and Milwaukee still held second, though she polled only eight. Indianapolis got seven, Kansas City six, Chicago and Detroit three each. San Francisco lost her complimentary votes, dropping to only two. New York got just one, as she did on the previous ballot.

On the fifth ballot Cincinnati took first rank with eleven votes and Kansas City and Milwaukee tied each other for second place with ten apiece. St. Paul had eight, a loss of five, New York got four, and Chicago merely retained her three. Indianapolis dropped back to her original two, Detroit received just one and San Francisco went out of the race. On the sixth ballot Detroit was favored with a complimentary vote, or rather the committee continued its experiments in trying the strength of various cities. The Michigan candidate got nineteen votes in place of the modest one it had received on the previous ballot. Milwaukee went back to eight, but held second place, and St. Paul also lost two, taking third place with only six votes. Kansas City got five, New York and Indianapolis three apiece, and Chicago and Cincinnati two each, the latter city losing nine.

Another experiment was tried on the seventh ballot, and Des Moines, which had not been announced as a candidate, was given seventeen votes, leading all the others. Milwaukee got back one of the votes she had lost and polled nine, and Kansas City gained two, getting seven. Four went to St. Paul, three each to Chicago and New York, two to Cincinnati, and one apiece to Indianapolis and Detroit. More experiments were tried on the eighth ballot, and the floating votes that had complimented Des Moines with their support deserted the Iowa city for Indianapolis. The latter's vote was suddenly increased from one to twenty-two. The Indiana shouters in the lobby outside nearly went wild over the sudden prospects of success. Milwaukee's vote was unchanged. Kansas City and St. Paul got five apiece, New York and Chicago had three each, as before, and Cincinnati and Detroit brought up the rear with one apiece.

On the ninth ballot Milwaukee got a boom. Its vote went up from nine to twenty, its highest previous vote having been ten. New York took a spurt to ten, Kansas City and St. Paul receiving six apiece; Chicago got four and Indianapolis, Cincinnati and Detroit one apiece. On the tenth ballot Milwaukee led again with eighteen votes and Chicago pushed up to second place, receiving thirteen votes. St. Paul got eight and Kansas City seven. Cincinnati dropped out of the fight and Indianapolis, New York and Detroit received one apiece. Indianapolis dropped out on the eleventh ballot. St. Paul got only six and Kansas City three; New York and Detroit held their one apiece and the fight was between Milwaukee and Chicago. The Cream City felt pretty sure of the prize when its vote was announced as twenty-two, lacking only four of enough. But Chicago gained one more, scoring fourteen.

The twelfth showed an increase of three for Chicago, her vote reaching seventeen, while Milwaukee still led with twenty. St. Paul still clung to her six, and Indianapolis, New York, and Detroit to their one apiece. Kansas City received three. The thirteenth ballot was about the same, Milwaukee gaining one and leading with twenty-one, while Chicago crowded her close with seventeen. Kansas City gained one from St. Paul, and New York dropped out of the race.

The contest was ended on the fourteenth ballot. Chicago's vote ran up to twenty-seven, one more than was necessary, and Milwaukee lost three, scoring only eighteen. Kansas City got two and St. Paul two. The fight was over, and the city of Chicago had been awarded the convention.

A tabulated statement of the various votes is as follows:

THE SENATE AND HOUSE.

WORK OF OUR NATIONAL LAWMAKERS.

Proceedings of the Senate and House of Representatives—Important Measures Discussed and Acted Upon—Gist of the Business.

The National Solons.

When the Senate met on the 20th, only one of the two re-elected Mississippi Senators, Mr. Walthall, was in his seat, and he received congratulations from his fellow Senators from both parties. Mr. George entered the chamber and took his seat while the business of the morning hour was in progress, and was warmly congratulated. The following bills were passed: For public buildings at Grand Haven, Mich., $50,000; Deadwood, S. D., $200,000; Stillwater, Minn., $100,000; Salem, Oregon, $100,000; the Dalles, Oregon, $100,000. The latter bill gave rise to a long discussion, but it was finally passed—yeas, 35; nays, 12. A bill also passed for a public building at Fresno, Cal.—$75,000. In the House, on motion of Mr. Stone, of Kentucky, a resolution was adopted calling upon the Secretary of the Treasury for a statement of all goods imported into the United States from the Dominican Republic and from Porto Rico, dutiable or free. Also a statement of all goods exported to the countries for ten years prior to the passage of the McKinley act. The following bills were introduced: For a public building at Ann Arbor, Mich.; directing the Secretary of the Treasury to call in at once and cover into the Treasury all moneys deposited with national banks and drawing no interest; for a public building at Huntington, W. Va. Mr. Springer introduced his free wool bill and it was referred to the Committee on Ways and Means.

On the 21st, Mr. Stanford addressed the Senate in advocacy of the bill introduced by him to provide the government with means sufficient to supply the national want of a sound circulating medium. The discussion was not concluded, and the bill is on the table to be called up in the future. Mr. Cockrell reported the bill for the relief of the University of Missouri, at Columbia, and after explanation it was passed. The La Abra bill was again taken up, but without disposing of it the Senate went into executive session and soon adjourned till the 25th. In the House, Mr. Davis, of Kansas, asked for the present consideration of a joint resolution authorizing the President to appoint a commission of three persons to investigate the cause of the recent explosion and loss of life at Krebs, I. T. The resolution, after some debate, went to the Committee on Rules. A resolution was adopted calling on the Secretary of the Treasury for a statement of the drawbacks paid to importers of tin-plate under the provisions of the McKinley bill. Also for a statement of duties refunded to importers of salt for curing fish and meat. Mr. Harvey, of Oklahoma, from the Committee on Indian Affairs, reported a bill appropriating $15,000 to complete the allotment of lands to the Cheyenne and Arapahoe Indians in Oklahoma. Passed. Adjourned till the 25th.

On the 26th but little business was done in either house. The entire mass of correspondence with Chili, in relation to the Valparaiso incident, was laid before both Senate and House in joint assembly, together with a message from President Harrison. This action virtually placed the next steps of settlement of the question in the hands of Congress. Rarely has the Capitol building been the scene of such intense, though suppressed, excitement as when the mass of spectators and legislators were waiting for the long-promised message. To add to the interest in the House, also, Speaker Crisp occupied the chair for the first time in six weeks. The message was loudly applauded by Congressmen and spectators alike. Adjournment was taken immediately after its reading.

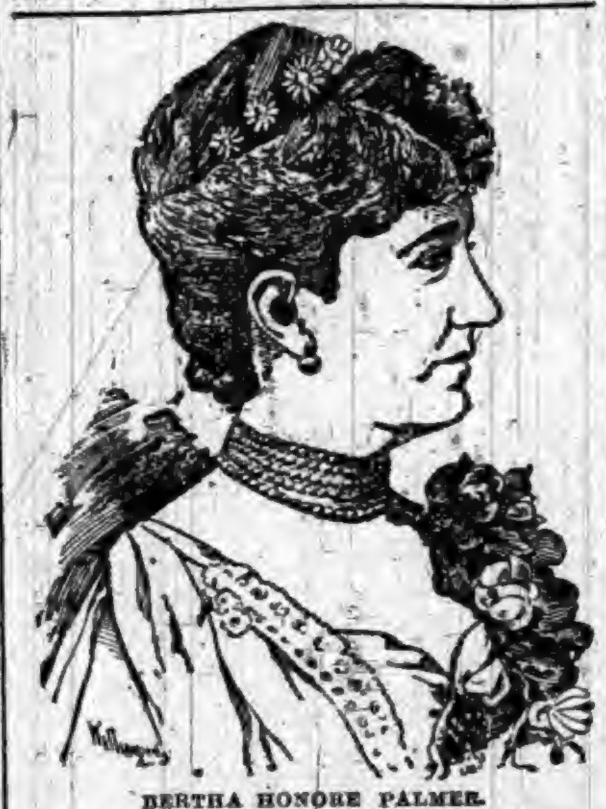
MRS. POTTER PALMER.

Short Sketch and Picture of the President of the Board of Lady Managers.

The women of the United States are fortunate in having so charming a representative, as Mrs. Potter Palmer, of Chicago, on the Board of Managers for the World's Fair. As President of the Board of Lady Managers she occupies a very prominent position, and the eyes of the world, so to speak, are upon her. In her official capacity she meets the various representatives of other nations, and consequently it requires a woman of social as well as executive ability. She has lately entertained various notabilities at her house, all of whom must have taken away with them an agreeable impression of an American home, an American hostess, and a graceful, cultured, and charming woman. Mrs. Palmer is a native of Louisville, Ky. Her maiden name was Bertha Honore, and she was educated in a convent at Georgetown, D. C. She was married to Potter Palmer in 1871.



BERTHA HONORE PALMER.

Mrs. Palmer is acknowledged to be one of Chicago's most beautiful women, and the striking beauty of her clear-cut features has been effectively brought out by the artist in the excellent portrait here presented. Here is shown the highest type of mechanical engraving—the photo-zinc etching, which has now superseded all of the old expensive methods. For a zinc etching the design is drawn from a photograph on white cardboard double the size wanted. This is photographed on zinc plate, and the plate then put into an acid bath, which eats or etches away everything except the lines which are to appear on the cut. The engraving process is altogether mechanical, and is, therefore, mechanically perfect, as is shown by the above portrait. All the daily and weekly newspaper illustrations are photo-zinc etchings, and they have become so cheap in price that well-made portraits like the above can now be had from the Ft. Wayne (Ind.) Newspaper Union for $2.50, while a cut like it by the old method of wood engraving would have cost $6 or $8. The Ft. Wayne Newspaper Union will, upon request, give full information as to the making and cost of all kinds of zinc-etching illustrations.

A Discord.

A weary Congressman, who could "snore upon the flint," occupied a room adjoining a German musician's.

"You will have to give me another room, I guess," said the Congressman to the hotel clerk.

"What's the matter? Aren't you comfortable where you are?"

"Well, not exactly. That German musician in the next room and I don't get along well. Last night he tooted away on his clarionet so that I thought I never would go to sleep. After I had caught a few winks I was awakened by a pounding at my door. 'What's the matter?' I asked. 'Of you please,' said the German, 'dot you vould schnore of der saine key. You vas go from B flat to G, and it spoils der music.'"—Boston Journal.

Celt and Saxon.

This is one of Sheridan's tales: An Irishman met a Briton, of the true John Bull pattern, standing with folded arms in a contemplative mood, apparently meditating on the greatness of his little island:

"Allow me to differ with ye!" exclaimed the Celt.

"But I have said nothing, sir," replied John Bull.

"And a man may think a lie as well as publish it," persisted the pugnacious Hibernian.

"Perhaps you are looking for fight?" queried the Briton.

"Allow me to compliment yez en the quickness of your perciption," said Patrick, throwing down his coat, and then they pitched in.—Washington Post.

"John Anderson, My Jo,"

In the Scotch ballad, was about to totter down the declivity of life with his aged wife. How it would have smoothed the rough places for the respected John and his venerable spouse could they have eased their growing infirmities with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, that benign help to the aged, the weak and those recovering but slowly from exhausting diseases. When the lamp of life is on the wane man specially requires medicinal aid, a sustaining tonic, a wholesome corrective. The aged and the feeble are particularly susceptible to influences which produce disease, convalescence is to often interrupted by a relapse. This standard American invigorant is eminently adapted to the needs of such persons, and it always "fills the bill." Dyspepsia, constipation, rheumatism, kidney troubles and la grippe are among the troubles that it overcomes.

Why Cain Escaped.

Allen, the Quaker, once waited upon the Duke of Sussex in order to remind him of his promise to present a petition against capital punishment. The Duke did not seem quite to like the job, and observed that scripture has declared: "Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed."

"Please Your Royal Highness," replied the Quaker, "when Cain killed Abel he was not hung for it."

"That's true," replied the Duke, "but remember, Allen, there were not twelve men in the world then to make a jury."

A MAN who has practiced medicine for forty years ought to know salt from sugar; read what he says:

TOLEDO, O., Jan. 10, 1887.

Messrs. F. J. How Snakes Climb Trees.

A snake moves by means of the ribs and the scales on the abdomen, to which each rib is attached by a set of short muscles. These scales take hold of the surface over which the serpent may be passing, and in that manner aid the creature to glide, often very rapidly, around the trunks of trees and along the smaller branches. Some species climb trees with wonderful agility, winding up the straight trunks with much ease as if they were moving along the level ground.

All That Is Needed.

In our physical needs we want the best of anything required, and we want all that is required to be done, to be done promptly and surely, and those in pain, especially, will find all that is needed in what is herein recommended. Mr. T. J. Murphy, 61 Debevoice place, Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "Having been afflicted with sciatic rheumatism for some time past and finding no relief, I tried St. Jacobs Oil, which I found very efficacious."—Miss Clara Alcott, Mahwah, N. J., writes: "I bruised my limb and it became greatly swollen and stiff. I used two bottles of a patent liniment which did not relieve me. A physician was called who ordered the limb to be poulticed, and he gave me medine internally, without benefit. I then got a bottle of St. Jacobs Oil, which cured me. It acted like magic."—Mr. Lorenzo Buck, Bancroft, Shiawassee County, Mich., says: "I had chronic rheumatism for years, contracted during the war. After sitting or lying down, at times, I could not get up from stiffness and pains. At work my strength would give out, then I would pass through a sickness of several weeks. I had to walk with a cane and was at one time so ill I could not lie down without terrible pains in back and limbs. I tried St. Jacobs Oil; next morning got up out of bed without assistance. To-day I'm a new man and walk without a cane."—Mr. A. H. Cunningham, Perryopolis, Fayette County, Pa., writes: "My wife was sorely afflicted with lame back for several years. She used innumerable liniments, but experienced little relief until St. Jacobs Oil was used. I can confidently say we owe her cure to its wonderful effects and would not keep house without it."

Where They Were Plenty.

One one occasion in the old French war, the English, aided by colonial militia, were besieging a French fort somewhere near Canada. In front was a space of the forest leveled by a tornado, and beneath the fallen trunks the besiegers sought shelter from the sharp fire of the fort—all save one man. Like another Ethan Allen, he stood upon a tree elevated above the rest, returning the enemy's fire. His companions below hailed him to know if he had any bullets to spare, as they were out. The reply was: Hang you, come up here; you can catch a handful a minute!"

BEARDS were at various times taxed in England, and the Sheriff of Canterbury paid 3 shillings and 4 pence for wearing a beard. In the first year of Elizabeth's reign every beard of above a fortnight's growth was taxed 3 shillings and 6 pence, but the law was too absurd to be enforced. Peter the Great imposed a tax of a ruble upon beards, but it was soon canceled.

With Ely's Cream Balm a child can be treated without pain and with perfect safety. Try the remedy, it cures Catarrh.

My son has been afflicted with nasal catarrh since quite young. I was induced to try Ely's Cream Balm, and before he had used one bottle that disagreeable catarrhal smell had all left him. He appears as well as any one. It is the best catarrh remedy in the market.—J. C. Olmstead, Arcola, Ill.

One of my children had a very bad discharge from her nose. Two physicians prescribed, but without benefit. We tried Ely's Cream Balm, and, much to our surprise, there was a marked improvement. We continued using the Balm and in a short time the discharge was cured.—O. A. Cary, Corning, N. Y.

IT was an ancient superstition that persons born on Christmas Eve were endued with vision sensible of all spirits and supernatural objects. To this cause were referred the dark looks of Philip II. of Spain, whose mind was believed to be impressed by awful appearances to which he was subject.

JOHN A. SMITH, Ligonier, Ind., had been suffering from severe backache, caused, physicians told him, by chronic kidney trouble, and was all broken down in health. He began using Swamp-Root and is now able to do a good day's work and considers himself a well man again. Swamp-Root did the business. He considers it by far the best remedy he has ever used for Kidney Disease.

A Veteran of the Mexican War.

Samuel L. McFadin whose portrait appears above, is a prominent citizen of Logansport, Ind., and one of but seventeen surviving veterans of a company of ninety-two young men who left that city forty-five years ago for the seat of War in Mexico. He now holds the position of Marshall of National Association, and although well advanced in years is still hearty and hale. In writing of his health he says:—I had been troubled for a long time with rheumatism, Kidney and Liver Complaint and could hardly get around. Suffered great pain night and day. After trying many different kinds of medicines and finding no relief, at last through the advice of a friend I purchased Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root from one of our leading Druggists, B. F. Kesling, and must say it has helped me wonderfully, as I now walk without pain.

It is the only medicine that has done me any good, and has been a great benefit in invigorating and building up my system, greatly assisting the liver, kidneys and digestive organs. This is the first recommendation I have ever given a medicine and it affords me pleasure to call the attention of the public to the merits of this wonderful specific. Those who try Swamp-Root have generally first employed the family physician, or used all the prescriptions within their reach without benefit. As a last resort, when their case has become chronic, the symptoms complicated and their constitution run down, then they take this remedy, and it is just such cases and cures that have made Swamp-Root famous and given it a world-wide reputation.

THE republicans of Ft. Wayne, want the republican state convention to be held in their city. The bad luck of the Ft. Wayne democrats does not seem to have discouraged them.

ALL over the state at the republican district meetings there was trouble over Harrison, and in some districts anti Harrison committeemen were chosen. If republicans had taken the democratic valuation of Harrison four years ago, they would not now be quarreling over a man of so small a caliber.

Big Mineral Well.

The Ft. Wayne mineral well is becoming quite famous. It is one of those sunk in the east part of the city to get gas. They got strong mineral water instead, and it is likely to prove as valuable. The water has ben analyzed and found to contain large quantities of sulphuretted hydrogen gas, chlorides, magnesium, bi-carbonates, sulphates, etc., being as strong as the famous water at Mt. Clemens, Mich. We might say in passing, that the Auburn Windmill Company, have put up one of their fine mills, at this well, to do the pumping, for the owners are going to have a big health resort there.

THE AUBURN COURIER

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY.

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana, postoffice as second-class matter.

THURSDAY.......JANUARY 28, 1892.

To the Democrats of DeKalb County.

Pursuant to the call of the State Central Committee, democrats and all others who wish to co operate with the democratic party, will, on

SATURDAY, JAN. 30, 1892,

at 2 o'clock p. m., meet at the usual places of meeting in their respective precincts: First, for the election of precinct committeemen, who will become members of the county central committee.

The members of the county committee will meet at Auburn, Feb. 6, 1892, at 2 o'clock p. m., for the purpose of organization, election of chairman, vice-chairman, secretary and treasurer and executive committee.

I earnestly request a full attendance at each of the above meetings.

CLEVELAND'S administration left to Harrison's over a hundred millions of a surplus, and this surplus was increasing at the rate of over fifty millions a year. Now where is it?

THE state central committee has decided that in the coming congressional convention, this, the 12th district will have 106 votes, a majority being 54. Of these Allen has 48; DeKalb, 16: Lagrange, 8; Noble, 15; Steuben, 7; Whitley 12. The vote is apportioned on that given for Cleveland in 1888.

THE date set for the democratic state convention will not do. It is on the 14th day of April, and on the anniversary of the assassination of Lincoln. The committee has discovered its mistake, and a new meeting was called for yesterday to determine a better date. It should be a month later, at least.

WHY do all the wool growers' meetings resolve against any reduction of the tariff tax on wool? We are told every day by republican papers that a high tariff makes things cheaper. Don't the wool growers want higher prices? If they do, the advice of republican editors would be, of course, to reduce the tariff. Will the wool growers, or the editors, either one, please explain.

WELLS county democrats will nominate their ticket by a primary election on the Australian system. That is the correct way to do. We believe the nomination of candidates should be as carefully guarded, as the election of candidates. Poor selections made at the nominating conventions often bring about the election of poor officers and and then the public must suffer. Give us a better plan for the nominations.

BRADLEY, one of the justices of the U. S. supreme court, died last Friday morning. He was appointed by Grant in 1870, and has been a leading member of the bench since. He was one of the five judges on the electoral commission, and much was expected from his reputation for fairness. But he became the worst partisan of the commission and it was his fault, that the fraudulent returns from Louisiana were counted for Hayes.

A BILL has been put forth in congress to enable American stock owners to bring back their stray cattle from Mexico without paying a duty. Why they should ask this favor, we don't see, for republican papers tell us that such a tax would increase the production of the article affected, in fact give the industry new impetus as in case of tin. In this way new cattle herds would spring up all over the country where none existed before—same as the tin industry.

THE swine breeders and the wool growers, had their annual meeting in Indianapolis last week, and resoluted to have the next legislature appropriate money to help them make an exhibit and to furnish the premiums at the World's fair. The legislature will do no such thing. It has no right to assist one industry at the expense of all others. A state that thinks it can't afford to help its schools to make an exhibit will not not be apt to help an industry that is purely financial.

JUDGE MCCLELLAN has introduced a bill to repeal the law that exempts greenbacks, bonds and other U. S. securetie s from taxation. He argues very properly, that it is a great injustice as the law now stands, and that these U. S. bonds, etc., ought to be taxed. He also has a bill providing that a widow who loses her pension by marrying, can have it restored in case this second husband dies,

THE message of the President in regard to Chile, was read Monday to both houses, and is found in full on our second page. About the same time Chile sent a note, that indicates that she will apologize. So it will be seen the president was a little too hasty, and should have waited for what he must have known was coming. So there will be no war.

CHICAGO gets the national democratic convention. The national committee met at Washington, D. C, last Thursday, and took fourteen ballots for a location. At first Chicago had one vote, and kept so for some time, but at the last ballot she had 27 of the 49. She had not asked for the convention, but its central location favored it. The date is June 21. The cities voted for were: San Francisco. St. Paul, New York, Milwaukee, Kansas City, Indianapolis, Detroit, Des Moines, Cincinnati and Chicago.

HON. SIDNEY R. MOON, of Rochester, is mentioned by democratic papers as a suitable candidate for Reporter of the supreme court of the state. In another part of this paper, we have an article copied from his home paper, the Rochester Sentinel. And we wish to add to the good words Bro. Barnhart says of him. He is every inch a gentleman and a worthy citizen, who has carved out his own success against great odds, and is just such a man as our voters should make sure are the men who get into our places of honor and responsibility. A fair acquaintance with Mr. Moon enables us to add that the people of the state will make no mistake if they call him to this position.

THE republicans of this congressional district met in Auburn last Thursday, and elected H. C. Hanna, of Ft. Wayne, as district committeeman. Mr. Woodhull of Angola, introduced a resolution complimenting Harrison's administration, though it did not endorse him for a second term. Hon. J. B. White, at once fired up, and gave it to the president right and left. Among other things, he said:

"I for one, say that Harrison has not done what he could for the republican party; and he has not done his duty. This is the sentiment all over the state. Look back one year and see how the state went then—20,000 democratic. Are not these recent democratic victories evidences that he is not wanted? Had the state gone republican it would have been an endorsement of the administration. His course has not been patriotic, neither has it been statesmanlike. He has not done his duty as president. He has solidified the enemy and divided our party. Now, I believe, however, if we get the right kind of a leader, we can sweep the country. It is the principles of the party we wish to endorse; but I will not express my approval of the administration. I believe the resolution to be inopportune, and I move that it be laid upon the table."

Reporter of Supreme Court.

(Rochester Sentinel.)

"For the first time in its thirty-five years' existence the Sentinel, to-day, presents the candidacy of a Fulton county democrat for a state office—Hon. Sidney R. Moon, for Reporter of the Supreme Court. Mr. Moon has established a reputation as a citizen, educator, public official and democrat, equaled by few men in Indiana, and he will enter the campaign with advantages surpassed by no man in the state. With but one good hand he has fought his way up from the plow to honor and distinction in the service of his county and state, and his name on the democratic ticket will give it such strength as to command the admiration of all men.

Mr. Moon's legislative career has been universally acceptable to the tax payers of the state. In the legislative session of 1889, he was chairman of the committee on Reformatory Institutions and also a member of the special committee appointed to draft the justly popular school book law which is saving the school patrons of the state thousands of dollars annually, and, better still, enables thousands of poor children to attend school who were heretofore deprived of the privilege by the rapacity and greed of the soulless school-book monopolies. He was also a leading advocate of the election law which has lifted Indiana from the disgraceful gutter of election bribery and political depravity and elevated it to a standard of freedom and purity of franchise equaled by no other state in the Union.

He is a member of the Fulton County Bar; possesses the qualifications necessary to make a model state officer; has a wide acquaintance throughout the state, and the Sentinel bespeaks for his candidacy a kindly consideration in every county.

Court.

It is the last week and has been a busy one. The Ferguson Lumber Co., vs Deethers, spoken of last week got a verdict for $426. O. P. Smith, esq., of Waterloo, was admitted to the bar as an attorney. Mary A. Forshey was divorced from Frederick Forshey. Minnie Tyndal was divorced from Wm. S. Tyndal, and given $1,200 alimony and $100 attorney fees. In the case of Clayton Mallory vs the Waterloo Manufacturing Co., foreclosure was ordered, and the property, the real estate, will be sold, W. H. Leas attorney, acting for Mallory. The sheriff on Tuesday, arrested Wm. M. Gunsenhauser on a charge of embezzling, he having been indicted by the grand jury. It is claimed he had sold organs for Mr. Husselman, the Waterloo dealer, and had not turned over the money. He was bound over to next term. The Keller case, explained last week, has been on since our last issue, taking nearly all the time. It was fought inch by inch, as the principle involved was an important one—the responsibility of employers for injuries happening to their employes. Mr. Harris of Ft. Wayne, a beginner in law, and Mr. Penfield of this place, were for the plaintiffs The defendant, Keller, had Henry Colerick and Mr. Swayne of Ft. Wayne, and a young man from the same place, named Ninde, a nephew, we believe of the well known lawyer of that name, Swayne, we are told, is a grandson of the late Justice Swayne, of the U. S. supreme bench. On coming to Auburn, Dr. Keller also employed James E. Rose of this place. So it was a hot fight. Monday, the pleadings began. First for plaintiff, was Mr. Harris and for the defense, Mr. Ninde, both making their first speech to a jury. After Ninde, came Mr. Swayne, and then Harry Colerick, who spoke three-fourths of an hour, till they stopped for supper, then 2½ hours after supper. Tuesday morning, Mr. Penfield took the last speech, remaining on the floor 3½ hours. All the pleas were good, especially those of Colerick and Penfield. The judge charged the jury before dinner, and after dinner they retired. At 5 o'clock they were still out, and as Judge Powers had been suffering with the grip, he concluded to go home that evening. So he called them in for instructions as to a "sealed verdict" to be fixed up in his absence, if they agreed, and to be left with the foreman, M. L. Hoffman. Then they went back to deliberate. The next morning, about three o'clock, they brought in a sealed verdict, after being out about fifteen hours When the judge came down that forenoon, it was read in their presence, and gave the plaintiff $2,600 damage. The case will be appealed, and there will be to all appearances a big fight in the supreme court. The jury were then discharged, and the Judge will do what work there is still to do, or have Judge Woodhull of Angola, remain and work in his place, as he wants to feel better before beginning court at Angola next week. The next term here, in March, will see a big damage case from Ft. Wayne.

Their terrible fate was not known till after the fire was cooled down, when their charred bodies were found.

The lecture last week by John DeWitt Miller, was one of the very best we ever heard. It was full of wit the freshest and most enjoyable, of wisdom the most valuable, and its moral features were of that sterling kind that always leaves its impression on the mind. And in all its features it was of the highest order as an intellectual feast. The audience was charmed then delighted, and when the hour and a half that had seemed to more than half that time had expired, all went away, happier and better for having been there.

Democratic Caucuses,

As will be seen we publish the notice of Chairman Ab. Kelley, for democratic caucuses to be held in each precinct in the county, on Saturday of this week, Jan. 30 Let everyone who reads this or hears of it, speak to his neighbors about it, and help to see that each meeting has a good attendance. Then let each meeting select for its committeeman, one of its best and most wideawake and energetic democrats. Remember that the coming summer brings on a lively political campaign, and we want to see intelligent and earnest work done. And the best way to get it done, is for every democrat to take an interest in it. And when the meeting is over, let the new committeeman or secretary of the meeting send a report to the Courier, so a brief account can be given of the action all over the county. Please don't forget this part of it. We want a complete list, as people will call here for these things for two years or more. And remember to talk about a county chairman, as the committeemen will soon meet to elect a new one in place of Mr Kelley, to serve for two years. This meeting comes a little early for us, but, we believe it is at the right time. Formerly we held our caucuses in March, and elected a county chairman in April But the present plan, will, we believe, be much better.

Waterloo, Ind., Jan., 30, '90.

Facts cannot be denied. A word to the wise is sufficient. A. Y. Rosenbury of Waterloo, would call the attention of the people that he is successfully treating chronic diseases of all kinds with his natural talent which is given him by a higher power than that of man, and with his magnetic healing power. It is wonderful to see what he has done in so many cases that have been given up by the best medical skill in restoring them to health and making them comfortable for life. The diseases that can be cured: fever sores, scrofula in its worst form, salt rheum, rheumatism, nervous headache, dyspepsia, catarrh, erysipelas, disease of the liver, skin diseases, limbs crippled by injury or diseases, sweenied limbs, and in fact all chronic diseases. It is a solemn fact that some of these diseases can go to such an extent that no power on earth can save them. Nearly all diseases are curable. All stages of them are not. Your case may be cured now, but in a short time it may be too late and will soon have passed the time and you must endure a weary and painful existence and long for the grim monster to come and relieve you of your suffering.

THE WINE WAS RED.

When the Witnesses "Looked on It" and Tasted it.

There was a funny episode in the Gaskell-Keller trial here last Saturday. As we stated last week, the parties are from Ft. Wayne. Young Gaskell sued Dr. Keller for damages on account of an accident while working for Keller. When Dr. and Mrs. Keller started to come to Auburn, Mrs. Keller being greatly worried at having a case in court in which they were sued for large damages, was extremely nervous and her physician advised her to bring some wine or brandy along, to take now and then. It was finally agreed they would have a little wine. So the Doctor sent word to his druggist to send a bottle of wine to the Lake Shore station, where they were to start. The intention was, to have a small bottle, but what was their surprise when they reached the station, to find a full grown wine bottle full of the best. So they had to bring it along. Its presence was a constant annoyance to the lady, and as she did not use much of it, the Doctor got her a two-ounce vial Saturday morning, and took it up to the court room. Mrs. Keller was in the witness room on the south side of the hall, and there she filled the vial with the wine, and then put the bottle and the glass she had used, behind a box in the room, and then forgot all about it. Saturday forenoon young Gaskell, and some other lads about his age, who had come up for witnesses, were in the room, waiting, and discovered the prize. They "took it in" without ceremony, and soon became very talkative. While in this happy frame of mind, young Gaskell was overheard by Dr. Keller, to tell one of the young men, that the injury was caused by his own fault. This was at once seized upon as a good point. But it soon came out the boys had had a bottle in the witness room, and then Mr. Penfield, the lawyer for the plaintiff, went in there and got it and the glass tumbler that was with it. Of course the bottle was now empty, but its presence in the court room produced quite a sensation. Dr. Keller was recalled, and asked why he had furnished the boys the liquor, the expectation being, that it would be proved he had done this to loosen Gaskell's tongue and get at the truth. But the Doctor knew nothing as to the boys having had the liquor till he saw and recognized the bottle. And even then he was at a loss to know how they got it. Mrs. Keller was then put on the stand and told about leaving the wine as she supposed, securely hid, and then the whole story was plain. The court, the lawyers and the jury had a big laugh and then the case was taken up again on its merits and work went on. But it was quite a dramatic affair while it lasted.

Prohibition County Meeting.

The Auburn Lecture Course.

Auburn will have a first-class lecture course, beginning Feb. 10. This is settled and all arrangements have been made. The first of the course will be by the famous Drummer Boy of Shiloh, proved to be the youngest boy to enter the service as a drummer, and who is besides, a drummer of most marvelous skill and power. He is also a great traveler, having traveled extensively in the East, and especially in Palestine, the "Holy Land." These travels will be the subject of his lecture Feb. 10, when he will give

"In Eastern Lands."

The next evening he will give his no less famous lecture, or narrative to which so many ex-soldiers have listened with rapture,

"The Battle of Shiloh."

These lectures will be illustrated with his superior Stereo Scopticon Tarnsparencies, and on each occasion, he will display his wonderful skill as a drummer.

The next in the course will be the famous impersonator whose wonderful powers of transforming his appearance, some of our people have seen. In this, he is unapproachable. He will be here Feb. 18.

G. Paul Smith,

On March 4, we have

Miss Julia F. Lee,

the "Queen of the Platform," as she is regarded by those who have heard her. She is a lady of wonderful gifts.

The next in the course, March 25, will be the great Shakespearian reader,

James Kay Applebee,

who will appear in Hamlet, one the most wonderful of the Shakespearian plays.

Following this, and concluding the course, will be,

Lieut. L. B. Baker,

who captured Wilkes Booth, the assassin of Lincoln, and who will lecture on that terrible tragedy, the assassination and the capture, with all of which he is personally familiar.

The price of a ticket to each lecture is 35 cents, except that of G. Paul Smith, which is 50 cents, making the cost of the entire course, $2 25. But season tickets will be sold for the entire course at $1.50 each, thus making a great reduction to those who take the entire course. These season tickets will be so arranged, that anyone holding them can have any one of the tickets or coupons, used by any one of his family, or by a friend, so that in case he cannot go himself, the ticket can be used by another, and no loss can result. It is hoped that everyone who can possibly do so, will assist in sustaining this lecture course. Auburn has not had one for some time, and has in this regard been behind some other towns. The gentlemen who have undertaken this, are not only public sprited themselves, but they feel that our citizens generally feel the same way, and will help to make it a grand success.

A TERRIBLE HOLOCAUST

A FARM HOUSE BURNS WITH TWO SLEEPERS.

Chili Backs Down—An Opera House in Flames—Outlaws Make a Raid—An International Silver Congress—Judge Woods' Case.

ROASTED.

Terrible Holocaust Near Kendallville, Ind.

The residence of George Myers, three miles from Kendallville, Ind., was the scene of a dreadful holocaust the other night.

The family consisted of Mr. and Mrs. Myers, their six children, Henry, William, Eugene, Marion, Lloyd, and an 11-year-old daughter, and Wm. Owen, brother to Mrs. Myers, aged 45. Marion Myers was about sixteen years old. Mr. Owen and the boys, Henry, William, Eugene, and Marion slept up-stairs in one large room. Mr. and Mrs. Myers with their two youngest children slept in the bedroom below.

The entire family appeared to have been awakened at about the same time by the shouts of Mr. Owen in the upper room. Henry, William and Eugene Myers, who slept in the same room, sprang out of bed, but were almost suffocated by the smoke. They possessed presence of mind sufficient to throw themselves upon their faces and crawl toward the head of the stairs. Through some providential means the three boys managed to escape with nothing on but their underclothing. They heard Mr. Owen calling for help, but could do nothing. In fact the smoke and fire had almost driven them mad. Marion Myers seems not to have had any knowledge of his impending fate. He was a sound sleeper and perished in his bed. Mr. Owen probably became confused and soon lost consciousness, for with the Myers boy he was burned to a crisp.

When Mr. Myers was awakened by his unfortunate brother-in-law's cries, he rushed to rescue his wife and children in another room, but the dense cloud of smoke and fire drove him back. There was not an instant to lose, and hurriedly slipping into his breeches and coat he knocked out the only window in the room and helped his wife and little ones out. There was no time to dress or even throw anything over them.

Gentle Peace.

A Washington special, dated the 26th, says: The cruel war is over—at least so everybody in Washington believes, since the Santiago message is confirmed. Mr. Blaine says the report is substantially correct. What is more, he knew that Chili would take the action mentioned in the report. He knew it yesterday morning at 10 o'clock. The President, likewise, knew it. Montt had privately said so, and Egan had cabled that Chili would reply in a day or two. Blaine advised the President to await the reply before sending his message to Congress. Indeed, he went so far as to urge the President to hold it until the reply came.

Hanged But Still Lives.

Rufe Moore, colored, was hanged at Trenton, Ga., in May last for murder. The negro's neck was not broken, but he was pronounced dead by the physicians. He was cut down, coffined and placed in a wagon to be taken over the mountains to his home for burial. It is now pretty certain that Moore was not dead and that the shaking up he received in the ride in his coffin over rough roads revived him and that he recovered. Several reliable witnesses testify to having seen Moore walking on the streets of his native village. The affair is causing great excitement throughout North Alabama and Georgia.

Judge Woods' Case.

In executive session the Senate authorized the Committee on Judiciary to send for persons and papers in conducting the investigation of the charges preferred by Senator Vorhees against Judge Woods, nominated to the additional circuit judgeship in the Fifth Circuit Court, which is necessary in order that witnesses may get their per diem and mileage. Judge Woods has been furnished a copy of the charges against him and his reply is expected before the next meeting of the committee.

Russia's Peril.

Advices have been received from St. Petersburg that the powers of several governors of Russian provinces have been increased to the extent of allowing them to declare material law. This is to meet the dangerous machinations of the nihilists, who are taking advantage of the sufferings of the peasants from the famine to incite them to revolt.

An Opera House in Flames.

Fire started in the third story of the J. N. Godman factory, in the Metropolitan Opera House Block, Columbus, Ohio, and because of the delay in sending in an alarm the handsome and costly block was enveloped in flames quite beyond the power of the fire department to control until the handsome block was entirely consumed. Loss $200,000.

Outlaws Make a Raid.

A gang of outlaws, supposed to belong to the Dalton crowd, raided the new town of Harvey, in the Sac and Fox reservation, Oklahoma, terrorized the inhabitants, and robbed the principal stores of all the valuable goods they contained.

Deadly Snow Slide.

A snow slide at Canon Creek, Cal., swept the mill machinery and several miners' houses away. No lives lost. The damage will exceed $60,000.

Out Again.

The Chicago and Erie switchmen at Huntington, Ind., are again on strike. This time they want higher wages and their old yardmaster back. Not a freight train is moving.

An International Silver Congress.

The Berlin correspondent of the London Standard says the United States Government is upon the eve of opening negotiations with the European powers with the view of convening an international congress on the silver question.

New York Democrats.

The New York Democratic State Committee has named Feb. 22, and Albany as the place for holding the State convention.

Wreck at De Soto, Mo.

The north-bound through express was wrecked one mile south of De Soto, Mo. The train was derailed by a broken rail. The sleeping car was thrown from the track and partly tipped on its side. Sleeping-car Conductor Letherbury was bruised about the hips and breast. Pullman Porter Collins had his shoulder bruised and received other slight injuries. F. B. Nicholts of Greely, Col., was slightly injured about the face and hands. W. McGregor of Flint, Mich., was severely cut about the face and was bruised about the head and shoulders. He was taken from the train and left under the care of physicians at De Soto. Trainmaster T. H. Hayden of the Iron Mountain road, was slightly injured. The injured passengers were transferred to another train.

SOME BIG DEMANDS

Incorporated in a Third Party Platform.

The Third Party Convention in session at Paris, Texas, has adopted a long platform of which the following are the financial planks: "We demand the immediate issue of $150,000,000 of legal tender treasury notes, $50,000,000 to be paid for labor on public improvements, such as buildings, levees for the Mississippi River and the lakes, and for securing or constructing Government railroads and telegraphs, the other $100,000,000 to be furnished to farmers at 1 per cent. to take up overdue farm mortgages on condition that the farmer transfer the note and mortgage to the United States to be deposited in the Treasury as collateral security on the same terms as those on which the banks deposit the United States bonds.

"We demand the dissolution of the partnership between the United States and the liquor traffic by the repeal of the internal revenue laws on liquor and tobacco, and that the deficiency in the revenue, say $125,000,000, be supplied by an annual issue of $125,000,000 of legal tender notes until the volume of money reaches $50 per capita."

SENOR MATTA'S NOTE

Must Be Withdrawn or Diplomatic Relations Will Cease at Once.

A special from Santiago de Chili, dated Jan. 25th, says: It was learned to-day that the question at issue between Chili and the United States has assumed a most acute phase. This information is to the effect that the Chilian Government has received from the Government of the United States, an ultimatum which, in the strongest possible terms, state that diplomatic relations between the two countries will cease unless the offensive circular note sent out by Senor Matta, recently the Chilian Foreign Minister, in regard to the Baltimore affair is withdrawn. Furthermore, the ultimatum demands that Chili immediately make reparation for the attack by the mob on the Baltimore sailors in Valparaiso, and that she makes an apology for those attacks.

The ultimatum concludes with the statement that the United States will tolerate no further delay on the part of Chili answering the demands of the American Government.

Trouble at Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh special: The excitement incident to the Pittsburgh, Allegheny and Manchester street railway strike increases daily. There has not been so much rioting since the strike began, as there was Tuesday night. Several men were assaulted; an attempt was made to shoot a motorman; there was an increased amount of stoning the cars and a dozen arrests occurred.

A big row occurred on Washington street in which nearly five hundred people participated, and the entire community was in an uproar from 8 until after 9 o'clock.

The saloons along the way have been closed by order of the Sheriff and in consequence the rioters are getting no stimulants. It is generally feared by the citizens and even the police that if the strike is not soon settled there will be a serious riot.

Shocked Into Insanity.

An appalling calamity was barely averted at Fairview, Ohio, on the Fort Wayne road. A sled drawn by two horses and containing thirteen ladies was about to cross the track, when the west-bound limited express came rushing by at a speed of thirty miles an hour. One of the horses was struck and killed and the sled was overturned, but miraculously the only injuries sustained by the ladies were slight bruises and scratches. A direful affliction, however, was visited upon Mrs. Breakbell, who owned the team and was driving. The shock to her nervous system was so great as to bereft her of her reasoning faculties, and it is believed she is a hopeless maniac.

A Death-Bed Confession.

By Arch Stuart's death-bed confession, after fifteen years, a Lawrence County, Ohio, murder is explained. At Buckhorn Furnace Arch Stuart kept a boarding-house. Patrick Kern, a cattle dealer, stopped there for the night in January, 1887. During the night he was brutally murdered, and his body dragged through the snow for three miles, where it was found six weeks later. Stuart says he and one of the Coroner's jury committed the murder, and secured $1,000 for their trouble. The man realized that death would soon claim him and made a full confession. The participants are now all dead.

A Big Fire.

Fire was discovered in the basement of the huge five-story building numbers 5 to 9 Union Square, New York, occupied by Brentanos, importers of books and fancy goods, Schneider & Campbell, dealers in gas fixtures, lamps and fancy bronzes, and O. R. Worms, a dealer in diamonds and jewelry. The fire gutted this building and threatened the Tiffany Building adjoining. The losses tell the story. From the most accurate estimates at the present writing, the losses will be as follows: Schneider, Campbell & Co., $250,000, principally from water; Charles E. Huntley & Co., $70,000; Samuel Green & Co., $100,000; O. R. Worms, $45,000.

He Defended His Sister.

Frank Laughlin, a 12-year-old boy, was murdered while attempting to defend his sister, who teaches school in McDonald Township, Hardin County, Ohio. Miss Laughlin was chastising Bert Smith, John Stevenson, Charles and William Spurlock, aged 14 to 17, when they turned on her and were using her very roughly. Her brother went to her defense. They turned on him and beat him with clubs and their fists until they inflicted injuries which resulted in his death. Miss Laughlin was badly injured. The boys were all arrested and are confined in jail at Kenton.

Routing Spiritualists.

There was a general routing of ghosts at Mrs. Jennie Moore's seance parlors, Chicago, the other night. The patrons of the place, becoming convinced that they were being swindled, invoked the aid of the police. Three officers in citizens clothes were introduced and instructed to make a dash for the cabinet at a given signal. They were frustrated, however, by the precipitation of a mock row by friends of the medium, who had become suspicious of them. Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Gothard were arrested, but were bailed out by friends.

Russia's Bread Unfit for Human Food.

The London Lancet publishes an analysis of the bread in common use in the famine-stricken districts of Russia, showing that 10 per cent., and probably more, of the article is composed of woody fibre, husks, leafy matter, seeds, silica, sand and other foreign substances. The so-called bread is of a dirty brown color and resembles peat. Experts to whom it was submitted failed to recognize it as bread.

The Silver Question.

A special from Washington says Minister Lincoln has been instructed to invite Great Britain to an international conference on the silver question, if, in his opinion, the feeling of the English Cabinet is such as to justify the invitation. The dissemination of this news about the Capitol has caused great gratification among the silver men. The instructions to Minister Lincoln were dispatched by direction of the President ten days ago.

Garza's Revolutionary Movement Gaining Strength.

San Antonio (Texas) special: Private advices received here from the lower part of the Rio Grande border are to the effect that the excitement there over the revolutionary movement, instead of decreasing, is spreading among the people and the plotters against the administration of President Diaz are gaining in number rapidly. In the meantime the United States troops and federal authorities will continue to exercise their vigilance while the Mexican Government is anxiously awaiting the expected revolt to be started on a formidable scale.

Summer Hotel Burned.

The new South Detroit Exchange, the hotel just below Wyandotte, Mich., burned to the ground. The flames were discovered at 2 a. m., by a servant girl, who gave the alarm. About two dozen guests were quartered in the hotel at the time and some of them had very narrow escapes from incinaration, escaping in their night robes and leaving all their clothes and baggage to burn. Mrs. Busch, the wife of the proprietor, had her face severely burned in escaping from the building.

Passenger Trains Collide.

Albuquerque (N. M.) special: A Raymond and Whitcom special going west and the Atlantic and Pacific regular passenger train coming east, collided a few hundred yards east of Blue Water, a station on the Alantic and Pacific road, 107 miles west of this place, and five employes of the road were killed and three injured. The passengers were badly shaken up but none of them on either train sustained serious injuries. A special train bearing officials of the road went out to the scene of the wreck.

Toledo Flooded.

Toledo special: A water main under Broadway burst, flooding the street to the depth of three feet and doing $50,000 damage. So far the department has been unable to locate the break. It evidently occurred during the recent cold snap. It seems to have soaked the whole southern end of the city until the stone pavement finally yielded. The pressure at the water works has been lowered to fifteen pounds pending repairs, and meantime fire will have but trifling opposition.

Over-Production.

Pittsburgh special: It is learned that twenty-one flint glass factories have decided to shut down for an indefinite period. This action will throw out of employment 2,500 men and boys. The cause assigned is over-production and inability to make satisfactory agreement on freight rates. Investigation develops the fact that ten houses have already closed and the fires will be extinguished in the balance of the factories by the end of the week.

A Sleigh Crash.

A terrific crash of merry sleighs going in opposite directions occurred at Catawba, Ohio. Six single sleighs were racing down the street at breakneck speed. Frank McConkey was driving in the opposite direction, and collided with Edward Fitzgiven's sleigh. His horse was impaled on the shaft, which entered the animals breast and penetrated the wind-pipe. The horse was killed almost instantly. Mr. McConkey was thrown out and badly bruised.

Smothered Her Babe.

A most distressing affair occurred at the residence of Daniel Buntz, near Kenton, Ohio. Mrs. Buntz was sleeping with an infant child, and in some way in her sleep, lay upon the infant and smothered the child. When she awoke in the morning she found the babe cold and stiff by her side. She became almost frantic with grief and attempted to make away with herself. The timely arrival of assistance prevented her carrying out her threat.

Cleveland's New Bishop.

Rev. Dr. Horstman, Bishop-elect of Cleveland, has received the official bull of his election as Bishop from Rome. The date for his consecration will be fixed in a few days. The ceremony will take place at the Cathedral and will be participated in by a number of the leading clergymen of the country.

Broke His Neck.

Frank Agbold, a young farmer residing at Poland, Ohio, in attempting to descend the cellar stairs in his residence, fell to the bottom. When picked up life was extinct and his neck broken. He had a wife and child.

A $20,000 Fire at Alliance.

The entire plant of L. Templin & Sons, florists and seedsmen, Alliance, Ohio, was entirely destroyed by fire. Loss, $20,000; insurance $5,000; origin of fire unknown. The firm will rebuild.

Cargo of Cocoanuts Ashore.

New York special: The Blue Point life saving station reports the brig, "Harry and Aubrey," from Sanbias for New York, with cocoanuts, ashore twelve miles east of Fire Island light.

APOLOGIZE OR FIGHT.

THE UNITED STATES HAS BEEN INSULTED.

President Harrison's Message to Congress Deprecating the Attack on Our Sailors—Minister Egan Upheld—Reparation and Apology Demanded.

Uncle Sam's Demands.

Chili must apologize or fight. That is, in brief the declaration of President Harrison, whose long-promised message, with the mass of correspondence bearing upon the issues involved, has been submitted to Congress. The ultimatum, which was made public, points distinctly to a resort to arms unless an apology is forthcoming. The capital now rings with talk of bloody war. Battles on the seas and bloody conflicts on Chilian soil are thought to be close at hand. And everybody enjoys the prospect of the just chastisement of the South American bantam that for months past has dared to flap its wings in the face of your forbearing Uncle Sam.

Speaker Crisp called the House to order, struck the desk and the business of the day began with the usual prayer from the blind chaplain, who, despite the war rumors, made no reference to them. In the expectation of listening to the Chilian correspondence and the President's message a large crowd filled the galleries to overflowing.

Private Secretary Pruden, with a large bundle under his arm, pushed the doors aside and entered the House. Speaker Crisp at once suspended the call of States for the introduction of bills and nodded to the President's private secretary. The latter made the usual announcement that he bore a message of the President, and handed the armful, consisting of the message and correspondence, to the doorkeeper, who carried the heavy load to the Speaker. The babble of tongues, which had been so loud as to drown the voice of the clerk, ceased. A hush fell upon the House, and amid a stillness which could not have been greater had the big chamber been empty, the clerk began to read. The reading of the precious document, printed in pamphlet form, was listened to with rapt attention.

THE MESSAGE SUBMITTED.

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

In my annual message, delivered to Congress at the beginning of the present session, after a brief statement of the facts then in the possession of this Government touching the assault in the streets of Valparaiso, Chili, upon the sailors of the United States steamship Baltimore on the evening of the 16th of October last, I said:

"This Government is now awaiting the result of an investigation which has been conducted by the Criminal Court at Valparaiso. It is reported unofficially that the investigation is about completed, and it is expected that the result will be communicated to this Government, together with some adequate and satisfactory response to the note by which the attention of Chili was called to this incident. If these just expectations should be disappointed or further needless delay intervenes, I will, by a special message, bring this matter again to the attention of Congress for such action as may be necessary."

In my opinion the time has now come when I should lay before the Congress and the country the correspondence between this Government and the Government of Chili, from the time of the breaking out of the revolution against Balmaceda, together with all other facts in the possession of the Executive Department relating to this matter. The diplomatic correspondence is herewith transmitted, together with some correspondence between the naval officers for the time in command in Chilian waters and the Secretary of the Navy, and also the evidence taken at the Mare Island Navy Yard since the arrival of the Baltimore at San Francisco. I do not deem it necessary in this communication to attempt any full analysis of the correspondence or of the evidence. A brief restatement of the international questions involved and of the reasons why the responses of the Chilian Government are unsatisfactory is all that I deem necessary.

It may be well at the outset to say that whatever may have been said in this country or in Chili in criticism of Mr. Egan, our Minister at Santiago, the true history of this exciting period in Chilian affairs, from the outbreak of the revolution until this time, discloses no act on the part of Egan unworthy of his position or that could justly be the occasion of serious animadversion or criticism. He has, I think, on the whole, borne himself, in very trying circumstances, with dignity, discretion and courage, and has conducted the correspondence with ability, courtesy and fairness.

It is worth while also at the beginning to say that the right of Mr. Egan to give shelter in the legation to certain adherents of the Balmaceda Government, who applied to him for asylum, has not been denied by the Chilian authorities, nor has any demand been made for the surrender of these refugees. That there was urgent need of asylum is shown by Mr. Egan's note of August 24, 1891, describing the disorders that prevailed in Santiago, and by the evidence of Captain Schley as to the pillage and violence that prevailed at Valparaiso. The correspondence discloses, however, that the request of Mr. Egan for a safe conduct from the country in behalf of these refugees, was denied. The precedents cited by him in the correspondence, particularly the case of the revolution in Peru in 1865, did not leave the Chilian Government in such a position to deny the right of asylum to political refugees and seems very clearly to support Mr. Egan's contention that a safe conduct to neutral territory was a necessary and acknowledged incident of the asylum. These refugees have very recently, without formal safe conduct, but by the acquiescence of the Chilian authorities, been placed on board the Yorktown and are now being conveyed to Callao, Peru. This incident might be considered wholly closed, but for the disrespect manifested toward this Government by the close and offensive police surveillance of the legation premises, which was maintained during most of the period of the stay of the refugees therein. After the date of my annual message and up to the time of the transfer of the refugees to the Yorktown, the legation premises seem to have been surrounded by police in uniform, and police agents or detectives in citizens' dress, who offensively scrutinized persons entering or leaving the legation, and, on one or more occasions, arrested members of the Minister's family. Commander Evans, who by my direction recently visited Mr. Egan at Santiago, in his telegram to the Navy Department, described the legation as a "veritable prison," and states that the police agents or detectives were, after his arrival, withdrawn during his stay. It appears further from the note of Mr. Egan, of Nov. 20, 1891, that on one occasion at least these police agents, whom he declares to be known to him, invaded the legation premises, pounding on its windows and using insulting and threatening language towards persons therein. This breach of the right of a Minister to freedom from police espionage and restraint seems to have been so flagrant that the Argentine Minister, who was Dean of the Diplomatic Corps, having observed it, felt called upon to protest against it to the Chilian Minister of Foreign Affairs. The Chilian authorities have, as will be observed from the correspondence, charged the refugees and the inmates of the legation with insulting the police; but it seems to me incredible that men whose lives were in jeopardy and whose safety could only be secured by retirement and quietness should have sought to provoke a collision which could end only in their destruction, or to aggravate their condition by intensifying a popular feeling that, at one time, so threatened the legation as to require Mr. Egan to appeal to the Minister of Foreign Affairs.

But the most serious incident disclosed by the correspondence is that of the attack on the sailors of the Baltimore in the streets of Valparaiso on the 16th of October last. In my last annual message, speaking upon the information then in my possession, I said: "So far as I have yet been able to learn no other explanation of this bloody work has been suggested than that it had its origin in hostility to these men as sailors of the United States wearing the uniform of their Government, and not in any individual act or personal animosity."

We have now received from the Chilian Government an abstract of the conclusions of the Fiscal General upon the testimony taken by the Judge of Crimes in an investigation which was made to extend over nearly three months. I very much regret to be compelled to say that this report does not enable me to modify the conclusion announced in my annual message. I am still of the opinion that our sailors were assaulted, beaten, stabbed and killed, not for anything they or any one of them had done, but for what the Government of the United States had done, or was charged with having done, by its civil officers and naval commanders. If that be the true aspect of the case, the injury was to the Government of the United States, not to these poor sailors who were assaulted in a manner so brutal and so cowardly.

Before attempting to give an outline of the facts upon which this conclusion rests, I think it right to say a word or two upon the legal aspect of the case.

The Baltimore was in the harbor of Valparaiso by virtue of that general invitation which nations are held to extend to the war vessels of other powers with which they have friendly relations. This invitation, I think, must be held ordinarily to embrace the privilege of such communication with the shore as is reasonable, necessary, and proper for the comfort and convenience of the officers and men of such vessels. Captain Schley testifies that when his vessel returned to Valparaiso, on September 14, the city officers, as is customary, extended the hospitalities of the city to his officers and crew. It is not claimed that every personal collision or injury in which a sailor or officer of such naval vessel visiting the shore may be involved raises an international question, but I am clearly of the opinion that where such officers or sailors are assaulted by a resident populace, animated by hostility to the government whose uniform these sailors and officers wear, and in resentment of acts done by their Government, not by them, their nation must take notice of the event as one involving an infraction of its rights and dignity; not in a secondary way, as where a citizen is injured and presents his claim through his own Government, but in a primary way, precisely as if its Minister or Consul or the flag itself had been the object of the same character of assault. The officers and sailors of the Baltimore were in the harbor of Valparaiso under the orders of their Government, not by their own choice. They were upon the shore by the implied invitation of the Government of Chili and with the approval of their commanding officers, and it does not distinguish their case from that of a consul that his stay is more permanent or that he holds the express invitation of the local government to justify his longer residence. Nor does it affect the question that the injury was the act of a mob. If there had been no participation by the police or military in this cruel work and no neglect on their part to extend protection, the case would still be one, in my opinion, when its extent and character are considered, involving international rights. The incidents of the affair are briefly as follows:

On the 16th of October last, Capt. Schley, commanding the United States ship Baltimore, gave shore-leave to 117 petty officers and sailors of his ship. These men left the ship about 1:30 p. m. No incident of violence occurred; none of our men were arrested; no complaints lodged against them; nor did any collision or outbreak occur until about 6 o'clock p. m. Capt. Schley states that he was himself on shore and about the streets of the city until 5:30 p. m.; that he met very many of his men who were upon leave; that they were sober and were conducting themselves with propriety, saluting Chilian and other officers as they met them. Other officers of the ship and Captain Jenkins, of the merchant ship Keweenaw, corroborate Captain Schley as to the general sobriety and good behavior of our men. The Sisters of Charity at the hospital to which our wounded men were taken when injured, stated that they were sober when received. If the situation had been otherwise, we must believe that the Chilian police authorities would have made arrests. About 6 p. m. the assault began, and it is remarkable that the investigation by the Judge of Crimes, though so protracted, does not enable him to give any more satisfactory account of its origin than is found in the statement that it began between drunken sailors. Repeatedly in the correspondence it is asserted that it was impossible to learn the precise cause of the riot. The Minister of Foreign Affairs, Matta, in his telegram to Mr. Montt, under date of December 31, states that the quarrel began between two sailors in a tavern and was continued in the street, persons who were passing joining in it.

The testimony of Talbot, an apprentice, who was with Riggin, is that the outbreak in which they were involved began by a Chilian sailor spitting in the face of Talbot, which was resented by a knockdown. It appears that Riggin and Talbot were at the time unaccompanied by any others of their shipmates.

* * * * *

After summarizing the correspondence up to a certain point he says:

The communications of the Chilian Government in relation to this cruel and disastrous attack upon our men, as will appear from the correspondence, have not in any degree taken the form of a manly and satisfactory expression of regret, much less of apology. The event was of so serious a character that if the injuries suffered by our men had been wholly the result of an accident in a Chilian port the incident was grave enough to have called for some public expression of sympathy and regret from the local authorities. It is not enough to say that the affair was lamentable, for humanity would require that expression even if the beating and killing of our men had been justifiable. It is not enough to say that the incident is regretted, coupled with the statement that the affair was not of an unusual character in ports where foreign sailors are accustomed to meet. It is not for a generous and sincere government to seek for words of small or equivocal meanings in which to convey to a friendly power an apology for an offense so atrocious as this. In the case of the assault by a mob in New Orleans upon the Spanish Consulate in 1851, Mr. Webster wrote to the Spanish Minister, Mr. Calderon, that the acts complained of were "a disgraceful and flagrant breach of duty and propriety," and that his Government "regrets them as deeply as Mr. Calderon or his government could possibly do;" that "these acts have caused the President very great pain and he thinks a proper acknowledgment is due to her Majesty." He invited the Spanish Consul to return to his post, guaranteeing protection, and offered to salute the Spanish flag if the Consul should come in a Spanish vessel. Such a treatment by the government of Chili of this assault would have been more creditable to the Chilian authorities; and much less can hardly be satisfactory to a government that values its dignity and honor.

In our note of October 23d last, which appears in the correspondence, after receiving the report of the board of officers appointed by Captain Schley to investigate the affair, the Chilian Government was advised of the aspect which it then assumed and called upon for any facts in its possession that might tend to modify the unfavorable impression which our report had created. It is very clear from the correspondence that, before the receipt of this note the examination was regarded by the police authorities as practically closed. It was, however, reopened and protracted through a period of nearly three months. We might justly have complained of this unreasonably delay, but in view of the fact that the Government of Chili was still provisional and with a disposition to be forbearing and hopeful of a friendly termination, I have awaited the report which has but recently been made.

On the 21st inst. I caused to be communicated to the Government of Chili by the American Minister at Santiago, the conclusions of this Government, after a full consideration of all the evidence and of every suggestion affecting this matter, and to these conclusions I adhere. They were as follows:

1. That the assault is not relieved of the aspect which the early information of the event gave to it, viz: That of an attack upon the uniform of the United States navy, having its origin and motive in a feeling of hostility to this Government, and not in any act of the sailors or of any of the men.

2. That the public authorities at Valparaiso flagrantly failed in their duty to protect our men, and that some of the police and of the Chilian soldiers and sailors were themselves guilty of unprovoked assaults upon our sailors before and after arrest. He (the President) thinks the preponderance of the evidence and the inherent probabilities lead to the conclusion that Riggin was killed by the police or soldiers.

3. That he (the President) is therefore compelled to bring the case back to the position taken by this Government in the note of Oct. 23 last, and to ask for a suitable apology and for some adequate reparation for the injury done to this Government.

A claim for reparation has been made in behalf of this man; for, while he was not a citizen of the United States, the doctrine so long held by us, as expressed in the consular regulation, is: "The principles which are maintained by this Government in regard to the protection, as distinguished from the relief, of seamen are well settled. It is held that the circumstance that the vessel is American is evidence that the seamen on board are such; and in every regularly documented merchant vessel the crew will find their protection in the flag that covers them."

I have as yet received no reply to our note of the 21st instant, but, in my opinion, I ought not to delay longer to bring these matters to the attention of Congress for such action as may be deemed appropriate.

[Signed] BENJAMIN HARRISON.
Executive Mansion, January 25, 1892.

The above is President Harrison's presentation of the Chilian affair to Congress. The voluminous correspondence shows on the part of Chili evasive duplicity, covert sarcasm, insolence, and about all the offences that can be committed under the forms of diplomacy. With all this there was nothing expressed nor implied to intimate that Chili intended to apologize for its misconduct in surrounding the American Legation at Santiago with police spies; for the impudent letter of its former Foreign Minister, nor for the murder of our sailors in uniform.

The little republic has evidently depended on its distance, the difficulty in making an offensive war against it, possibly on the wretched help of a peace party in the United States, and on the intrigues of the nitrate trust to delay, discourage and finally defeat the demands of the United States. This mistake will probably be rectified soon.

What is substantially the ultimatum of the United States—its last peremptory demand before adopting war measures—has been sent to Chili. The President asked the immediate withdrawal of Matta's insulting note, an apology for the assault on the sailors, and the payment of damages. Not receiving a favorable reply the President asks Congress to declare war and to authorize its prosecution. This is the purport of the President's message.

A New Raspberry.

Professor Britton, of New York City, has examined specimens of a thornless raspberry, sent to him by Professor Millspaugh, of the West Virginia agricultural experiment station. It grows luxuriantly in Randolph County, West Virginia, and bears fruit, but no briars. Professor Britton pronounced the berry new to horticulture, and named it Rubus Millspaugh, after its discoverer.

Oil from Grape Stones.

The extraction of oil from grape stones promises to develop into a permanent industry. For a long time it has been known that oily matter was present in considerable quantities in the stones of various descriptions of grapes, but only recently has the question been definitely investigated.

Amos Goodwin, a Clark County farmer, had $1,000 Jan. 11. He met a man named Brady, from Chicago, and the two started to see the sights in Jeffersonville, since when both Brady and Goodwin have been missing.

M. S. Cole, a brakeman on the C., H. & I. railroad, had a bitter experience the other night. His freight train jumped the track near Connersville, and he was sent ahead to flag the passenger train which was nearly due. He stood in the snow and the cold for an hour and a half, and his feet were so badly frozen the physicians say they will have to be amputated to save the man's life.

Gov. Chase visited the Michigan City Penitentiary recently preached a sermon to the convicts. The Michigan City News says: He gave the prisoners an excellent talk, which they seemed to appreciate very much. During the day the Governor held private conversations with a number of the convicts, regarding their applications for pardons, and other matters which they desired to call his attention to. What effect the interviews will have is hard to imagine, but it is understood that as a result of his visit here at least one man will be liberated soon.

William Alisch, a car repairer at the Pan Handle shops Indianapolis, was killed while at work on a broken car on a switch. His head was caught between two cars, which were thrown together by the force of a cut of cars thrown into the switch by a yard engine. Alisch's danger was not realized until he was seen to be lying prostrate on the track. He was carried to Dr. Mateee's office by Kregelo and Whitsett, and died there within an hour of the accident. He never regained consciousness, his injury consisting of a fracture of the skull and resulting concussion. He was about thirty-six years old, and leaves a wife and several children.

John P. Campbell, a leading merchant of Marion, met with a serious accident of a peculiar nature, which, it is feared, may terminate fatally. When crossing a street he was knocked down by a runaway horse, to which the shafts of a sleigh were dangling. In some way his clothing caught fire, and he was dragged for some distance, a part of the time being trampled under the feet of the frightened animal. He was severely bruised, a collar bone was broken, and there is evidence of serious internal injuries. Mr. Campbell is one of Marion's best-known citizens. He is an ex-soldier, and served two terms as County Treasurer. He lost one limb in the war, and hence his inability to escape from the runaway horse.

John Cook, the maniac who caused a sensation in a church, was placed in jail at Crawfordsville. Cook suddenly appeared in church, when the meeting was in full progress, and walking up to the Rev. Mr. Stevens, compelled him to leave the pulpit, while he addressed the people in a profane and abusive manner. Cook was finally overpowered and taken home, where he was thought to be rapidly improving, but was discovered in the act of dragging his young daughter from the house to a smoke-house, where he was prepared to burn the poor girl alive. Her screams for help attracted the attention of some parties passing, who at once came to her rescue. While one man held Cook at bay the other rode for assistance. After a hard struggle Officer Grimes finally landed him in jail. He stated to the officers that he was en route to Heaven, and was fixing to offer his daughter as a living sacrific. He will be sent to the asylum.

This year J. C. Shaffer, President of the Richmond city street railway, did not issue passes to all who rode free on the electric cars last year. Among the forgotten were several members of the Council who voted against allowing a street-car house erected at the Glen, the public park, and at a meeting of the Common Council the other night an effort was made to pass an ordinance making it unlawful for any member to accept a pass, but the majority had passes, and the bill was killed.

ROYAL RANGER RALPH;

—: OR :—

The Waif of the Western Prairies.

BY WELDON J. COBB.

CHAPTER XXI—Continued.

"They will soon begin a new mode of attack," said the hermit, "but what we cannot tell until they begin operations."

This the savages did an hour later. Darkness had come down over the ravine, but the hermit stood at the window, and his keen eyes were fixed on the dim scene below.

"I understand their plans now," he said at last.

"What are they?" asked the scout.

"They are trying to scale the cliff."

"It is almost perpendicular."

"Still, under the cover of the darkness they hope to reach us."

"They will not."

"No. One thing has prevented the success of their enterprise."

"And that is——"

"Their discovery," replied the old hermit, grimly.

As he spoke, Walford went to a corner of the cabin. He lowered some object by a rope from the window of the cabin a minute later.

He ignited a match and swung the object clear of the window. It proved to be an immense open lantern. Its rays, suddenly cast forth, illumined the space beneath them bright as day.

It showed the savages in half a dozen places in the act of endeavoring to scale the cliff and reach the refuge of their enemies.

Cries of rage and dismay escaped them, as the action of the hermit baffled their plans. Both Walford and the scout began firing at them and the Modocs retreated.

The flames of the lantern soon died away, leaving the valley in darkness again.

"They seem to have abandoned the attack," suggested the scout, after a long pause.

"For the time being, perhaps," replied Walford; "but we shall have more trouble with them before the night is over."

"You think so?"

"I know it. Look there!"

Both men peered curiously from the window. A flaming streak of fire parted the darkness.

"An arrow," said the scout.

"Exactly."

"Tipped with fire."

"Yes."

"They mean to burn us out."

Walford laughed grimly. "If they can."

"See! There are others."

Half a dozen fire arrows were shot upward from different points of the valley. Most of these fell wide of their intended mark. Some shot over the cabin. Some struck the cliff and were extinguished. Others described a circle and fell to the ground. Some, however, it was evident penetrated the under surface of the exposed floor beneath their feet. These they could not see. Walford seemed undisturbed at these episodes.

"Are you not afraid?" asked the scout, finally.

"Of what!"

"Of the fire."

"I do not believe they can fire the cabin."

"Why not?"

"The sides and floor are damp and moss-covered."

"Ha! what about that."

A decidedly smoky smell began to pervade the place.

"The logs are certainly on fire," remarked Ranger Ralph.

"Well, when we are in danger we will retreat."

"Where?"

"To one of the rocks."

"Is there a way to leave here?"

"Yes."

"And reach the valley?"

Walford nodded assentingly. He saw as he watched from the window that a faint glow showed beneath the cabin.

"They've done it," he said, calmly.

"Done what?"

"Set the cabin on fire."

"Then we had better leave here."

"I suppose we had."

"Then let us do so."

"In a moment. Wait."

"Where are you going?"

"To see that the way is clear."

Walford left the hut on the side farthest from the mountain. Ranger Ralph remained at the window, looking down at the valley. Every moment the glare increased. Evidently the bottom of the cabin was on fire. The arrows of the Modocs had ignited the floor.

The scout could hear the flames crackling fiercely. The smoke began to fill the cabin, and he was impelled to retreat.

Still he determined to await Walford's return. Suddenly an anxious sound startled and alarmed the old scout. There was a tearing, crashing noise.

The hut seemed to rock and quiver wildly. The floor appeared to drop precipitately.

In a flash the scout realized what had occurred. The fire had weakened the joists that held the floor in place. These had been burned through, and the result promised a dire disaster to the scout.

He had just time to spring to one side as he saw what was about to transpire. He reached the door leading to the spot where the tree bridge had been, just as the floor gave way. With a crash it went hurtling to the valley below.

Triumphant shouts of demoniac glee arose from the savages. They expected to see the scout and the hermit dashed to pieces.

Ranger Ralph had escaped unhurt, however, and Walford was not in the cabin when the disaster came.

The scout gained the rock and hastened to get out of range and sight of the Indians.

In his precipitate haste he stumbled and fell. He dropped over the edge of the cliff and landed on a ledge about twenty feet below. The fall made him insensible.

When he awoke to consciousness it was broad daylight, and the valley was deserted. After several days of arduous endeavor to baffle the outlaw Despard and to rescue Inez Tracey, the scout found himself alive, in peril, and with nothing before him except complicated plots and a broken trail.

CHAPTER XXII.

ON THE TRAIL.

One week after the occurrence of the events narrated in the last chapter, a solitary horseman emerged from the last of a series of lonely mountain passes and struck off into a forest beyond which reached the isolated mining district of Gold Valley.

The spot was located about one hundred miles south of Miners' Gulch, and although remote from any large business center, was prolific of numerous little settlements and mining camps.

The horseman took a rapid but close survey of the landscape before he descended from the hills.

"Yonder are the New Era mining camps," he murmured. "It is here that I expect to find Dyke Despard. For two days I have traced him, and I have reason to believe that Danton, his accomplice, is to meet him there and divide their plunder and leave the country. He certainly will not recognize me in this disguise. He shall not escape me. He shall be punished for his many crimes. He shall tell me where I can find the woman I love—Inez Tracey."

It was Darrel Grey who spoke, but not, in propria persona, as the reader first saw him.

He was elaborately disguised, and in nowise resembled the young scout who had rescued Inez Tracey the eventful night at Ten Spot, when our story opened.

His disguise and appearance in the district described may be briefly explained.

When he had been set free by Shadow Snake at the outlaws' stronghold in Lone Canyon, he had, as directed, gone at once to Miners' Gulch.

He knew that it would be dangerous and useless to attempt to find Inez or the scout with the hostile tribes around him. His return to the Gulch was not, therefore, a retreat, but a forced flight for safety.

Once arrived there, he aroused the natives by relating all the exciting events of the preceding few days. The result was that a score of determined men set out the next day to rescue their imperiled companion, Ranger Ralph.

Not a trace of the scout, Inez, the old hermit, or the Indian princess could be found.

The Modocs had returned to their usual camp, where they were so numerous that a journey thither would be useless. The bandits had been dispersed or killed, and the disappointed Darrel could learn nothing of Despard or the surviving members of the band.

All the parties to the recent plot of the desperado had mysteriously and strangely disappeared.

Utterly dispirited the young scout returned to Miners' Gulch.

He had no means of knowing whether Inez Tracey was a prisoner in the hands of the Modocs or was the captive of Despard. He inclined to the latter belief, however, and at last determined to act upon it.

Assuming that Despard had escaped, he resolved to gain a trace of his whereabouts if possible. It was for this reason, knowing the wily foe with whom he had to deal, that he disguised himself.

He visited Lone Canyon, found the tavern in ruins, and the bandit stronghold entirely deserted. Thence he went south, visiting all the many mining camps along Pueblo River.

He pretended to be a prospector, but kept a sharp lookout for some of the escaped outlaws.

Finally, one day, he met at a tavern a man whom he recognized as a former member of Despard's band. From him he deftly learned that Despard and Danton had escaped the Modocs. They were to meet at Dead Man's Gully in a few days. Despard was in hiding and Danton had gone after some hidden treasure.

That afternoon Darrel arrived at the gully, where a tavern that was a general center for the miners was located. Darrel announced to the landlord that he intended to remain for several days, and secured a room at the tavern.

That night and all the next day he haunted the bar-room of the place, keeping a sharp lookout for Despard. He made many guarded inquiries as to the outlaw, but could learn nothing definite concerning him.

The next evening, however, an episode occurred which indicated that his efforts to locate Despard were destined to be rewarded with success at last.

It was just after dusk, and he was seated in a chair near the bar, when a stranger entered the place.

The others in the room, engrossed in card playing and drinking, did not notice him, and Darrel himself only bestowed a passing glance at him. The stranger bore a small sachel in his hand and wore a heavy sombrero that effectually shadowed his bearded face.

He addressed the landlord in a low tone. The moment he spoke Darrel started violently.

"Danton!" he breathed, excitedly.

He had instantly recognized the voice. He controlled his emotions, however, and listened intently.

"Are you the landlord?" asked the disguised Danton.

"Yes."

"I was to meet a friend here."

"What is his name?"

"Fuertado."

"A Mexican?"

"Yes."

"There's no one here of that name," said the landlord.

"Then he hasn't come yet. I'll wait for him. Can you give me a room?"

"Yes."

Danton placed a coin on the counter.

"And send Fuertado to me when he comes."

"All right."

Danton was led to an apartment in the rear of the bar-room by the landlord.

Darrel Grey was keenly excited. He walked out into the open air and reflected deeply. His enemies were nearly in his power.

The disguised stranger was certainly Danton. The man Fuertado he had named was undoubtedly Dyke Despard.

"What had I better do?" he mused.

Darrel formed a quick resolution. He had made the acquaintance of one of the principal men of the place the day previous, and had impressed him favorably. His name was Brown, and he was an ex-officio Sheriff of the district.

Darrel hastened at once to the cabin where he lived. Briefly he related the true object of his visit to Dead Man's Gully. The Sheriff listened interestedly. He had heard of Despard, and evidently bore him no friendly feelings.

"You want me to help you?" he said.

"Yes," replied Darrel.

"And arrest the man?"

"At once."

"On what charge?"

"Train robbery and murder."

"Have you any witnesses?"

"Not here."

"That's it, you see. Despard has some friends among the regular miners."

"Well?"

"They would demand a speedy trial, and, as you have no witnesses, I doubt if you could convict Despard."

"But at Miners' Gulch his crimes are known."

"That is different. Now, I have a plan."

"Well?"

"Arrest him yourself."

"Alone?"

"No; I will help you. We will capture him quietly and spirit him away."

"How?"

"Will you pay the expenses for a vehicle to convey him to the gulch?"

"Yes."

"Then return to the hotel."

"And keep watch of the men?"

"Exactly."

"And you?"

"Depend upon my being on hand when the proper time comes."

"Agreed."

Darrel returned to the hotel. His first question was of the landlord.

"Has your guest's friend come yet?" he asked, with affected carelessness.

"The Mexican?"

"Yes."

"He just came."

"In the room yonder, I suppose."

"Yes."

Darrel went outside again and walked around the house. The shutters of the room occupied by Danton and his companions were closed, however.

"I must see and overhear them," he decided.

He examined the house closely. He knew that it had a large unfinished loft, used for storage. Ten minutes later he was clambering over its rafters, and located the room Danton was in. Then he began to cut a small hole through the thin plastering.

He had made a chink large enough to look into the apartment, when he paused.

Evidently the falling particles of plaster had attracted the attention of the occupants of the place. For a voice, unmistakably that of Despard, asked quickly:

"What is that?"

CHAPTER XXIII.

UNDER ARREST.

Darrel Grey remained perfectly silent and glanced through the hole in the ceiling. Seated at a table was Danton, and opposite him the object of all Darrel's quest—the bandit leader, Dyke Despard.

The latter was disguised as a Mexican, but his dark, flashing eyes betrayed his true identity to the young scout.

A few grains of plaster had fallen on the table between them.

"What is that?" Despard had demanded.

"What?"

"The plaster is falling."

"The rats, probably. Go on with your story, Despard. We have no time to lose."

Despard paid no further attention to the falling plaster and asked, "You have the gold dust?"

"Yes," replied Danton.

"Where is it?"

"In this sachel."

"What have you learned?"

"Nothing."

"The boys are all scattered?"

"Yes."

"And the diamonds cannot be found?"

"No. White Fawn took them."

"And cannot be traced?"

"I fear not."

"Very well; then we must content ourselves with what we have."

"We're forced to."

"And leave the country at once."

"Yes; for we are not in much favor here."

"There's that land that was left by Tracey."

"In California?"

"Exactly."

"The old hermit said it was worthless."

"It's something, and I have the papers to it. If we only had the girl."

"Inez?"

"Yes."

"She's in the hands of the Modocs."

"You think so?"

"I am sure of it."

Darrell became so excited that he made a careless move at this juncture. He slipped from one of the rafters, and, in doing so, fell upon the frail plastering.

There was a crash, and the next moment he went flying through the air. He landed directly on the table between the amazed conspirators.

"You are my prisoners!"

Darrel had regained his presence of mind instantly. Drawing a revolver he sprang to the floor. His main attention was directed to Despard.

Danton had taken the alarm quickly. Before Darrel could detain him he had gained the window. With a crash he went through it, shutters and all.

At that moment the rear door was opened. Brown, the Sheriff, stood on its threshold.

"Dyke Despard," he said, "you are under arrest."

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Limited Monarchy.

The system of responsible ministries, the introduction of which into our own government has been advocated by certain theorists, would make of the President of the United States much such a functionary as is a monarch in a constitutional country of Europe, as far as "influence with his own administration" is concerned. An amusing anecdote is told of Louis XVIII. of France.

This inoffensive monarch took breakfast one morning. Then his ministers called upon him.

"Well," said the King, "how are the public affairs?"

"Getting along very nicely, sire," said the ministers.

"Hum! In that case," said the King, "I think I will go and take a walk."

Next morning after breakfast the ministers called again. "Well, how do the public affairs get on to-day?" asked the King.

"Very badly indeed, sire," said the ministers.

"Hum!" exclaimed the King, "in that case, I think I will—go and take a walk!"

Next day no ministers called on the King.

"What has become of my ministry?" said the King, after breakfast.

"Sire," said the palace functionary who was in attendance, "Parliament has turned out the ministry."

"Ah!" said the King, "then it's they who have taken a walk this time, eh?"

His Working Clothes.

Billy Brown, a tall, athletic Irishman, was summoned to appear at a trial in London as a witness. The case being against his employer, the prosecuting counsel hoped to get some damaging evidence from him. Billy's daily employment was that of a carpenter, and he entered the witness box in his ordinary work-a-day costume, very dirty and rather ragged.

The opposition counsel did all in his power to confuse "Mr. Brown," but that gentleman was not so easily thrown off his guard. During the examination he was asked if the clothes he appeared in were his best.

"Ah, sure, indeed and they are not, sir," said he.

"Oh, then you have better clothes which you appear in on a Sunday?"

"It's moighty thrue, sir."

"A white waistcoat, gray coat, knee-breeches, and smart ribbons?"

"You've met me somewhere," said Billy.

"No," replied the barrister, "I have not; but since you confess that you have better clothes, are you not ashamed to appear in court in that disgraceful state?"

"Not at all," said Billy, pointing to the judge; "sure his lordship's in his working dress, and I'm in mine."

"Stand down, Mr. Brown," was the barrister's natural order after this.

Around the World for $2,000.

What is the cost of a trip around the world, asks a correspondent.

A man can make this trip, stopping over at points of greatest interest, and occupying about six months of time, for $2,000. With that amount of money he can take first-class passage on steamers and first-class cars on railroad trains. A better trip would require a year of time and an expenditure of about $3,000.

In 1778 the heat of Bologna was so great that numbers of people were stifled. In July, 1873, the heat again became intolerable. Vegetables were burned up and fruit died on the trees. The furniture and woodwork in dwelling houses cracked and split, and meat went bad in an hour.

The heat in several of the French provinces during the summer of 1705 was equal to that of a glass furnace. Meat could be prepared for the table merely by exposing it to the sun. Not a soul dare venture out between noon and 4 p. m.

He was getting $6 a week at the ribbon-counter and he had proposed to the girl. She knew his financial condition and rejected him.

"Ah," she replied with a sneer, "may I ask where you get the wormwood?"—Detroit Free Press.

A Good Way to Try Him.

Mr. Woodware—That young fellow you have in your office is the most conceited puppy I ever ran across.

Mr. Queensware—Yes, I know; but you must remember he is young yet and his character is not fully formed. He has never been tried by fire.

Woodware—Then you'd better fire him.—Good News.

Unexpected Result.

"There," he said fondly, "just to show you how much I thought of you I took your picture with my new instantaneous camera. Here it is."

"Do you think it looks like me?" she inquired, almost tearfully.

"Why—er—yes, of course."

"Then all is over. I can not be yours. It must be my money and not myself that you seek."—New York Sun.

An Important Item.

Alienist—I see nothing in the patient to denote insanity.

Alienist—Oh! Is that so? That's important, though even that may indicate only temporary aberration.—Boston Transcript.

His Reputation.

A seedy-looking citizen passed by an office window on Woodward avenue where a couple of men were looking out.

"Isn't that Bill Smith?" inquired one of them, evidently not a resident.

"Yes. He used to be quite a politician when you were here, but his reputation is completely lost now."

"Is that so? Well, if it was anything like it was when I knew him I should think it would have made a good deal better man of him to have lost it."—Detroit Free Press.

What Next?

"Adolph has proposed, papa," she told her father.

"He has," commented the old man. "And he's now anxious to wed, is he? Well, well. First he studied painting, then he tried to build airships; next they put him in an insane asylum and at present he wants to marry you."—Exchange.

Her Selection.

Mrs. De Fine—"Here's my new bonnet. Isn't it a darling. Only $28."

Mr. De Fine—"Great snakes! You said bonnets could be bought at from $3 up."

Mrs. De Fine—"Yes, dear. This is one of the 'ups.'"—New York Weekly.

A Frivolous Set.

"These firemen must be a frivolous set," said Mrs. Spillikins, who was reading a paper.

"Why so?"

"I read in the paper that after the fire was under control the firemen played all night on the ruins. Why didn't they go home and go to bed like sensible men, instead of romping about like children?"—Scraps.

A New Boarder.

Jinks—That fellow Sillipate is the most foolish, inexcusable fool I ever saw.

Winks—What has he been doing to you?

Jinks—A few days ago some one invited him to dinner at our boarding-house. Well, sir, that idiot just praised every dish on the table, and complimented the landlady on her cooking until she raised her terms $2 a week.—Scraps.

A Brother's Part.

Sweet Girl—George, although I refused to marry you, I promised to be a sister to you, you know.

George (gloomily)—Y-e-s.

"And you know you said I might, and you said you'd be a brother to me."

"Did I?"

"Yes, I'm sure you said something like that."

"Well, I'll try."

"That's real good of you. Can you spare a little time for me now?"

"A life time if you ask it."

"No, only a few hours."

"Certainly. What is it you want?"

"That hooked-nosed old lady over there with green goggles, is my chaperon. I wish you'd take her off and flirt with her this evening, so I can have a little chat with Mr. Hansom."—New York Weekly.

Expert Spanish Smokers.

The Spaniards are the most expert smokers in the world. A Spaniard takes a heavy pull at his cigarette, inhales it, takes up a wine skin or wine bottle, pours a half pint down his throat, holding the vessel a foot from his mouth and not spilling a drop, and then with a sigh of satisfaction closes his eyes and exhales the smoke from his nose and mouth in clouds. He will also inhale the smoke, converse for a few minutes in natural manner, and then blow out the smoke.

The Great South American Nervine Tonic

Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stomach. No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incalculable value who is affected by disease of the stomach, because the experience and testimony of many go to prove that this is the ONE and ONLY ONE great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.

HARRIET E. HALL, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to the Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration, and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors, with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly."

MRS. ELLA A. BRATTON, of New Ross, Indiana, says: "I cannot express how much I owe to the Nervine Tonic. My system was completely shattered, appetite gone, was coughing and spitting up blood; am sure I was in the first stages of consumption, an inheritance handed down through several generations. I began taking the Nervine Tonic, and continued its use for about six months, and am entirely cured. It is the grandest remedy for nerves, stomach and lungs I have ever seen."

No remedy compares with SOUTH AMERICAN NERVINE as a cure for the Nerves. No remedy compares with South American Nervine as a wondrous cure for the Stomach. No remedy will at all compare with South American Nervine as a cure for all forms of failing health. It never fails to cure Indigestion and Dyspepsia. It never fails to cure Chorea or St. Vitus' Dance. Its powers to build up the whole system are wonderful in the extreme. It cures the old, the young, and the middle aged. It is a great friend to the aged and infirm. Do not neglect to use this precious boon; if you do, you may neglect the only remedy which will restore you to health. South American Nervine is perfectly safe, and very pleasant to the taste. Delicate ladies, do not fail to use this great cure, because it will put the bloom of freshness and beauty upon your lips and in your cheeks, and quickly drive away your disabilities and weaknesses.

Established Facts:

That the ROYAL BAKING POWDER is the oldest and purest baking powder, and the greatest in leavening strength.

That it is free from every injurious substance.

That it makes lighter, sweeter, more nutritious and healthful food than any other.

The Royal Baking Powder Company refines its own cream of tartar in its own mammoth refinery, and thus insures its unvarying quality.

There is used in the manufacture of the Royal Baking Powder more than half of all the cream of tartar consumed in the United States for all purposes. This is required and must be chemically pure, and chemically pure cream of tartar could not be obtained in the markets of this country or Europe, which necessitated the building of special works, and the employment of special processes.

All other baking powders, when analyzed, show traces of lime and sulphuric acid, which arise from the impurities of the materials bought in the market, which their manufacturers use.

This is why the Royal Baking Powder is the only absolutely pure baking powder made.

WATERLOO.

Mr. McGrew, of Angola, was in town a few days ago.

I R. Taylor, of Kendallville, was in town Thursday.

J. D. Campbell went over to Auburn, one day last week.

Artie Carpenter, of Pleasant Lake, was in town, Wednesday.

Master Harry Butler, visited his father at Ft. Wayne, Tuesday.

John Farrington, living northwest of town, was buried Sunday.

The revival meetings at the U. B. church have come to a close.

Mrs. Yoke, of Butler, is the guest of the family of Rev. Mr. McChloes.

Prof. E. J. Davis died Monday evening. He had been sick for some time.

Miss Blake, a young lady from the west, is staying with Mrs. Chloe Kennedy at present.

Mrs. Myers, from near Lagrange, is visiting her parents here, Mr. and Mrs. J. Bowlby.

Quarterly meeting will be held Saturday and Sunday in the M. E. church, and at the Evangelical.

Tuesday evening, a donation party was given at the residence of Rev. McCloes, for the benefit of the family.

Miss Nellie Carpenter started Saturday, for Lester, Mich., to visit her aunt, whose husband so suddenly died, recently.

Some of our young people made up a sleighing party to visit Mrs. Emma Jackman, last week, Tuesday evening. Mrs. J., was a former principal of our high schools.

Mrs. Dora Locke gave a five o'clock tea, Thursday, to fourteen of the younger married people of Waterloo. The menu, as printed on the cards was elaborate and very recherche.

Miss Nora Butler is learning the millinery business with Mrs. Johnson. This is creditable to her Every boy and every girl should have some worthy aim in life, and strive to be independent.

Quite an interesting question was suggested last week in an item in the Waterloo Press, speaking of a car load of melons having been shipped from Mexico, into this country. They were shipped as vegetables, upon which no duty was charged. As fruits, the duty would be 20 per cent, (if memory serves) and it was decided they were fruit. Here is a chance for a diffence of opinion. To the writer, it seems that vegetables, fruits, nuts and melons, are all in one sense fruits,—that is, the fruit of the peculiar growth that produces each and only in that sense. The difference is so great between the four, that each should have a separate classification. The writer would like to hear the opinion of others, through the columns of the COURIER, or Waterloo Press, or both.

John Lower's house was burned last Friday afternoon, while he was away from home. The fire caught from the chimney, and although Mrs. L., was at home, the noise made by the sewing machine, the children and the crackling of the fire in the stove, prevented her noticeing any other noise. She first noticed smoke coming in around the door opening into another room, and opening it, saw fire over her head and around her. She had only time to carry out her two children, three blankets and the sewing machine, the fire having made dangerous headway. She had but a short time before, brought in her washing from off the line, so that too was burned; indeed, everything, including one hundred and fifty bushels of wheat, also a quantity of clover seed. Mr Lower not having a barn or storehouse, utilized one of the rooms in the house for storeing away his grain.

BUTLER.

The U. B. Friends continue their revival efforts with moderate success.

Conductor Campbell laid off sick a few days last week but is again at his post

A few subjects of charity are still to be found in different parts of town. We believe they are being looked after by our charitably disposed people.

Judging from the Waterloo Press, we think the service of an active, wideawake schoolmaster and a live missionary are among the requisites of that unfrequented part of northeastern Indiana.

The M. E. quarterly meeting passed off very quietly. The presiding elder, Rev. Woolpert, was conspicuous by his absence. "The laborer is worthy of his hire," but how about the hire without the laborer?

James Dowden of Farmer Station, Clinton county, Ohio, is visiting his cousin, John Wilson, who had his leg broken some time ago at the Lake Shore elevator. Mr. Wilson is now able to get about on crutches.

Died, at her residence in Butler, Ind., Jan. 20, 1892, after a lingering illness. Sarah Masters was born in Carrol county, Ohio, March 15, 1833. She moved with her parents to Indiana in 1854, settling on a farm about two miles north of Butler. In 1856 she was united in marriage to Joseph Johnson, who died in 1865. To them were born three children, two sons and one daughter, all surviving. The funeral took place from the Church of God, Rev. Stone of the M. E. church officiating.

Mrs. D. M. Allen and Miss Lou Rummel went to Ft Wayne Friday.

Mrs. Minnie Tindal was granted a divorce from Will Tindal last week.

N. Tessison and wife of St. Joe, visited with the family of O. W. Rummell Saturday.

Will Erick will move to New Paris in a few weeks, and engage in the mercantile business.

Mrs. Henry Horn died last Monday and was buried from her late residence Wednesday.

The protracted meeting in the Lutheran church still continues, though results thus far are not apparent.

David and Solomon Burtsfield were called to Pennsylvania last Thursday, to attend their father, who is dangerously ill.

Mrs. Eliza Wasson, wife of Samuel Wasson, and one of the pioneers of this vicinity, died suddenly, Saturday evening, Jan 23, aged 72 years. A more extended notice will be given in the future as the funeral will not take place until children from a distance reach home.

DEKALB.

Mrs. Manroe and James are visiting at St. Joe.

Mr. Hewett, of New Era, is on the sick list.

Great quantities of ice have been put up in this vicinity.

The Slippy brothers were the guests of H. P. Housel, Sunday.

Mr. Hyatt commenced a singing school at Knott's school house, Sunday evening. He is an excellent teacher.

Lem Brill, of Auburn, was in town Sunday He will work in the mill at New Era, for Hewett & Smith, this week,

There has been an immense lot of wood hauled to Garrett, the past week. It is surprising to see the amount of wood that is consumed in that town.

The stores here are doing a good business. All are well stocked with full lines of seasonable and staple goods, which are being disposed of at the lowest possible margin.

Carlton Fair and wife were made happy one day last week, by the appearance of a little stranger, who from appearances, expects to stay awhile as an honored guest in their household.

NORRIS CHAPEL.

(LAST WEEK)

The protracted meeting is in progress with Rev. Banks and Rev. Croy as the ministers in charge.

Hemry Luce went to Lake county, Mich., where he paid relatives a visit, whom he had not seen since he parted from them in the state of New York, forty years ago. So many changes had been wrought in him that he was not recognized. Forty years makes quite a difference in one's appearance. He found the folks all well and enjoying themselves. While there he was taken sick, but returned before the limitation of his ticket.

SUMMIT.

Miss Belle Staley is on the sick list at this writing.

Protracted meeting is still going on at Barker's church.

Mrs. John Baxter is in Battle Creek, Mich., taking treatment at the sanitarium at this writing.

Mrs. Henry Snowberger, and Mrs. H. Lawson and baby are among the number having the grip.

A Golden Nugget.

A strange novelty is this golden table corn, with its beautiful rich cream color. It is claimed by those who know it that it is very sweet, early and tender, and a superior corn. We notice Vick recommends it very highly. The Floral Guide, which comes to us bringing a bouquet of Carnations on the front cover, with a splendid bunch of brilliant poppies on the back, gives full description of this new corn, which is only 15 cents a packet. Vick's Floral Guide is worthy a place in the home of anyone who expects to make a garden in the coming spring. By all means send ten cents to James Vick's Sons, Rochester, N. Y., for the Guide, and you can deduct this amount from your first order. It will pay you well.

Auburn Fair Meeting.

The annual meeting last Thursday, was well attended, though only 141 shares were represented. The usual reports were made, and matters of interest discussed. The most important thing that came up, was in the afternoon, when someone proposed that no more free tickets of any kind, be used. This provoked a good deal of discussion, as it would do away with stockholders' tickets which those who had invested, claimed they had been promised if they would take stock. It would also cut off the usual complimentary tickets to the officers of other fairs, to the press, to ministers, to committee workers, etc. After quite a discussion, Mr. Stevens of the Dispatch, to get the matter disposed of, offered a resolution that the board of directors be instructed not to issue any free tickets of any kind, but require all who enter the grounds, to purchase a ticket. This was carried by a two-thirds vote. This decided vote will probably bind the directors, and while we think the move is a very unwise one, we concede the right of the majority to have its way. The election of officers, resulted in making J. L. Davis, president again, also, Cal. Husselman re-elected secretary, rather against his wish; John Carper, vice president, and B. C. Robbins was made treasurer in place of R. H. Culbertson, who refused to run.

A Little Girl's Experience in a Lighthouse.

Mr. and Mrs. Loren Trescott are keepers of Gov. Lighthouse at Sand Beach, Mich., and are blessed with a daughter, four years old Last April she was taken down with measles, followed with a dreadful cough and turning into a fever. Doctors at home and at Detroit treated her, but in vain, she grew worse rapidly, until she was a mere handful of bones. Then she tried Dr. King's New Discovery and after the use of two and a half bottles, was completely cured. They say Dr. King's New Discovery is worth its weight in gold, yet you may get a trial bottle free at Robbins & McCord's drugstore. 6

Mrs. F. C. Boe, at Watkins, left this letter: "My husband—Forgive me if I cause you trouble, but I suffer so. You do not know what these long, wakeful, wretched nights are to me, and I am so tired, darling—the pain will never be better. It is not easy to take my own life, but I have been sick so long. FUN ON A FARM.

CHAPTER VI.

CANTO 1.

"Fasten the windows. Bolt the doors.
Bring me my trusty gun.
Remove the children. Clear the floor.
There's going to be some fun."
So spake the farmer to his wife,
He smiled a ghastly smile,
His blood was up, his temper rife,
He gripped his gun the while.

CANTO 2.

"Let loose the dogs. Unchain them all."
The old man sternly cried.
"Ring out the bell. The farm hands call."
"Cry 'Murder' far and wide."

CANTO 3.

"Dear husband," said the aged wife,
"Explain this sudden notion.
You are prepared for deadly strife.
Has Russia crossed the ocean?"
"We have the law to back us,"
Suggested the young men,
"If anarchists attack us,
Or Boodle Aldermen."
The daughter cried, "Oh, Father, why
This war-like preparation?
Must all of us prepare to die,
Without an explanation?"

CANTO 4.

The old man answered not a word,
but pointed to the road;
The sound of wheels was plainly heard,
Approaching the abode.
And suddenly they saw it all,
('Twas easy to be seen),
A man was driving within call;
He had a Sewing Machine.

CANTO 5.

"Now, by my beard," the old man cried,
"I've sworn ten times or more,
To kill all agents who applied.
I'll have that young man's gore."
Then straightway leveled he his gun,
And deadly aim he took.
"Let's kill him quick, Dad," said his son,
"Don't give him time to look."

CANTO 6.

But suddenly they gave a start,
"What's that we see?" they said.
"Let's read that name upon the cart,
Before we kill him dead."
"Oh, Papa," cried the daughter then,
"The name I plainly see,
Commencing with S-T-A-N,
And ends D-A-R-D."

CANTO 7.

Then wide, wide open flew the doors.
The gun was laid aside.
The farmer's sons resumed their chores;
The farmer loudly cried,
"Come in at once and shut the gate.
You'll find us not so green,
But that we can appreciate
The STANDARD Sewing Machine."

AUBURN AND VICINITY.

Some Reminiscences of its Early Days and Pioneer Citizens.

1858—Continued.

About 18 years ago Mr. Wheelock put in stone abutments and erected what was known as the Webster bridge over the St. Joe near the present farm residence of Mr. Wartenbee, and he has but recently completed work on a contract to build permanent and massive stone abutments for an iron bridge at the same place.

The importance of the work may be judged from the dimensions of the abutments which front and wings are 64 feet in length, 25½ feet high and from 7½ wide at base to 5½ feet wide at top and requiring upwards of 700 cubic yards of masonry.

The stone shipped from near Cleveland, Ohio, is known as Berea sandstone, large in size and of excellent character.

The cost of the abutments completed is over $5,000, and of the iron bridge lately built by the Cleveland Iron Bridge company, about $3,000, making a total outlay at that point of about $8,000.

When we remember that the construction of the court house in 1864 necessitated a tax levy of 10 cents on each $100, and that the cost of its construction was less than $24,000, and then contemplate the building of a bridge costing one-third as much, as but one of the heavy expenses incident to this period, we no longer wonder that taxation is heavy.

S. H. Bartlett, a pioneer of Newville, in 1836 and a present resident of the village, was a bridge builder of that early time when iron bridges and stone or iron abutments were unknown and roads wound around swamps and ascended and decended hills precipitately.

During the closing days of the December term of commissioners' court we find three persons subjected to fines for passing counterfeit money. It was not enough that that the people should be robbed by heavy discounts on doubtful bank paper but artful criminals skillfully counterfeit both currency and coin until the long suffering public became aroused and arrests and convictions followed.

The records of DeKalb circuit court for 1858, voice the existence of organized bands of law breakers and a lowered tone of public morality.

Case after case of larceny, forgery and concealment of stolen goods occupied the attention of his Honor, Reuben J. Dawson, judge of the circuit, and fully a score of applications for divorce disclose the baneful influences potential for harm existing in the community.

The crime center was in Noble and LaGrange counties, but the ramifications of lawlessness extended through DeKalb county and for a time the community suffered, inactive.

To larceny, was added arson, stealing of horses, passing bad money, robbery, and finally murder. As early as 1842, William Mitchell and Asa Brown, of Noble county, took the lead in efforts to bring offenders to justice. These men secured the arrest of two criminals who were sheltered by one George T. Ulmer, whose history is still fresh in the minds of the people of Auburn and of the jury panel who listened to his trial in 1858 and gave him his deserts in the penitentiary.

The activity of Messrs Brown and Mitchell was repaid by the burning of their barns.

Following this crime, a meeting was called for the purpose of organizing a society for mutual protection and for the apprehension and punishment of felons.

The meeting was held, and among those present, were Ulmer and others of like character who were outspoken and zealous for the promotion of objects sought by the proposed society, but it was seen that offenders grew bolder and only by secret organization could the community protect itself and attack its assailants to advantage.

In 1852, an act was passed by the general assembly legalizing the formation of associations in bodies of not less than ten nor more than one hundred, for the purpose of detecting and apprehending felons.

In forming companies, a constitution and by-laws were drafted, setting forth the purposes of the organization with duties and conditions of membership.

On Sept. 20, 1856, the first organization under the statute in northern Indiana, was effected by a company known as the Lagrange County Rangers, and the first public demonstration made by the Regulators as they were called was a grand parade at Kendallville, Jan. 16, 1858. We quote from the history of the Regulators, published in pamphlet form in 1859 concerning this exhibition of concerted organized action as follows: "Soon after the arrival of the morning trains of cars, and just before the organization of the meeting, about three hundred men, all on horseback, moved down in majestic strength through the streets of the town bearing mottoes and banners of various descriptions, one of which contained a painting, representing the capture of a criminal, with these words written over the scene, 'No expense to the county.' After a full display of their forces, marching in double file through the most prominent streets of the village, they repaired to the common near the Baptist church, where several speeches were made, setting forth in very bold and daring language the fixed determination of all those who had enlisted in the cause of reform."

On Jan. 17, James McConnel at the head of a band of Noble county regulators arrested at Rome, nine persons named as follows: Miles C. Payne, G. McDougle, Sol. Stout, Malcomb Burnam, Davis, French, Joseph Hall, Wm. Hall and E. Kester. These parties were taken to Ligonier and placed in custody of officers of committee to await examination. Some of them were released for lack of evidence against them. Substantial cause of action having been found against others they were placed in charge of the authorities to be dealt with in accordance with the law.

E. Kester confessed to theft and implicated Ulmer with keeping stolen horses and paying couterfeit money. His statements were valuable chiefly from their relation to other and more dangerous criminals.

(To be continued next week.)

The Press on Stockings.

We challenge the history of any intelligent people to produce anything as silly and utterly childish as the talk of republican papers about the effects of a tariff. The Waterloo Press last week, its editor having received the cue from Hanna, the republican chairman, who alluded to it in his Auburn speech, makes a big ado about a stocking factory recently established in Ft Wayne. He says:

> "This is one of the practical illustrations of what the McKinley bill has already done for our country. . . . A tariff of fifty per cent., was provided and three factories have already started, etc."

Now according to this argument, a change in tariff duty from 25 as before, to 50 per cent., in the McKinley law, started up three factories. From this we may suppose, had the tariff been made 75 per cent., it would have started up six factories, and so on.

* * *

It then goes on to state that the price is 15 per cent., lower than before. In other words, an article has been selling for $1. Now raise the duty on it from 25 to 50 cents, and you can sell it for 85 cents.

* * *

But again we might ask. If a man can make $1 worth of stockings now, and sell it for 85 cents, why could he not have done this before? If the manufacturer must sell 15 cents lower than he did before, how is he protected? So it will be seen he could have started his work without a rise in the tariff rate.

* * *

But the Press "explains" by saying, "The 50 per cent., shuts out the foreigner and enables the American to make the goods and then, competition will make them lower than the foreign price." If so, why would not "competition" have made them lower before the McKinley topnotch tariff went into effect? If they could, then goods would be lower and people who buy would be gainers.

* * *

Then the Press, after saying as quoted above, that the goods are made "lower" in price, goes on to admit that they will be "higher" in price, for it says, "It may be that these goods cannot be made here so cheaply as abroad, but under the circumstances, is it not better for us that the profits are kept on American soil, and the producer brought closer to the consumer?" Well there! First he says the price is lower, then a few lines farther on says it is higher. Now which are to believe? Or, shall we doubt his ability to explain either. The facts are he is rehashing what Hanna said, as noted above. But as to the last conclusion about paying a higher price to a "producer who is nearer to the consumer," etc. What do people care who buy, as to who gets the profits? What better is it to a DeKalb man if he pays a Ft. Wayne man $1.50 when he could get the same article elsewherere for $1?

* * *

As we have often said about the "tin industry." There is no reason on earth why the stocking making should flourish now, any more than before the higher tax was put on. What man of sense will say it has any new advantages? In fact it has received no change in condition except an added tax, and that, of course is a drawback, if it has any effect at all. The facts are, we could have made them at a profit before. It happens now, that some one has recently started a stocking factory in Ft. Wayne, and about the same time, some "Hanna" tells a gullible crowd that it was the McKinley bill that did it. It could have been urged with as much sense, that the tariff started the windmill factories in Auburn, or our foundries, our church furniture works, or any such industry. But we all know they were not so started. They were started by business men. They entered the field of competition on their merits, they made goods at a certain cost, and when sold above that, they gave a profit, and the business flourished; but not a man of the owners ever thought of waiting for a tariff, before starting.

* * *

As we have often said a tariff levied for any other purpose than revenue, that is, a tariff for mere "protection" is downright robbery. A law that compels A to pay B more than he would have to pay without such a law, is a legalized robbery, and B becomes a partner to the crime. About fifteen years ago, Auburn had a stocking factory, and we suppose republican papers will claim the McKinley law started it.

Fail to do Our Duty.

Everybody has at times failed to do their duty towards themselves. Hundreds of lady readers suffer from sick headache, nervousness, sleeplessness and female troubles. Let them follow the example of Mrs. Herbetcher, Stevens Point, Wis., who for five years suffered greatly from nervous prostration and sleeplessness, tried physicians and different medicines without success. But one bottle of Dr. Miles' Nervine caused sound sleep every night and she is feeling like a new person. Mrs. Elizabeth Wheeler, Laramie City, Wyoming, who tried all other remidies, declares that after three week's use of the Nervine for headache, nervous prostration, etc., she was entirely relieved. Fell Dead.

These words are very familiar to our readers, as not a day passes without the report of the sudden death of some prominent citizen. The explanation is "Heart Diseases." Therefore beware if you have any of the following symtoms: short breath; pain in side, smothering spells, swollen ankles, asthmatic breathing, weak and hungry spells, tenderness in shoulder or arm, fluttering of heart or irregular pulse. These symptoms mean heart disease. The most reliable remedy is Dr Miles' New Heart Cure, which has saved thousands of lives. Book of testimonials free at F. E. FULL OF FRESH FACTS,

ALL RELATING TO PEOPLE AND THINGS IN THE WORLD.

A Steamer Laden with Four Hundred Chinese Goes Down—Wreck at Elmore, Ohio—Shot by the Guard—A Careless Father—A Chilian Claim—Terrible Explosion.

SAW IT SINK.

Terrible Tale of a Sea Captain.

By the steamer China, which has arrived at San Francisco from the Orient, news of the loss of a Chinese steamer was brought. The steamer is supposed to be the Namchow. There were over 400 Chinese on board besides six Europeans. All hands perished except twenty-nine Chinamen. The steamer sank in sight of China merchant steamer Meefee, the captain of which reports: "On the 8th day of January, at 7:50 a. m. sighted the steamer at a distance of six miles. She was apparently at anchor and was flying signals of distress. On sighting her, we set course direct for her, to render assistance if possible. At 8 o'clock to our astonishment we could not see her but saw something black a little on the starboard bow, which was taken to be a steamer going down. At all events we saw no more of her. I steered for that position as near as I dare, feeling that we might strike her masts or hull. I had the chief officer aloft, but neither of us could see anything more of the vessel, nor boats or wreckage either."

Later particulars are meagre, but the indications are that the boat went down and only twenty-nine of the ship's crew and passengers were saved. They put to sea in a life boat and were rescued.

Terrible Explosion.

A terrific explosion took place in J. Rumel & Co.'s hat factory, Newark, N. J. Two plumbers and an apprentice were at work repairing an alcoholic condenser, and it is supposed that the plumbers' torch ignited the gas from some leak. The explosion resulted in immediate spread of flames, and the 150 employes escaped by jumping from windows. After the fire department had controlled the flames, a search was made for bodies. Oscar Lenrich, boss plumber, 32 years old, was found charred almost beyond recognition. He leaves a widow and five children. Another body was found, likewise burned to a crisp, which is supposed to be that of the other plumber, 28 years old. The apprentice was Albert Anderson, 19 years old, residing at Waverly. No trace of him can be discovered. The loss on the building amounts to $10,000. Three other employes were severely injured, but not seriously.

A Chilian Claim.

The first claim of indemnity against the Chilian Government for assault against the Baltimore's sailors has been filed at the State Department by W. W. Keer of Philadelphia, for the heirs of William Riggin, who was killed by the Valparaiso mob on Oct. 16. The petition, which is addressed to the Secretary of State, is signed by John L. Riggin, Mary Zimmerman, and Ella Matthews, brother and sisters of Riggin. They claim that they are entitled to demand and receive from the Republic of Chili reasonable compensation, and invoke the aid of the Government of the United States to secure it.

Mexican Murderers.

San Antonia (Texas) special: Federal authorities on the border have forwarded to Gen. Stanley a list of names of revolutionists on this side of the border. These names embrace those of eighty murderers, who had committed crimes in Mexico and taken refuge on this side of the border. The section in which the outbreak occurred recently is a hot-bed of revolutionists, and the United States troops on the border have orders to march to the locality and scatter the force now supposed to be organized there.

A Careless Father.

At Cote St. Louis, an outlying suburb of Montreal, several frozen dynamite cartridges which had been placed on the stove to thaw out exploded, completely wrecking the house. A. Dupre was terribly injured and his two little daughters were fatally burned. A third daughter had her skull fractured and will probably die. Mrs. Dupre escaped injury, but on seeing the injuries of her husband and children became insane and is now a raving maniac.

The Eligibility of Cal Brice.

In the Ohio Legislature a resolution was adopted for an investigation as to the eligibility of Calvin S. Brice to be United States Senator from Ohio. This investigation will go into the question of residence, which has been discussed ever since his election, and the result will hinge upon his being proved a citizen of Ohio or of New York.

Wreck at Elmore, Ohio.

A collision occurred on the Lake Shore road near Elmore, Ohio. The caboose of the local freight was run into by the fast freight, almost completely demolishing the same. Seven cars loaded with twine caught fire and were destroyed. Several other cars were smashed and the track badly torn up. The engineer and fireman were badly injured.

Diplomatic Relations to Be Resumed.

The report in Rome that Italy is on the point of resuming full diplomatic relations with the United States is revived. It is reported that Baron Fava, former Minister to Washington, will be made Ambassador to Denmark and that Signor Catalini will be transferred as Minister to Washington.

Cleveland to Visit Michigan.

It is now positively settled that Ex-President Cleveland, will deliver an address at the University at Ann Arbor, Mich., on Feb. 22, at 3 p. m. A public reception will be tendered him in the city of Detroit on the evening of the 23d.

Shot by the Guard.

Con Hernandez, recently condemned to death by court martial in Monterey, Mexico, attempted to escape from jail and was shot by his guard.

Look Well to Your Silver.

A special from Lima, Ohio, says: Northern Ohio is being flooded with counterfeit money of twenty-five cents and one dollar denominations. The discovery was made the other day. Banks throughout the State communicated with one another and to their amazement found that there is scarcely an institution between Cleveland, Toledo and other points which has not been made victims of the rascals. The counterfeits are dated 1877 and are pronounced by experts as the best ever put out. They are exact counterfeits of the real article in weight, size and design, and the banks have been made easy victims. The Government has detailed its best men on the case and they are now putting forth their efforts to locate the mint which it is thought is located south of Toledo in the oil district. The detectives say the gang is working toward the West.

DESPERATE BUMS

Take Full Possession of a Train and Run It

Celina (Ohio) special: R. F. Brownlie, station agent of the Lake Erie and Western railroad at this place, received a message from Conductor Reed, of a through freight at Fort Recovery, that a gang of tramps had possession of his train. From Coldwater he sent another message that one of his brakemen had been badly beaten by them and that officers must meet the train. Marshal Woods, accompanied by Constables Heffner and Solomon and a posse of men met the train at the Mackinaw crossing. When the train slowed up three tramps were seen on the engine, while ten more were scattered from the engine to the caboose. They had full control and had been running the train wide open. As soon as they saw the crowd with the officers they began dropping off and taking to the woods. Six of them were captured and are now in jail. The balance got away. The train crew tried to put them off at Fort Recovery, but they resisted and the crew was worsted, one of the brakemen being horribly beaten. He was taken to Lima for treatment. On leaving Fort Recovery they took complete possession, and swore they would run the train to suit themselves, which they did. Conductor Reed will return to appear against them, and as it is felony in this State to interfere with a train, the bums will no doubt get to learn a trade.

HERE IS WAR!

Garza at the Head of 5,000 Men.

A dispatch from Del Rio, Texas, states that Garza is now on the Mexican side of the river near there, and that he is at the head of an army of from 4,500 to 5,000 drilled, armed and mounted Mexican revolutionists. Bands of from twenty-five to one hundred men are joining him daily. It is further stated in the dispatch that Garza means fight and that the most desperate war Mexico has ever known will be opened about February 10, by an attack on the town of Los Vegas, located just across the river from Del Rio.

Garza has another band in the Santa Rosa Mountain country of from 1,800 to 2,000 men, well armed and mounted, under command of Gen. Francisco Salos. It is a well-known fact among all the Mexicans who try to find out anything about the trouble that Garza will have at least two-thirds of the Mexican populace on his side when the proper time comes to show up.

Leaped for Life.

A fire occurred in a rear four-story tenement house at No. 67 Hester street, New York, which was occupied by eight families of Russian Hebrews, numbering in all forty persons. The fire originated through the accidental up-setting of a kerosene lamp in the apartment of Solomon Salinski, on the second floor, and spead with amazing rapidity through the rickety old tenement. The escape of the inmates by the stairway was cut off, and panic stricken, they fled to the roof and to the fire escapes. Eight of them were so badly frightened that they leaped to the courtyard below. All sustained serious injuries and two of the injured will die. The other tenants remained on the roof and the fire escapes, from which places they were subsequentlp rescued by the firemen when they arrived on the scene.

Ex-Senator McDonald's Will.

The youngest son of the late ex-Senator McDonald and some of the grandchildren have employed lawyers and within a few days will file suit at Indianapolis to set aside the ex-Senator's will. The plaintiffs will charge that undue influence was exerted upon McDonald during his later years by Mrs. McDonald, and while under this influence he made his will leaving her the bulk of the property. "It is simply an attempt at blackmail," said Mrs. McDonald. "Although the son who will bring the suit has his second wife, he did not think his father should marry a second time without consulting him."

Destructive Fire at LaPorte, Ind.

One of the most disastrous fires that has visited LaPorte, Ind., in years occurred recently, and resulted in destroying the main building of the LaPorte Wheel Factory owned by the Miles & Scott Company. The origin of the fire is unknown, and it was beyond control when discovered by the night watchman. By the hardest kind of work the blacksmith and machine shops were saved, also the electric welding machine, which is the largest in this country, excepting the one in use at the Brooklyn Navy Yard. The loss is $51,000, with an insurance of $28,400. The burned portion will be rebuilt.

Sustain the Strikers.

The board of arbitration which was chosen to settle the differences that caused the street car tie-up at Indianapolis has rendered a decision conceded to be a victory for the strikers. The board finds that the company could withdraw the pass badges, but that it could not do so under the contract of employment without providing other compensation for extra labor required of the men. The unqualified recall of these badges precipitated the strike. The matter of extra compensation is still open for mutual arrangement between President Frenzel and the Brotherhood.

Strawboard Up.

An agreement has been signed by all the strawboard mills in Indiana by which prices for 1892 will be 30 per cent. higher than they were last year and consumers will be compelled to pay $40 per ton for strawboard instead of $30 as heretofore. This will advance the price of all materials packed in pasteboard boxes. The agreement was brought about by the American Strawboard Company, otherwise known as the straw trust, which has hitherto been at war with the smaller concerns.

—Reciprocity.

Official notice has been received at the State Department from the British Minister that the tariff changes agreed upon in the reciprocity arrangement for the British West Indian colonies have already been voted by Jamaica, Barbados and Trinidad, and that from Feb. 1 the reciprocity arrangement will be in full force in these colonies. A few days' delay only is anticipated in putting the arrangement in operation also in the leeward and windward islands.

Grand Rapids Furniture at the Fair.

The furniture manufacturers in Grand Rapids, Mich., hope to secure half an acre of space for their World's Fair exhibit and will ask for it in a lump. The exhibit will be made under the auspices of the Furniture Association and the display will have the name of Grand Rapids in big letters and conspicuous places all over the half acre. Each firm exhibiting will defray its own legitimate expenses, but all will contribute to a general fund for decorative and advertising purposes.

Poisoned the Tea.

Mrs. Blackwell of Wolfetown, Renfrew County, Ont., poisoned the tea prepared for a meal, with the intention of taking the lives of the members of her family. Her husband detected the fact that there was something wrong with the tea, and accused his wife of having placed poison in it. She denied the accusation, and, to prove that the beverage was all right, drank a cupful of the tea. She was taken ill in a short time and died before a doctor, who was summoned, reached her side.

Frightful Death of a School Girl.

A terrible tragedy is reported from Berne junction, about a mile from Berne, Mich. A little girl, 12 years of age, was warming herself in the district school when her dress caught fire. She ran outside and, it being a very windy day, she was soon enveloped by flames. In the sight of all her playmates her clothing was burned from her body and the hair singed from her head. She was so severely burned that she lived but a short time.

Oil in Michigan.

Great excitement prevails at Ithaca, Mich., over indications of an immense oil field around near there. For some time indications of crude oil have been found on the surface and in dry wells. Owen Perry drilled a well on his farm, and it is due to his success that others are starting wells of their own. Oil experts, who have examined the indication and Perry's well, say that if wells are put down they will prove paying investments.

Cut the Wrong Carcass.

George Keummerle, a member of Keummerle Brothers' firm, butchers of Danville, Ill., committed suicide by cutting his throat from ear to ear with a large butcher knife, while cutting steak at his block in his shop, in the presence of several customers and one of his brothers. He was 34 years of age and unmarried. It is believed he became suddenly insane.

Workman Badly Mangled.

Henry Willis, employed at the iron foundry of Marley, Craig & Co., Dayton, Ohio, while in the act of oiling a shaft, had his left arm caught in a cog and the next instant he was drawn into the rattling machine, and would have been horribly mangled but for the presence of mind of a workman, who threw a lever and stopped the machine. His arm was frightfully mangled.

Special Prayer Against Grip.

London special: Mr. Gladestone's friends are urging him to remain abroad until the influenza epidemic in England will have abated. He will probably remain on the continent another fortnight, in which case Sir William Vernon Harcourt will lead the opposition on the reopening of Parliament. The Archbishop of Canterbury has issued a special prayer against influenza.

His Back Broken.

Joseph Hammond, a young farmer who lives near Mendolin, Mercer County, Ohio, while cutting down a tree in the woods near Fort Recovery, met with a very serious and probably fatal accident. While sawing at the tree a large, dead limb broke off and before he escaped it struck him on the back, breaking it. From his present condition it is thought that he will die.

Killed in Court.

While attending a murder trial at Manchester, Clay County, Ky., a general fight occurred between the two factions. When the smoke cleared away, Marcus Hock, a brother of the County Judge, was dead, and Joe Hacker was mortally wounded. A courier just in from there says that both sides are arming and more serious trouble is expected.

Burglars Raid an Iowa Town.

Burglars raided four business houses, including the postoffice at Searsborough, Iowa. Considerable merchandise, jewelry, stamps etc., but no money was secured. The thieves took a mule from a barn and dragged a small safe belonging to A. M. Louz, to the outer edge of town and burst it open but got nothing of value. There is no clue to the burglars.

Father and Child Fatally Burned.

At Bay City, Mich., John Fiffel, a shoemaker, was working in his shop when his 18-months-old child threw a hammer at a lamp hanging right above him. The lamp was smashed, the burning oil flowing over them. The mother came to their assistance, but they were all three so horribly burned that it is doubtful whether they will recover.

Cancer, Superinduced by Gum Chewing.

Mrs. M. E. Lennon, wife of a prominent St. Louis suburban real estate operator, is dying from cancer, superinduced by gum chewing. She accidentally bit her tongue, and now is beyond surgical aid. The case is a unique one in medical history.

For Egan's Recall.

In the House Representative Arbold of Missouri presented for reference a resolution requesting the President to recall the Minister of the United States to Chili, Mr. Patrick Egan, to the end that amicable relations between the two countries might be had and maintained.

Governor Boyd is the Man.

The Supreme Court of the United States has decided the Boyd-Thayer gubernatorial case in favor of Boyd.

MR. SPURGEON IS DEAD.

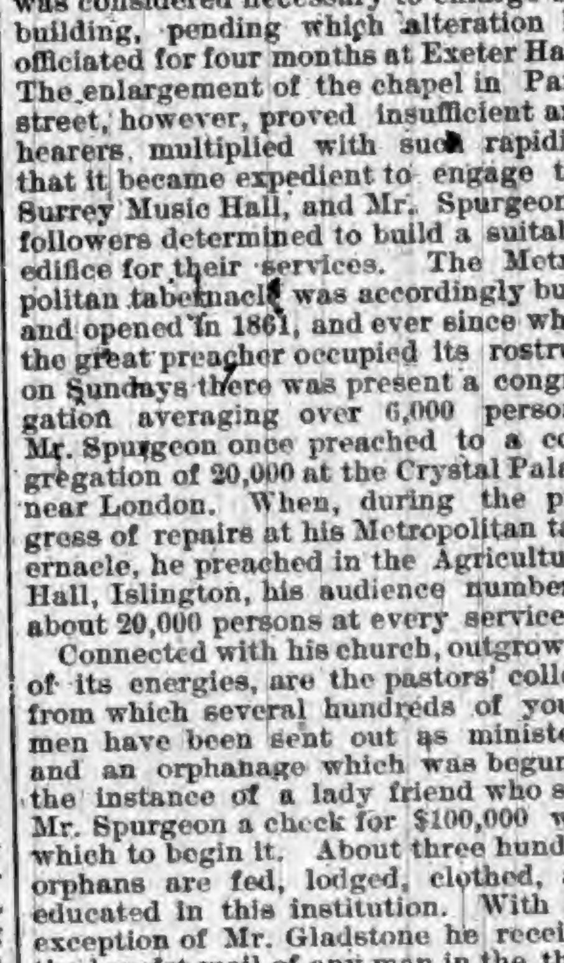
END OF THE FAMOUS LONDON PREACHER.

He Passed Away at Mentone, in South France, After Months of Patient Suffering—His Remarkable Popularity—Work for Humanity and Charity.

Death of a Great Divine.

Telegrams announce the death at Mentone, in South France, of Rev. Charles H. Spurgeon, pastor of the London Metropolitan Tabernacle. Mr. Spurgeon had long been a sufferer from gout, and about seven months ago his condition became so serious that even then his life hung in the balance for weeks. Eventually his naturally rugged constitution overcame the disease so far as to permit of his being removed to Mentone, where he had been for some time. At first the mild climate to which he had gone proved beneficial, and the famous preacher's physicians were beginning to look for their pastor's complete recovery. A few days ago alarming symptoms made their appearance. The reverend gentleman grew steadily worse, and the end soon came.

Mr. Spurgeon was born at Kelvedon, Essex, June 19, 1834, and was educated at Colchester, Maidstone, and elsewhere, finally becoming usher in a school at Newmarket. Having adopted Baptist views, he joined the congregation which had been presided over by the late Robert Hall, of Cambridge. He subsequently became pastor at Waterbeach, and his fame as a preacher reaching London he was offered the pastorate of the church meeting in New Park Street Chapel in Southwark.



CHARLES H. SPURGEON.

He first preached before a London congregation in 1853, with so much success that ere two years had elapsed it was considered necessary to enlarge the building, pending which alteration he officiated for four months at Exeter Hall. The enlargement of the chapel in Park street, however, proved insufficient and hearers multiplied with such rapidity that it became expedient to engage the Surrey Music Hall, and Mr. Spurgeon's followers determined to build a suitable edifice for their services. The Metropolitan tabernacle was accordingly built and opened in 1861, and ever since when the great preacher occupied its rostrum on Sundays there was present a congregation averaging over 6,000 persons. Mr. Spurgeon once preached to a congregation of 20,000 at the Crystal Palace near London. When, during the progress of repairs at his Metropolitan tabernacle, he preached in the Agricultural Hall, Islington, his audience numbered about 20,000 persons at every service.

Connected with his church, outgrowths of its energies, are the pastors' college from which several hundreds of young men have been sent out as ministers, and an orphanage which was begun at the instance of a lady friend who sent Mr. Spurgeon a check for $100,000 with which to begin it. About three hundred orphans are fed, lodged, clothed, and educated in this institution. With the exception of Mr. Gladstone he received the largest mail of any man in the three kingdoms. A great many of his letters from sailors, from poor fellows whom he had managed to help out of the gutter, were simply addressed Spurgeon, England. To these he replied cheerfully and was always ready to give advice. Nor was this all. He gave freely of his money. In fact, he was a poor man. If it had not been for the kindness of his congregation he would have been penniless.

In person Mr. Spurgeon was short, thick-set, with a face by no means handsome and markedly English in type. But he had kindly manners that rendered him agreeable to those who knew him. Though he had accomplished so much labor in his life he has been for years a frequent sufferer from rheumatism, a disease which troubled both his father and grandfather.

In recent years, since he had had much ill health, much of his parochial work has been undertaken by Mrs. Spurgeon, who is a devoted, unselfish woman, with a pleasant face and voice that win her friends everywhere. She is a ministering angel among the poor of the great city. In every respect she has proved herself a worthy helpmeet for the great preacher.

Their twin sons—their only children—are both engaged in the ministry.

At John Roll's cabin in Great Hollow, near Madison, a row occurred during a dance, in which Jim Wells, after having his head cut open with a blow from a brass-ribbed banjo, slashed his uncle, of the same name, twenty-six times and his brother eleven times with a long knife.

Rev. Allen Lewis, pastor of the First M. E. Church of Valparaiso, has caused consternation among the members of his flock by inaugurating a vigorous campaign against card-playing and dancing. Members of the congregation are urged to pledge themselves to henceforth refrain from amusements of this character. Rev. Lewis presides over a congregation representing the elite of the city, and the pastor's vigorous denunciation has clearly defined his position. Mr. Lewis was formerly pastor of the M. E. Church at Brazil.

Alexander Freeman, one of the best-known farmers in Wabash County, is afflicted with a peculiar malady. For over a week blood has been slowly oozing from his lips, eyes, and one cheek, and from all parts of his body. The blood accumulates beneath the epidermis, until the skin is as purple as a plum, and then it oozes out. This has been kept up constantly, until Mr. Freeman is now completely prostrated. A number of physicians have been called, but they are powerless to stop the flow, and in all probability the man will die.

A very serious accident occurred near West Fork, Crawford County, in which five persons received severe injuries. A party of hunters, with a large pack of hounds, dashed across the road in pursuit of a fox just as two sleighing parties came along. The horses attached to the sleighs became frightened and overturned them; throwing out the occupants. Mary Allston and Agnes McFoy each had a leg broken; Mamie Gark had two fingers broken, her nose crushed and a bad cut on the forehead; Thomas Gammon had three ribs broken, and Frank Fellows broke his right arm.

A fatal accident occurred near South Bend, resulting in the death of Albert Kimble, a young plasterer. Kimble left home to see a sick friend. He cut across the fields, and at the railroad track his progress was blockaded by a moving freight train, on the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern railroad. He stood on one track waiting and did not notice the late fast mail approaching running fifty miles an hour. The train struck him with terrific force, throwing him high in the air. He alighted near the track. His head was frightfully crushed, his shoulders mashed, and his left arm and leg fractured. His neck was broken.

Theodore Cox, a well-known character of Marion, fell in front of a moving freight car on a Clover Leaf switch, and was fatally injured. He was intoxicated, and was trying to avoid the car when the mishap occurred.

The press dispatches sent out from Pittsburgh stating that all the factories affiliated with the Western Flint Glass Association would at once shut down for an indefinite period because of an over-production of stock and the inability to make satisfactory freight rates is denied by Messrs. Boldt and Hemingray, presidents of Muncie's two flint-glass houses, which are quoted in the list of thirty-seven factories given by the correspondent. Mr. Boldt's factory has been closed for a few days because of inability to get stock, but will start to work again soon, and he, with Mr. Hemingray, says the report is the work of some one misinformed. They also say that 2,500 men will not be thrown out of employment.

THE SENATE AND HOUSE.

WORK OF OUR NATIONAL LAWMAKERS.

Proceedings of the Senate and House of Representatives—Important Measures Discussed and Acted Upon—Gist of the Business.

The National Solons.

The farmers and the lawyers met face to face in the House of Representatives on the 27th, and the result of the legislative skirmish was a decisive victory for the agriculturists. This contest for prerogative was revived by the introduction of a bill by Mr. Hatch, of Missouri, to amend the present oleomargarine law. The members from agricultural districts generally rallied around Mr. Hatch, and the bill was finally referred to the Agricultural Committee by a vote of 128 years to 18 nays. Debate was resumed upon the report of the Committee on Rules. In the Senate no decisive action was taken. Discussion was largely upon the Mexican award (the La Abra) measure.

In the House, the 28th, debate on the report of the Committee on Rules was resumed, only to be interrupted by the delivery of President Harrison's supplementary message on Chilian affairs. This message announced that Chili's latest communication proposed entirely satisfactory action by that country, that only a few minor details remained yet to be arranged, that there was no longer a reasonable possibility of war, and that our future relations with the South American republic bade fair to be not only peaceful but cordial. After several hours spent in debate upon the above-mentioned report, the rules were read by paragraphs for amendment. On motion of Mr. Catchings, an amendment was adopted increasing from sixteen to seventeen the membership of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. Mr. Hemphill, of South Carolina, offered an amendment giving to the Committee on the District of Columbia jurisdiction over the appropriations for the support of the district. Pending action, Mr. Cockran, of New York, announced the death of Representative F. B. Spinola of New York, and the House, as a mark of respect to the memory of the deceased, adjourned. In the Senate, the event of the day was the receipt of the President's message. The feeling of satisfaction was expressed in words by Mr. Sherman, who, in moving the reference of the message and accompanying documents to the Committee on Foreign Relations, said that he supposed that every member of the Senate heartily joined in congratulation at the hopeful and honorable settlement (honorable to both sides) of the unpleasant incident.

When the House assembled on the 1st, debate upon the report of the Committee on rules was immediately resumed, but no final action was taken. Mr. Pickler, of South Dakota, was persistent in presenting an amendment not in order, and the Speaker called upon the Sergeant-at-arms to either quiet him or remove him. In the midst of the debate, Mr. Bryan, of Nebraska, announced that the Superior Court had decided the gubernatorial question in his State in favor of Boyd, and for a time the House was in an uproar. No work was done in executive session, and adjournment was taken. The Senate was not in session.

Charged by a Buffalo.

Every farmer's boy has seen two angry rams rush at each other, with heads almost down to the ground. It is thus that a mad African buffalo charges upon the object of his rage, be it man or lion. Such a charge is described by Mr. Herbert Ward, in Scribner's Magazine.

While his comrade, Mr. E. J. Glave, was stalking a large herd of buffaloes, he fired at a bull, but only wounded it in the shoulder. The herd stampeded, but the wounded bull trotted into a neighboring patch of scrub, whence, as Glave approached, he rushed into the open, and for an instant stood there dazed.

Recovering himself, the infuriated animal extended his neck, stuck back his ears, stamped with his foot, sniffed the air, and with an ominous twitch of his tail, charged straight for the man, who stood awaiting him, fifty yards off.

Glave saw from the pace of the charging buffalo that his life depended upon the one shot. He waited, therefore, until the brute, with head close to the ground, and bellowing with rage, was within a few feet. Then he fired, and shot it through the heart. So sudden was the shock and so great the impulse, that the brute turned a somersault, and Glave had only time to jump aside to avoid being crushed.

While stalking the herd, Glave had given a native his helmet to carry. When the man saw the infuriated buffalo about to charge, he climbed up a high tree. So scared was he that even after the buffalo had been killed he could not be persuaded to come down with the helmet, and another native had to go up and get it.

The exposure of the hunter's head to the sun gave him a severe fever, and that night he was so delirious as to require several men to control him.

ROYAL RANGER RALPH;

—OR—

The Waif of the Western Prairies.

BY WELDON J. COBB.

CHAPTER XXIII—Continued.

Darrel seized the bandit's arm and forced him through the doorway. Despard made no resistance as Brown snatched his revolver from his belt. Standing in the darkness near the door was a queer-looking vehicle with a rear grated door.

"Get in," ordered the Sheriff, sternly.

"What am I arrested for?" demanded Despard.

"Never mind; if you don't want to be lynched you obey orders."

"This is an old treasure wagon, and stout and secure," said Brown to Darrel.

"There is a driver?"

"Yes."

"And he has orders to proceed to Miners' Gulch?"

"Exactly. Here is the key to the vehicle. Get in with your prisoner, and leave before the miners know of the capture."

"There was an accomplice of this man."

"Where is he?"

"Escaped."

"I'll try and find him. Drive ahead."

Darrel sprang into the vehicle and closed the door. It shut with a spring lock.

Darrel held his revolver ready for use. Despard, sullen and silent, sat glaring fiercely at him.

The vehicle left the place and started for the mountain roads. The capture of the bandit had been accomplished most expeditiously. Darrel well knew, however, that he must be very watchful of so wily a foe.

For over an hour not a word was spoken, and the vehicle proceeded on its way. There was a small shelf in the forward part of the wagon. Here a little lamp cast dim rays of light over the interior.

"I think I know you at last," remarked Despard, finally, in a sullen, sneering tone of voice.

"Indeed!"

"Yes. You are the friend of Ranger Ralph."

"And his avenger."

"You expect to prove me to be his assassin?"

"And that of the others—yes."

"Where are you taking me?"

"To Miners' Gulch."

This seemed to alarm and subdue Despard, for he relapsed into silence.

A casual glance from the rear barred window showed that the vehicle was slowly treading a dangerous road on the very edge of the mountains.

Suddenly he started. He was positive that a figure on horseback had flitted by the vehicle. A minute later there was a shot. It was succeeded by a cry for help and then a fall.

"Whoa!"

The horses came to a halt. The voice was that of Danton. A revolver was thrust through the bars. Its possessor was sheltered by the darkness beyond.

"Move, and you are a dead man," spoke Danton's voice. "Whoever you are, you are in deadly peril. I can see your every movement. Listen to what I say."

These words were directed to Darrel. He clutched his revolver and was silent.

"Your driver I have disposed of," spoke Danton. "You are in my power. Despard, who is this man?"

"The scout's friend."

"Grey?"

"Yes."

"Mr. Grey, you will first hand out the revolver you have in your hand."

Darrel moved as if to obey Danton's request. Instead, he raised it suddenly and fired.

Danton drew back. The horses, alarmed at the shot, started off. With tremendous velocity the vehicle was dragged down a steep grade. Without a driver they dashed madly forward.

One glance showed Darrel their awful peril. They were so near the edge of the precipice that it seemed as if it would go over the edge of the declivity.

Despard himself, terrified, sprang excitedly to his feet. A yawning abyss showed as the wagon struck a tree.

The horses broke loose and dashed away. The vehicle tottered, crashed, and fell over the steep mountain road.

CHAPTER XXIV.

A THRILLING ADVENTURE.

It was some minutes before the two men in the locked wagon box could fully realize what had occurred. They knew that the horses had run away, and, the wagon colliding with a tree, they had dashed madly onward, deserting the vehicle. The wagon had tottered on the brink of the abyss, and then, turning, fell downward.

Darrel Grey caught one glimpse of the gloomy depths of the valley below, and gave himself up for lost. To his amazement, the wagon whirled downward only a few feet. Then it came to an abrupt halt.

Its sudden stoppage brought him and Despard together with a shock.

Amid the excitement and peril of the occasion, Darrel thought not of treachery on the part of his companion. The latter seemed paralyzed with terror, and his face was white and craven.

"We are doomed!" he muttered, in a frightened tone.

"Not at all," replied Darrel. "We are enemies, Dyke Despard, but for once we had better act in unison."

"Anything to escape a fall into that dark abyss."

Despard shuddered as he pointed to the yawning depths below.

The lamp in the wagon had been extinguished by the shock of the fall, but the moonlight outside revealed their surroundings plainly. Darrel soon learned their real situation. The wagon lay on its side, about ten feet below the edge of the road.

It had fallen partly on a shelf of rock, partly across a tree, and these supported it temporarily. The hold was a frail one, however, and the least dislodgment might send them whirling to death a hundred feet below. Darrel groped his way to the door and unlocked it.

"If I allow you to follow me, will you agree to make no resistance?" he asked of Despard.

"I promise," replied the outlaw eagerly.

"Very well; by clinging to the shrubs and rocks we can reach the cliff."

Darrel stepped out the door and clambered over the shelving rock. By careful climbing he reached the cliff in safety. He aided Despard, who had followed him, to reach the same place. Both breathed relievedly at their marvelous escape from death.

Darrel was once more on his guard, and the relentless captor, as he clasped his revolver in his hand.

"March on," he said, gently, "we have lost time."

He glanced up and down the deserted mountain road. There was no trace of either Danton or the horses that had broken loose from the wagon.

"Hold on," said Despard.

"Well, what is it?"

"You intend to take me to Miners' Gulch?"

"Yes."

"What for?"

"Can you ask? Your many crimes!"

"It will be poor satisfaction to you."

"Why?"

"You are losing time."

"In what way?" asked Darrel.

"In seeking revenge on me, you are leaving your friends in danger."

"What friends?"

"Ranger Ralph and the girl, Inez Tracey?"

"Ranger Ralph is dead."

"No; he escaped at the old hermit's cave. I saw him."

"Allowing that, he can take care of himself."

"But the girl. She is a prisoner with the Modocs. See here: I'm willing to help you find her, if you will allow me my liberty."

"No: I shall place you in safe hands. Then I shall find the girl alone and unaided. March on!"

Despard obeyed the mandate, and started down the road with a sullen face. The menace of Darrel's revolver was sufficient to make him an abject and unresisting captive.

Not a word was spoken as the journey was resumed. Darrel resolved to convey his prisoner to the next mining settlement, and there make known his crimes, and return to search for the driver of the wagon, who had been shot by Danton.

Later, he learned that the driver had escaped with a slight wound.

For over an hour the lonely tramp continued. Several times, as they came to where the road was more tortuous, Darrel paused.

He imagined he could hear horses' hoofs in the distance, but finally attributed the sound to some ravine waterway or cataract. He was not aware that a wily foe was upon his trail, that Despard's accomplice, Danton, had followed them, intent on rescuing the former.

As they rounded a point of rocks, Grey started quickly. Too late to avoid a catastrophe, Darrel essayed to fire at an advancing foe suddenly revealed behind them. It was Danton, and he was on horseback.

With a deft movement a lasso shot out from the saddle bow. The rope enclosed his form, pinioning his arms tightly.

The revolver fell to the ground. With a cry of fierce delight Despard seized it. Danton gave the lasso a tightening jerk, secured the other end round his waist, and faced his captive with malignant joy depicted on his evil face.

"The tables are turned, my friend," he jeered.

Darrel was silent with discomfiture and chagrin.

Despard proceeded to see that the lasso was firmly tied around the prisoner.

"We won't delay here," remarked Danton. "Some of this man's friends may be on our trail. Come along, Captain."

Danton urged forward his horse. Despard walked by his side conversing with him. Darrel was compelled to keep pace with them, secured to the other end of the rope. He could hear enough of the conversation of his captors to knew that they were discussing his fate.

He made every effort possible to release his hands, and had almost succeeded in getting one arm loose, when Danton suddenly halted.

"What is it?" asked Despard.

"Look ahead."

"A fire!"

"Yes."

"Perhaps a camp-fire of the Indians."

"That you must learn. Reconnoiter and see who it is."

Despard left them and went in the direction of a glow of light in a thicket a short distance away. Danton sat carelessly regarding Darrel, until Despard returned. The leader reappeared finally greatly excited.

"We're in luck, Danton!" he cried.

"What do you mean?"

"It is a camp yonder in the thicket."

"Redskins?"

"No."

"Vigilantes?"

"No."

"What then?"

"A dozen of one of our old bands."

Danton uttered a satisfied ejaculation. He started the horse forward so suddenly that Darrel was thrown from his feet.

The latter was at that moment near the edge of the cliff and fell precipitately over it. With a yell of fright Danton was dragged from his horse. The astounded Despard saw the two men disappear from sight with a cry of alarm.

The lasso, attached to both, whipped around a tree that grew near the edge of the road. Glancing over, Despard saw the two men come together with a shock.

Their weight evenly balanced, they were unable to ascend. Darrel had managed to get one arm free. With this he clutched the lasso.

For a moment Danton was terrified. Then he discerned a means of escape. If he could lower Darrel and raise himself, he could reach a place of safety. He seized the side of the lasso supporting Darrel and shot up several feet. Then seizing some twigs growing out of the cliffs, he endeavored to ascend still higher.

In a flash Darrel comprehended his peril. He discerned that when Danton reached the tree across which they were swung, he would cut the rope and send him to his death below. With a free hand he seized the foot of Danton.

"Let go!" yelled the bandit.

"I will not. You will let me ascend first or I will hold on to you all night."

"Shoot him!" shouted Danton to Despard, wild with rage.

The outlaw leader leaned over the edge of the cliff and leveled a revolver at Darrel. There was a flash and a report. Darrel withdrew his hand from the lasso as a hot, searing sensation coursed his fingers.

Despard began to pull at the rope. Darrel shot downward and Danton reached the tree. There was a flash of a gleaming blade and the lasso was severed.

Darrel fell with terrific velocity. He must have fallen some twenty feet when he stopped abruptly. He had fallen into a tree which swayed and gave way with a slight crash.

Darrel found that its branching top had split and held him a prisoner in the half-severed cleft. For the present he was safe at least.

He glanced upward. All view of the top of the cliff was shut out from his vision. Below, far as he could look into the cavernous depths, was darkness and gloom.

Evidently his enemies supposed he had been dashed to pieces on the rocks below. His position was certainly a most unenviable and perilous one. To extricate himself from his dilemma he knew that he must exert unusal caution and ingenuity.

Without much difficulty he released himself from the folds of the lasso and then from the crotch of the tree. A thick furze or underbrush covered the side of the declivity and Darrel determined to descend.

He made a loop of the lasso and descended its length clinging to the shrubs. His descent in this way was a laborious one and it was several hours before he reached the ravine below.

He regarded his escape as miraculous, and he was so exhausted that he flung himself on the ground and lay there for some time.

He aroused himself at last and traversed the banks of the little stream that ran through the ravine. As he rounded a projecting ledge of rocks, Darrel Grey paused in some surprise. There was a deep indentation in the solid rock.

Here a light showed. It proceeded from a small hand lamp set on a rock. Its rays showed two persons. One of them was a man fancifully attired, whom he had never seen before. His companion at a glance Darrel recognized. It was White Fawn, the Modoc princess.

CHAPTER XXV.

THE OLD HERMIT.

Darrel Grey did not at once manifest himself at his discovery of his friend the Indian girl. Instead, he stood silently regarding the two persons he had happened to find so strangely.

He was, too, somewhat puzzled at the actions of White Fawn's companion. The whole dress and manner of the latter were strangely peculiar and grotesque. He possessed a patriarchial appearance and wore a white beard coming nearly to his waist. He wore dark spectacles and a strange cone-like hat on his head. His dress was a mixture of civilized and savage, and was ornamented with shells and war-paint.

On the rock before him lay a small oblong box, from which he had just taken a long reed, which was evidently a musical instrument. So fully was Darrel's curiosity aroused at all he saw that he strained his hearing to catch the first words spoken by the old man.

"You are all ready?" asked the Indian maiden.

"Yes," replied her companion. "We will see what the science of the old hermit can do toward baffling our enemies."

Darrel started. "The strange old man must be the recluse, Walford," he murmured, as he recalled Ranger Ralph's reference to the hermit.

"Am I to wait here?" asked White Fawn.

"Yes. If I succeed at all, it will be unaided. I will bring the girl here, if I rescue her."

"But how can you hope to do so against so many foes?"

The old man significantly tapped the box which he had tied over his shoulder.

"Leave that to me and my science," he replied, confidently. "The outlaws' camp is just beyond the valley, you say?"

"Yes."

Walford, for it was he, left the place. Darrel was about to reveal himself and address the hermit, but hesitated from doing so until Walford had departed.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

An Invasion of England.

According to popular estimate, it requires not less than three generations of wealth to evolve a gentleman from the common herd of humanity. By this standard of measurement Mr. W. Astor (it is not necessary to follow the custom of New York papers and use type enough to spell his entire name) is a gentleman, as are many other descendants from the traders, smugglers, and fishermen of old Manhattan. His grandfather, who smelled strongly of salted pelts, in which he dealt, has left the English-speaking business world the invaluable symbol "O. K.," which he first used, these letters being the initial ones of the two words, "Oll Korrect," as that dealer in hides spelled them. Somewhat to the consternation of New York society, Mr. Astor, he of the third generation, actually contemplates going to London to reside. Now, no one questions his right to reside where it pleases him best, for he is only one of many who look upon America in its newness and rawness as only suitable for money-making, but as not the place in which to get the best things out of this life. How common the expression, "Europe is the only land in which to live." The Astors have always been noted for looking well to the interests of the Astors, and the present possessor of the Astor estates may reside where it best suits him, and none need seriously question his taste or resolve. In England, especially in London, a gentleman can always have the society of gentlemen, especially when, like Mr. Astor, he has more than a pecuniary independence. According to the rule above cited, Mr. Jay Gould cannot be regarded a gentleman, and that title can only rest upon his grandson, should a goodly proportion of the Gould wealth be preserved for him, and this long after the ancestral Jay, like the ancestral Astors, has found oblivion in the tomb. Who knows but that the great and powerful families of England a generation or two hence may be the Astors, Vanderbilts and the Goulds. England may manage American breweries, while the "irony of fate" is likely to "even-up" this invasion of of our malt interests by furnishing the sea-girt isle with her "first families."

How the President is Paid.

Just how President Harrison is paid perhaps one man in a thousand knows. It is taken for granted, though, that the President gets his hands on his salary in some way and spends it very much after the fashion of other men. The statutes of the United States fix the salary of the President and other public officials. Mr. Harrison is entitled to $50,000 a year, and is supposed to be paid quarterly. In fact, he is not. Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Crouns has charge of the payment of salaries, and once a month he sends to the division of accounts a document addressed to the Secretary of the Treasury in these words: "Please cause a warrant to be issued in favor of Benjamin Harrison, President of the United States, for the sum of $4,166.67, with which he is to be charged and held accountable under the following head of appropriation." The section of the statute is quoted and the document signed by the assistant secretary. The warrant for this amount is then issued and recorded in the proper books, when it is sent to Treasurer Nebeker, who issues his draft on the United States Treasury in favor of the President. This draft is no different from any other, save that it is in the name of the President alone. If the chief magistrate is in the city it is sent to the White House by a special messenger and delivered to the President or his private secretary. After the President puts his name on the back of the draft it becomes negotiable paper, the same as any other, and is sent by him to the Columbia Bank, where it is deposited to his credit and becomes a part of his private account.

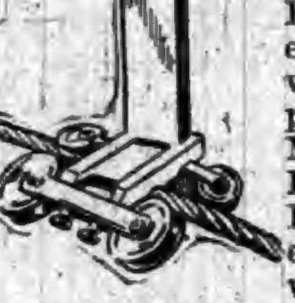
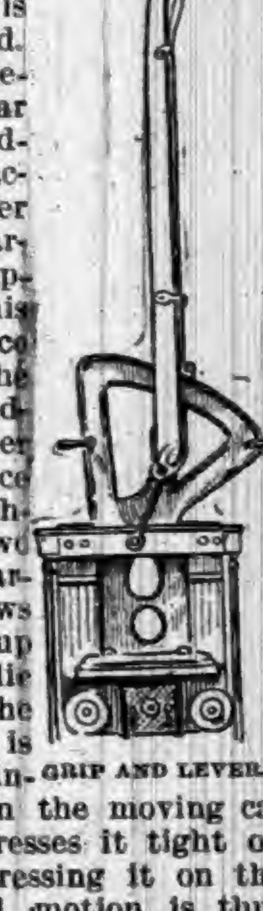
HOW THE CABLE CAR MOVES.

Facts that Are Not Known to the Average Reader.



The endless cable laid in conduits under the highway for street cars is really the invention, in its primitive form, of one J. C. Stewart, of Philadelphia, as early as 1854, but was never put into practical use until Mr. Andrew S. Hallidie, of San Francisco, perfected the system, and with his associates built the Clay Street Hill Railroad of San Francisco in August, 1873. The system, says Harper's Weekly, consists simply of an endless wire rope placed in a tube (having a narrow slot from one-half to three-quarters inch wide) beneath the surface and between the rails, maintained in its position by means of sheaves, rollers or wheels. The rope is kept continuously in motion by a stationary steam engine at either end of the line or at any convenient point between the two extremes. A gripping attachment at the end of a vertical steel rod connected with the car and passing through the narrow slot in the tube transmits the motion of the cable to the car.

The speed at which the car moves is determined by the rapidity of the cable and this is regulated by the revolutions of the driving-wheel at the stationary engine. The rope is made of steel wire about three inches in circumference, is supported every thirty-nine feet on eleven-inch sheaves, but does not run directly under the slot, but to one side of it, to prevent sand and drift from falling on the rope and to enable the foot of the gripping attachment to pass by and under the upper sheaves and over the lower sheaves in the tube. The connection between the cars on the street and the traveling rope is by means of this gripping attachment, as shown in the illustration. The grip is worked by a lever and is the one now generally employed by all the companies. It is formed of two frames, one sliding inside the other. The outer one is secured to the grip bar on the forward truck by bolts, and carries the lower jaw; while the inner frame, which slides up and down upon the outer one, carries the upper jaw, the quadrant, the operating lever and the adjusting mechanism, and is held in place by guide plates extending across the inside frame, and between which it slides. The frame carrying the jaws passes through the slot directly down alongside the cable without offset. The grip bar, on which these parts are mounted, is secured and supported by a frame on the running gear or truck, and not on the car itself.



GRIP AND LEVER.

When the car is at a standstill the cable passes along over the chilled-iron grooved rollers at each end of the lower die. The lever operating the grip is then inclined forward. When the gripman desires to start the car he draws the hand-lever back. This action moves the inner frame downward, carrying with it the upper jaw or die. This die consists of a piece of brass secured in the lower end of the sliding part. The lower die is a shorter piece of brass fitted lengthwise between the two rollers. This is arranged with set-screws to be raised to take up wear. The upper die is longer than the lower, and as it is forced down by the inner frame it rests on the moving cable and pushes or presses it tight on the rollers before pressing it on the lower die. Gradual motion is thus imparted to the car without jerk or jar. A still further downward motion of the upper die forces the rope or cable on the lower die, the cable thus being held tightly between the dies. A reverse motion of the lever raises the frame and upper die and releases the cable and allows it to run through freely without imparting any motion to the car, which is then brought to a standstill by the action of the brakes.

Breaks His Neck Often.

Albert Fatterson, the man whose neck literally hangs by a thread and who has been an inmate of Jefferson College since September last, intends leaving the hospital in a day or so comparatively cured—that is to say as near cured as he ever will be. When the man entered the hospital he had already broken his neck on three different occasions. He showed up at the hospital all of a sudden one day, and startled Dr. Egan by saying he had his neck broken some time before and he had felt a little pain back of it yet. Dr. Egan admitted him to the hospital, and found the case to be one of the most remarkable in the annals of surgery.

Dr. H. A. Wilson, the lecturer on orthopedics, afterward examined the man, and lectured on his case before a clinic. At this time Fatterson was wearing a stiff bandage round his neck, and, owing to it being an insufficient support, he jerked his neck out of place three times while in the hospital. On each occasion he fell down paralyzed, and but for the prompt attention of Dr. Egan in replacing his neck in position he would have died.

Dr. H. A. Wilson, in order to obviate the recurrence of these accidents, devised a particular and special apparatus to hold the man's head in place and also a pair of tongs, which fold up small enough to go into his pocket, but extending out far enough to permit of him picking up things from the floor without bending his neck.—Philadelphia Times.

A Western Idea.

The latest fad in the West is a shoe party. They stretch a sheet across the room and the ladies stand behind it and stick their feet under it so you can only see their shoes. Then you go along and pick out a pair of shoes and the lady who is in them you take down to supper.

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN NERVINE TONIC
—AND—
Stomach AND Liver Cure

The Most Astonishing Medical Discovery of the Last One Hundred Years.

The Great South American Nervine Tonic

Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stomach. No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incalculable value who is affected by disease of the stomach, because the experience and testimony of many go to prove that this is the ONE and ONLY ONE great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.

HARRIET E. HALL, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to the Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration, and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors, with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly."

MRS. ELLA A. BRATTON, of New Ross, Indiana, says: "I cannot express how much I owe to the Nervine Tonic. My system was completely shattered, appetite gone, was coughing and spitting up blood; am sure I was in the first stages of consumption, an inheritance handed down through several generations. I began taking the Nervine Tonic, and continued its use for about six months, and am entirely cured. It is the grandest remedy for nerves, stomach and lungs I have ever seen."

No remedy compares with SOUTH AMERICAN NERVINE as a cure for the Nerves. No remedy compares with South American Nervine as a wondrous cure for the Stomach. No remedy will at all compare with South American Nervine as a cure for all forms of failing health. It never fails to cure Indigestion and Dyspepsia. It never fails to cure Chorea or St. Vitus' Dance. Its powers to build up the whole system are wonderful in the extreme. It cures the old, the young, and the middle aged. It is a great friend to the aged and infirm. Do not neglect to use this precious boon; if you do, you may neglect the only remedy which will restore you to health. South American Nervine is perfectly safe, and very pleasant to the taste. Delicate ladies, do not fail to use this great cure, because it will put the bloom of freshness and beauty upon your lips and in your cheeks, and quickly drive away your disabilities and weaknesses.

THE AUBURN COURIER

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY.

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana, postoffice as second-class matter.

THURSDAY.......FEBRUARY 4, 1892.

Democratic Meeting.

The democratic committeemen of the various precincts of the county, are requested to meet at H. J. Shafer's office in Auburn, over Hague and Rutt's shoe store,

Saturday, Feb. 6, 1892, at 2 p. m., to elect a county chairman, vice-chairman, secretary, treasurer and executive committee. In case a precinct did not select a new committeeman last Saturday, the old committeeman is requested to attend. Let every precinct be represented.

AB. KELLEY, Chairman,

J. F. SHUMAN, Sec.

DEMOCRATIC CAUCUSES.

UNION TOWNSHIP.

The caucus for Union, met in the COURIER office last Saturday afternoon, Jan. 30, at two o'clock p. m., with quite a fair attendance. Hon. D. D. Moody was made president and J. A. Barns, secretary, After some informal discussion the meeting decided to elect two committeemen for each precinct, one for the part in town and one for the part of the precinct that is in the country. Then a motion was made by G. C. Ralston, that we proceed to the selection of the two men for each precinct. For the northwest precinct, the unanimous choice fell on I. N. Cool for the town and John Groscup for the country. For the southwest, O. P. Myers and Geo. H. Oberholtzer were chosen. For the northeast John Picker and Emanuel Stafford. For the southeast, C. A. Picker and D. T. Smith, all being chosen by a unanimous vote. By a vote of the meeting, the chairman appointed a committee to secure a room for the meeting of the committeemen on Saturday Feb. 6. They were: I. N. Cool, H. N. Coffinberry and J. A. Barns. After some discussion as to a county chairman, to be elected at the coming meeting the caucus adjourned.

D. D. MOODY, Pres.

J. A. BARNS, Sec.

NORTH SMITHFIELD.

MR. BARNS:—Pursuant to the call in last Thursday's COURIER the citizens of the north precinct of Smithfield township met at Summit school house, No. 2. The meeting was called to order by M. P. Barker. F. C. Waterman was chosen chairman, who then read the call in the COURIER and asked for the announcement of names for township committeeman. The names of J. J. Baxter, F. C. Waterman and M. P. Barker were announced. Baxter and Baker withdrew. F. C. Watermaa was elected by unanimous vote.

FAIRFIELD.

Obedient to the call made by the County Chairman, a very enthusiastic caucus met at Fairfield Center. The meeting was called to order by the chairman, Jacob Eckhert. Frank Seiler was appointed to act as secretary, after which the meeting proceeded to business. H. H. Slaybaugh proposed the name of Frank Seiler for committeeman, east, and was seconded by Wm. H. McGiffin for the last precinct. This was put before the house and was carried by a unanimous vote. Then Frank Seiler proposed the name of Wm. H. McGiffin, as committee in the west precinct, and was seconded by Jud. Shade. This motion was put before the house and was carried by a unanamous vote. The committee was then instructed to use its influence to bring about a plan to nominate our county officers by a Primary Election System. The caucus was in favor of the renomination of Grover Cleveland. There being no further business the meeting adjourned, being one of the most enthusiastic caucuses Fairfield has held for sometime.

OTHER PRECINCTS.

In North Richland, M. J. Thomas was made secretary of the caucus and Marion Franks was re elected committeeman.

In Waterloo, the new committeemen are, O. P. Smith, W. H. Leas and Ed. Wareham.

In the incorporated town of Butler, are: First precinct, A. L. Gengnagel; second, D. A. Tomlinson; third, Sam. Stoy; fourth, Daniel Tomlinson; fifth, John W. Boyle.

In Butler township the caucus was called to order by John Stonestreet the committeeman, and W. F. Deveny was made secretary. Henry L. Houser was then elected committeeman, and the meeting adjourned.

THE Chinamen over the United States celebrated their new year last Friday, Jan. 29.

CHILEAN congress and people seem satisfied with the way the trouble was settled.

DEMOCRATIC committeemen should not forget the meeting in Auburn Saturday of this week.

STRAWBOARD goes up 30 per cent higher now, as all the manufacturers in Indiana have gone into a trust and raised the price.

SPURGEON, the great English preacher, died Saturday, at 11 p. m. Since Beecher's death, he was the most famous preacher of his time.

NOW that Chile has done the honorable thing, let this government recall Minister Egan and send in his place an American to represent us.

WHEN the delegates to the republican district convention at Auburn, were going home, a poll was taken on the train, and resulted Blaine, 25; Harrison, 8; the nominee, 12; McKinley 1, and Cleveland 7. The last named, were not delegates, of course.

GEORGE E Ross of Logansport is announced as a candidate for nomination on the democratic state ticket, for judge of the appellate court. We have not the acquaintance of Mr. Ross, but the Pharos assures us he is a lawyer of ability and honesty.

GOV. BOYD, of Nebraska, after being kept out of the office over a year by the usurper, Thayer, has been given the office by the United States Supreme Court. Thayer said Boyd was not a citizen of the U S., and so held over this long, after his own time was out.

SENATOR HILL'S fool friends will be the death of him yet. The latest idea is to say of him that he holds the same place in the democratic party, that Blaine has so long held among republicans. Such twaddle as that won't recommend a man to any reasonable democrat.

THE Dispatch quotes the same truck about that stocking factory at Ft. Wayne that the Press uses, only it gives Hanna as its authority. We have already explained that twelve million worth of goods that under the old law would, as the Dispatch admits, cost the people of United States fifteen millions, was bad enough, and now to be told that three millions more added, makes these goods cheaper, puts the Dispatch in a still more ridiculous light. If the Dispatch's view is correct, why did not McKinley put a higher duty on sugar so as to make it cheaper instead of taking the duty off?

THE democratic state committee met at Indianapolis last week and changed the date of the state convention from April 14 to April 21. The date is still pretty early but we are told it is to give Congressman Bynum of the Indianapolis district a chance to try and get the nomination for governor, and if he fails he will still be in shape to run for congress again when his district convention meets. The COURIER does not belive in one man hanging up his stocking for two officers at once. Northern Indiana would do well to unite on Judge Zollars, as the fittest man yet named for governor.

THE Dispatch seems to be unfortunate in its editorials, whether it borrows them from the Indianapolis Journal, or tries the unusual plan of writing new ones. Last week, in commenting on our remark that "A prudent man like Cleveland, would have ended the Chilean trouble early by decisive, yet respectful action" it retorts that "President Cleveland had a chance to settle the Samoan trouble, the Bering Sea difficulty and the fishery question, but he failed to do it." In reply to this we wish to say, it is a matter of history that the Samoan business was nearly at an end, when Cleveland's time was out, and all Harrison had to do, was to appoint the men, who met the men of Great Britian and Germany, and they ratified a plan that had already been substantially agreed upon. The matter was of no importance to the United States, and it is not worth while for either Cleveland or Harrison to claim the credit. As to the Bering Sea and fishery questions, they are not settled yet, though it is fair to presume the editor of the Dispatch didn't know it, or he would not have made the unfortunate comparison.

The Dispatch's closing remark is very characteristic. It says "The COURIER like the Chilean minister did not understand the question under discussion or the administration with which it had to deal in settling it." As the Chilean minister for a time outwitted our whole "administration," we think the Dispatch again unfortunate, and as for under standing such an "administration" as Harrison's, surely it is too small a matter to discuss farther.

THE Atlanta, Ga., Journal has taken pains to ascertain the feeling of Indiana democrats on the presidential question, and finds an overwhelming sentiment in favor of Gray, with Cleveland for second choice. The Journal has gone to the bottom of the question, and finds very few who favor Hill, in this state. After getting at local opinion over the state, their correspondent in Washington, went to see each of the eleven democratic members of congress from this state, and finds the same sentiment among them, Gray first and Cleveland for second choice, when a second choice was named at all. We believe the article expresses the Hoosier sentiment exactly as it now stands. Gov Gray is dear to the heart of every Hoosier democrat, and if he has any showing for the nomination, all will stick to him to the last, But should he be dropped, and Cleveland be in the race at all, we believe Cleveland would get nearly every Indiana delegate in the convention. This is the sentiment of all the people with whom we have talked. It might not be amiss to add in full, the interview which the reporter of the Atlanta Journal, had with our own member, Judge McClellan. This is what they report him as saying:

"Indiana is for Gray first and Cleveland second. The sentiment for tariff reform is far stronger than any other and the ex president is undoubtedly the foremost representative of this sentiment in the nation.

Of course if New York should shelve Cleveland, Indiana would go for any democrat upon whom the convention might determine, and the nominee, whoever he may be, is pretty sure of carrying the state.

Tariff reform is the only issue that should be presented in the campaign. There is a strong free silver sentiment in Indiana, but the people are willing to subordinate it to the tariff. With the tariff as the issue, we can win the fight. Why, I believe that two-thirds and possibly three fourths of the people of the United States are in favor of tariff reform. The temperance organisation and all the labor organizations are strongly for it. If we can unite these different elements success is absolutely certain.

The insertion of a free silver plank, though it would help us in the west, would not enable us to carry any western republican state, and it would cause us to lose the east and make New York doubtful."

How's
Your Liver?

Is the Oriental salutation, knowing that good health cannot exist without a healthy Liver. When the Liver is torpid the Bowels are sluggish and constipated, the food lies in the stomach undigested, poisoning the blood; frequent headache ensues; a feeling of lassitude, despondency and nervousness indicate how the whole system is deranged. Simmons Liver Regulator has been the means of restoring more people to health and happiness by giving them a healthy Liver than any agency known on earth. It acts with extraordinary power and efficacy.

NEVER BEEN DISAPPOINTED.

As a general family remedy for Dyspepsia, Torpid Liver, Constipation, etc., I hardly ever use anything else, and have never been disappointed in the effect produced; it seems to be almost a perfect cure for all diseases of the Stomach and Bowels.

Our Waterloo correspondent last week asks a pointed question on the tariff issue and has the correct opinion as to the proper classification of fruits, from a purely scientific standpoint. We presume, however, that the custom officers have instructions not necessarily in accord with natural science.

We met Uncle John Buchanan of Fairfield, the other day, on his way home from Churubusco, where he had been visiting his daughter, Mrs. Dr. Squires. Dr. Swarts was up at Chicago last week to be present when the operation was performed on Mrs. Dr. Johnston, as he had long been familiar with her case. It was a dangerous and difficult operation, but it was necessary to save her life, and of course it was the best thing to do. Later: Dr. Johnston returned Monday evening with the assurance that Mrs. J. was getting along nicely and hopes of a speedy recovery is looked for.

Our Spencerville letter last week spoke of the death, Jan. 23, of the aged wife of Uncle Samuel Wasson, near that place. Thus, one by one, the pioneers are passing over the river to the great Beyond, and the community will see them no more in this world. They were a rugged, honest and courageous band, and in the main their example has been worthy of all praise. We believe that the bereaved husband, is now the oldest pioneer whose date of settlement in DeKalb county outranks all others. Those who were here at an earlier date have all passed away. But we hope many years of comfort are still in store for him.

Monday Clarence Raut's little girl got hold of some paint, the kind that is used to do fancy work on plush. As is natural with children, she began eating it. As soon as Mrs. R., discovered what had happened, she called Dr. Vesta Swarts, who did all she could. The paint company was telegraphed at once, to know what the coloring was composed of, which in a short time brought the information that the composite parts were zinc and lead. The little one is getting along nicely.

Fatal Accident.

Daniel Leeper, the young man who delivered ice here for the Denisons last year, was found dead in his room at Mr. Denison's last Friday. He had gone up to his room for some purpose, and as he did not come down for some time, one of the children was sent for him and he was found dead. A revolver lay near him, and a bullet hole was in his brain. It is supposed to have been an accident. He was a young man who was highly respected and his tragic death was a great shock to the people of that neighborhood.

A WEDDING AT GARRETT.

(From Ft. Wayne Journal, Jan., 29.)

The marriage to-day of Miss Anna C. Gengler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Gengler, to Mr. John Cogley, of Wheeling, W. Va., was a notable society event in this city. The pretty ceremony was read at 9:30 o'clock in the Catholic church, the services being conducted by Father A. Young. The beautiful edifice was well filled, not only by the families and their friends, but by many of the leading society people of the place. The services were solemn and very impressive. The singing, also, was excellent. At the conclusion of the ceremony the guests repaired to the home of the bride, where a reception was held, being entertained at noon by the serving of an elaborate wedding dinner, which did great credit to the hospitality of Mr. Gengler and the skill and good taste of Mrs. Gengler. The wedded couple received many beautiful and costly presents, the gifts of the friends of both bride and groom.

Among the guests present were the Rev. A. Young, Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Cleyenger, Miss Mary Harman, J. B. Mager, Mrs. D. W. Ocker, William Springman, James E. Cogley, Emmett Manion, Miss Louisa Springman, William Singler, Louis Hart. Among the guests from abroad were William Cogley, Wheeling, W. Va., P. A. Gengler, J. T. Clark and wife, Lima, Ohio; Elmer Kimball, Hicksville, Ohio; Miss Lucy Burk, Auburn, and others. In the evening the whole party went to Wagner's opera house to the Locomotive Firemen's annual hop.

A Guest.

Gored by a Cow.

Samuel Miller's wife had a very narrow escape from violent death Saturday forenoon. She had gone out to see about some cows in the grounds near by, and found that one of them, that had a calf, was acting rather wild, and appeared to have been excited and annoyed by some colts near by. As she approached, the cow ran at her and knocked her down, trying to gore her with her horns. Her screams brought Mr. Miller to her rescue, or it might have been a fatal affair. He drove the cow off, and got his wife into the house. She was badly frightened of course, was bruised and torn somewhat, and possibly hurt internally, though at last accounts was getting along.

Primary Elections.

For several years, the Courier has urged the advantages and the fairness of nominating candidates for county and other offices, by primary elections, and up to date no good reason has been urged against it. Now, we wish to add another feature. It should be done by the Australian system, the same as used at the elections. The nomination of a ticket is at least as important as the election of a ticket, and should be guarded by law in the same way. But as we have no law directing us as to how the nominations should be made, it is in order that we make a law for ourselves. We have as much a right to adopt the primary election by the Australian plan, as we had to adopt the delegate convention, or the mass convention. We have never heard but one thing urged against a primary election, and that was, that we sometimes had more than two candidates and in such cases it might happen that no one of them would have a majority over all, though the man highest on the list would be declared nominated. To this, it should be answered that in a delegate convention, the successful candidate cannot always be said to be the choice of a majority over all, of the actual voters of the county. In fact he seldom has an actual majority of the voters at his back. He simply has a majority of the delegates at the convention, and in this county, the delegates are seldom voting under instruction from the people. Besides if it is wrong to consider a man nominated, who has not a majority over all, why is it not wrong to call a man elected, at the regular election, when he fails to get a majority over all, and gets only a plurality—that is, gets more than any other one candidate? It would be a good year, now, try this plan.

THE plowman who sings and whistles at his work, and sleeps in a cabin where peace and love abide, often gets more out of life than the man of millions living in a palace.

BOSTON points with pride to the circumstance that there were three hundred more marriages in that city last year than the year before. But when it comes to births, Boston, when it comes to births, where are you?

A YOUNG Norwegian in Minnesota fell heir to a baronetcy and a fortune in Norway, and the good news so elated him that he proceeded to get drunk and was frozen to death in a barn. There are two or three morals to be deducted from this incident, and they are too obvious to need explicit statement.

THERE is danger lest the news that the professor of political economy at the Chicago University will be paid $7,000 a year, coupled with the recent reduction of base-ball salaries, may divert the attention of young collegians from those athletic sports which have long been the glory of American institutions for higher education.

PEOPLE say it is foolish to worry about being buried alive, but everyone worries more or less about it. Medical students who know more or less about grave-robbing stories say that the number of people who are tucked away alive is surprisingly large. The people have such a horror of the thought, that a law should be passed compelling people to keep their dead until the sure sign of death shows itself.

THE vanity which throws out hints, and the garrulity which abhors silence, and the flippancy which spurns restraint, are all poor and mean characteristics which every right-minded man and woman will be on the watch to control. Even the entire frankness with which some people discuss their own affairs forms no precedent for discussing those of another. The right to the former is unquestionable, though its wisdom may often be doubted; but the latter is neither right nor kind.

IT is reported that there is a wide feeling of distrust at Talequah, the capital of the Indian Nation, over the sudden deaths of Chief Mayes, Assistant Chief Chambers, and ex-Chief Bushyhead. The charge that their deaths were caused by other than natural causes has been freely made. They have all taken active parts in the exciting questions which have been before the nation. The loss of such men as Mayes and Bushyhead is very great. Bushyhead especially was a scholarly man, liberal in his views, and a well-equipped statesman.

IT is very fortunate that the question as to where Columbus was really buried has been brought up before we have actually embarked on the business of holding the great Exposition in his honor. What a catastrophe it would have been to inaugurate the Exposition in the full belief that his remains were reposing in Havana, and then have Prof. Cronan turn up with his alleged discovery that they have all these years been quietly resting in San Domingo. And he really seems to have a good case. The San Domingo coffin has five inscriptions while the one at Havana has none.

WE should be studiously just and courteous to the stranger within the gates. A report that has gained wide currency concerning Lady Henry Somerset deserves summary stopping. It is that, although a temperance missionary, she is owner, according to a parliamentary return, of several licensed "publics," or saloons, in London. Lady Henry Somerset inherited a considerable estate, including property leased for this nefarious business, and it is not legally in her power to terminate these leases at her will. The fact, therefore, is not cause for reproach on a philanthropic woman, who will not renew the leases when they come within her control.

WE wonder that someone does not write a book on cranks. And, by the way, he might make his fortune by hiring a few thousand cranks to push it as agents. Even the most irascible and case-hardened grumbler, who has thrown dozens of book agents down-stairs, or strewn them about his office and trampled on them, could scarcely hope to resist the wild-eyed crank with his menacing mien, and the little black bag, which would recall so many things. And what a fertile subject! A catalogue of the cranks alone, in point of humor, would knock Mark Twain silly, beat Bob Burdette hollow, and drive Bill Nye into seclusion and country school-teaching for a living. There's millions in it!

A SWEDISH newspaper, the Ostgoten, takes a somewhat novel and striking view of the emigration question. It says that during the last ten years 375,000 persons have left Sweden as emigrants. The education of each of these persons cost at least a thousand crowns—about $270—making about $101,250,000 in all, and as they emigrated when they became old enough to turn their education to account and return some service to their country, the money spent for their education was a dead loss to Sweden, from a national point of view. But, looked at from our point of view, it means a clear gain of about just so much to this country. We get the fruit without the cultivation. It ought to solace the Swedes to reflect that thus there is no actual waste in the world.

THE attempted suicide of Guy de Maupassant in a fit of delirium brought on by overwork is one more striking warning against that extravagant mental stress which is so much indulged in by the intellectual workers of to-day, but it will probably be no more effective than have been the many which have preceded it. The fever of modern life hurries men on with a power which is all but resistless. Men in these days desire to live two or three lives at once. There is nothing which they are willing to forego, and since the circumstances of the time bring so many things within reach, they constantly disregard the limitations which are imposed upon man by human weakness and rush on to disastrous ends with blind disregard of the consequences, to which it is the most obvious madness to close the eyes. In the end they gain less of life or of enjoyment, and there is nothing which they enjoy to the full, because there is nothing to which they are able to give the whole attention; but they grasp at everything so eagerly that nothing in the end remains firmly in their hands.

THE discussion about the orders sent by Gen. Terry, who is dead, to Gen. Custer, who is dead, concerning the battle of the Little Big Horn in 1876, is mischievous and profitless. Terry was a prudent General, but always true to his duty. If a subordinate of Custer's grade had disobeyed his orders Terry would not have failed to report the fact in his official communications with the War Department. A misunderstanding he might overlook, but certainly not direct and palpable disobedience, such as is charged against the memory of a dead hero by Mr. Munger, the New Haven clergyman. The accusation rests upon the conversation of a staff officer relating reminiscenses of verbal orders. The foundation is too slight for the superstructure, and, with all respect to the cloth, it is to be said that the preacher had better stick to his vocation of saving the souls of living men rather than resort to blackening the memories of the dead. Gen. Terry, no doubt, gave proper and prudent orders. Beyond question Custer did the best he could to execute them according to the information he had as to the enemy's strength and dispositions, and with such concurrence as he received from subordinates. It may be true that the history of the Custer massacre has yet to be written, but the reputation of that gallant, indefatigable and by no means indiscreet cavalry leader is not to be preached away on second-hand information.

THE moral convulsion which has recently attacked the little town of Effingham, Ill., marks a distinct progress of the movement against the nude in art which was begun a year or so ago in Detroit and which then took the form of draping the statues of Venus, Diana and other decollete goddesses in the public gallery. The good people of Effingham have been roused to a delicate frenzy by the exhibition on their theatrical billboards of lithographs displaying in lurid colors the nether charms of a company of women participating in the production of a burlesque known as "His Nibs and His Nobs." The result of the first attack of the good people upon the mayor of Effingham was that he ordered the police to paste brown paper over the objectionable portions of the various anatomical designs. The faces which remained in sight, however, were of so violent a type that the reformers felt as though they had only half performed their duty. They accordingly returned to the mayor and requested him to tear down the lithographs and to prohibit the show. He promised to carry out their wishes, but at the last moment fell a prey to the superior blandishments of the theatrical manager. The lithographs remained and the show went on. The house was packed. The godless thronged from motives more or less vulgar and the moral jostled them in order that they might justify by observation their previous exploits. The show was not as the pictures, but the nibbses and nobbses reaped a golden harvest. It is too bad, but it almost invariably happens that when the reputable element of the community starts into this kind of reform it succeeds solely in making up a purse for the benefit of the thing which it condemns.

Hats of the Beaver.

It will be bad for the beaver if the praise which is being so freely bestowed upon its fur should lead to beaver hats becoming fashionable again. It is hygienic according to one authority, economical by another, in spite of its high price at first, and it is generally agreed that for lightness, warm, and comfort the beaver hats, which were at one time the only wear, are still ahead of any others.

"Of all the felts that may be felt, give me your English beaver," boldly declares an old song of 1658, and three years after Pepys bought him a "beaver," which cost him £4 5s., which is assurance doubly sure that they were then in the front of fashion, says the Warehouseman and Draper.

The colonies first and the Hudson Bay Company later almost depended on the beaver for their prosperity, and the number of skins which at times have been imported is surprising. It is popularly supposed that the invention of the silk hat led to the freedom of the beaver from the persecutions of the trappers, but the fact is that it has been hunted all the same and if any considerable demand were made upon his felt or fur by fashion there would be serious danger of his extinction.

WE EAT MORE SUGAR.

REMOVAL OF THE DUTY LOWERS PRICES.

A Reduction in Price Causes an Increase in Sugar Consumption—Falling Off in the Pig Iron Production—High Tariff Methods.

How Free Sugar Works.

Free sugar is continuing to teach the people the truth about the tariff. Messrs. Willett & Gray, of New York, the greatest authority in the country on sugar statistics, have recently published their annual statement showing the sugar consumption of the United States, and their figures show how the cheapness of sugar has increased the consumption of that article.

Raw sugar became free on April 1, 1891, and during the remaining nine months of the year the consumption of sugar was enormously increased. The total consumption for three years was as follows:

	Tons
1889	1,439,701
1890	1,522,731
1891	1,885,994

The increase of 1891 over the previous year was 363,263 tons, while the increase of 1890 over 1889 was only 83,030 tons. Expressed in percentages the matter stands thus: Last year we consumed 23.86 per cent. more sugar than in 1890, but in 1890 we consumed only 5.76 per cent. more than in 1889. In 1890 we consumed 54.56 pounds of sugar for each individual; last year, with free sugar three-fourths of the year, each one of us made away with 67.46 pounds.

This increase of consumption was directly caused by lower prices. On the very day that the duty was lowered 2¼ cents, granulated sugar fell 2 cents per pound, and prices have since been from 2 to 2½ cents lower at wholesale, and still more at retail. The people now plainly see that they have for years been paying a big tariff tax on sugar.

If they will study the following table of prices, remembering that sugar can be refined as cheaply here as anywhere, they may confirm their suspicions. The prices in London are taken from the quotations in the first issue of the London Economist for each month. The prices in New York are from the American Grocer, and are averaged for each month:

Add about ½ cent per pound to the duty for the cost of importing sugar from England, and see how nearly the home price corresponds to the foreign price, with the duty added. From 1887 to 1890, inclusive, over $220,000,000 duty was collected on sugar. Add to this the increased price on the sugar produced in this country (about one-eighth of all consumed here), and it is seen that the consumers of sugar have been paying $65,000,000 a year of tariff tax, besides the wholesalers', jobbers', and retailers' profits on this amount, a total of between $5 and $6 per family tax on this one article.

But this is not the only salutary lesson to be learned from the duty on sugar. This duty well illustrates the power granted by tariffs to home manufacturers to levy still further tribute upon consumers. Previous to April, 1891, the average duty on raw sugar was about 1¾ cents. As our refiners get their raw sugar in the same markets as English refiners, and as the cost of refining is nowhere less than here, the price of sugar here, even under the old tariff, ought not to have exceeded the foreign price by more than 2 cents per pound. The refiners, however, were protected by a duty of three cents and by cost of transportation from Europe about ½ cent per pound. As is well known, the leading refiners formed a trust in 1887 which prevented internal competition by closing up many of their refineries, by limiting the production of others, and by coming to "understandings" with the most of those not in the trust. In this way, as is shown by the above table, they kept the price on an average of about 3½ cents above the foreign price and obtained a clear profit of about 1½ cent per pound or between $26,000,000 and $30,000,000 per year. That the profits were exorbitant was demonstrated by the Senate Committee, of New York, which investigated this trust in 1888.

Now, with raw sugar free, the prices here and in England should agree. But the refiners are still protected by a duty of ½ cent and the cost of transportation. Hence the price is kept about 1 cent above the price abroad, while it is estimated that the refineries in the trust made about $5,000,000 in 1891. But this profit is unsatisfactory to men accustomed to a far greater one, and on Jan. 13 the stockholders of the American Sugar Refining Company approved the recommendation of the directors to increase the capital stock from $50,000,000 to $75,000,000. It is well understood that the $25,000,000 increase is for the purpose of buying up the independent plants. The President of the trust said, in an interview: "We want the $25,000,000 to enlarge our plants. Whether our system shall be increased by purchase or by construction remains to be seen. At the present time there are four large concerns outside of the American company. They are the Revere of Boston, and the Spreckles, Harrison, and Knight of Philadelphia."

There is really, however, but little competition from any except the Spreckles company. The trust will feel more secure when it has no rival, and when it is able to buy up and close up new refineries, as it is supposed to have done with the one recently built in Baltimore. Some unknown persons are said to have gotten control of the stock of this company and to have mysteriously closed it. The remaining duty of ½ cent on refined sugar is yielding no revenue to the Government and serves no purpose except to enable the sugar trust to continue to exact large profits from the consumers of sugar.

High Tariff Methods.

Ever since the war tariffs were enacted it has been characteristic of the high protected trusts and combinations to use all means possible and to resort to the most unscrupulous methods to retain the advantages already secured, or to obtain still more favorable ones in the form of high tariffs on competing foreign products. During the war, when the Government found it necessary to tax manufactured products to increase its revenues, these interests were able to have the tariff raised to offset such tax. Said Mr. Morrill, who had charge of the tax bills in the House during the war: "If we bleed manufacturers we must see that the proper tonic is administered in return," i. e., give them power to bleed the people.

This policy of bleeding the people was justified during the war by the necessities of the revenue. When, however, the war was over and the internal taxes were taken off, thus stopping "the bleeding of the manufacturers," these very manufacturers were powerful enough to secure the retention of the war tariffs as they were, and in many cases to have them increased. In this way their power "to bleed" the people has been increased and perpetuated.

Now that the people are awakening and are gathering their forces preparatory to a campaign to reduce the "bleeding" power given by high tariffs, these high tariff beneficiaries are perfecting their organization, known as the American Protective Tariff League, so as to be able to resist any reduction whatever in their tariff privileges. Knowing that the present administration is favorable to their cause, they do not hesitate to use the officers of the National Government to assist them in accomplishing their ends. The following extracts from a circular letter to new postmasters sent by Mr. Wilbur F. Wakeman, Secretary of the League, will show how unscrupulous are the methods resorted to.

NEW YORK, Dec. 29, 1891.

DEAR SIR—Accept our congratulations upon your recent appointment. Situated as you are you can accomplish the best results for the cause of protection of any one in your locality. It is our plan to have at hand one official correspondent of the league at every postoffice, and through him secure information, obtain the distribution of our documents, and exert every legitimate influence in favor of protection and reciprocity.

It is impossible for us to bear all the expense of this work, for this is a big country. Every intelligent voter should receive complete information showing the benefits of protection. We wish to have you act as our confidential agent and correspondent to assist in this work.

We expect that each correspondent will either personally, or with the aid of friends, furnish at least $5 before the next election for circulation of our literature at his home. If you do not feel like personally contributing the amount suggested ask friends to help. They will do it. If you accept we will outline a plan to secure the co-operation of others. Will you aid as our correspondent?

It is imperative that every friend like you put his shoulder to the wheel and work in season and out of season until the election of 1892. Yours very truly,

WILBUR F. WAKEMAN, Sec.

This is nothing but blackmail, pure and simple. Shall it be allowed to succeed?

McKinley Prices.

The Association of American Manufacturers of Cutlery asked permission of the Ways and Means Committee to propose a schedule on cutlery for the McKinley bill. Their request was granted, and the duties which they wanted were enacted into law. These duties, compared with those of the tariff of 1883, are as follows:

Pocket cutlery. Value ℘ doz—	Tariff of 1883. ℘ c.	McKinley bill.
50c or less...	50	12c per doz. & 50 per ct.	= 74 plus.
50c to $1 50..	50	50c per doz. & 50 per ct.	= 80 plus.
$1.50 to $3 ...	50	$1 per doz. & 50 per ct.	= 80 plus.
$3..........	50	$2 per doz. & 50 per ct.	= 116 minus.

How this trust or association, as they politely call themselves, has taken advantage of the new duties is shown by the following letter of a cutlery dealer:

To the Editor of the Evening Post:

SIR—I notice in your issue of the 8th inst. a letter from X and Y, relative to a statement which appeared in the Press that "no one has heard of any advance in prices of cutlery in consequence of the McKinley bill." It is a well-known fact that about the time this bill went into effect the Association of American Manufacturers of Cutlery was holding frequent sessions in New York with the view of "regulating" prices, and as a result of their conferences I submit some figures giving the details of a few patterns of American knives as follows, the prices I paid for them prior to Oct. 8, 1890; and that which was fixed by the association at various times afterward:

Price prior to Oct. 8, '90.	Oct. 10, '90.	Oct. 18, '90.	Jan. 25, '91.
$1.65 per doz.	$1.75	$2.00	$ 2.25
2.91 per doz.	3.10	2.47	3.50
3.75 per doz.	3.95	4.05	4.50
4.25 per doz.	4.50	5.13	6.70
7.65 per doz.	8.45	9.00	10.00

These are no special cases, but a similar advance took place over the whole line of several hundred patterns, and as the McKinley bill became operative Oct. 6, 1890, it is significant that within four days a marked increase in American goods was announced. When they reached the January prices I had but little interest in them, as I was convinced that the burden-bearing consumer would rebel and either make the old knife whittle a little longer, or go without, if asked to purchase at the retail prices which would pay the dealer a profit on the above costs.

As an indication of the "we-are-on-top" position which the Association of American Cutlery Makers assumed, I will add that I was solicited to purchase goods at the advanced prices, with the guarantee that, if within a reasonable time I could buy from any member of the association at less price, I should be reimbursed any excess I had paid. CUTLER.

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.

The Steel Rail Trade.

In reviewing the steel rail trade for 1891 a prominent high-tariff trade journal says:

"The past year has been a quiet period in the steel rail trade, but the year has been marked by at least one event of great importance, namely, the removal of the most formidable antagonist of the rail combination. As the result of long-continued negotiations, which several times threatened to miscarry, the Scranton Steel Company was consolidated with the Lackawanna Coal and Iron Company last spring, and the actuating spirits of the Scranton Company were placed beyond power of opposing the combination for a period of ten years. It cost a nice snug sum to do this, but it was evidently considered as worth what it cost.

"One year ago the rail trade was in a disorganized and demoralized condition. The combination was in a state bordering on collapse, and rails were selling at $28 per ton at Eastern mills, with a slow market. It took two or three months to dispose of the Scranton Steel Company and straighten matters out, and then all was plane sailing, with $30 as the fixed and unalterable price. Until within the past three months, trade has been very quiet, but the last quarter brought liberal purchases by the leading railroads, and the trade may now be regarded as in a very satisfactory condition, considering the low price of pig iron and the very fair price of rails."

When the duty on rails was reduced in 1890, from $17 to $13.44 per ton, some of the manufacturers pretended to be alarmed at the prospect of English competition coming in to cut down the large profits they were making. A representative of Andrew Carnegie's steel rail mill told a newspaper reporter that if the domestic rail makers were to hold distant ports of the home market, like Texas and the Pacific States, no reduction in the duty could be made. The protective duty of $17 a ton, he claimed, was none too much.

But the duty was cut down to $13.44, and what was the result? Was the rail trust hurt? On the contrary, it went on with its old game of putting up prices, just as if nothing had happened. This they could well do, as the duty is still out of all proportion to the actual difference between the cost of making rails here and in England.

A Failure of McKinleyism.

The American Manufacturer, a prominent protectionist trade paper, of Pittsburg, has been making an estimate of the amount of pig iron produced in the United States in the year 1891. It places the production at 8,196,127 gross tons, against 9,202,703 gross tons in 1890.

Here we have a falling off of 1,006,576 gross tons in the first year of McKinleyism. True, the McKinley law did not change the duty on pig iron, but the consumption of iron is everywhere accepted as the best gauge of the prosperity of a country. All other great industries are dependent upon the iron industry; when they flourish they make a demand for iron, and the iron industry must also flourish.

If the McKinley law has brought to our industries the prosperity which was promised by the McKinleyites, why does not the iron industry show the effects of the prosperity? Why has not the great tin-plate industry come to the rescue of iron? Tin-plate is composed almost entirely of iron, and if McKinley's tin-plate tax had built up the promised industry the consumption of iron would not have shown such a marked falling off.

The falling off in the production of iron last year was entirely in the first six months of the year. When the idle furnaces began to go into blast again in May and June a well-known protection organ had the effrontery to point to this as one of the achievements of the McKinley law. But a wise man prefers to wait to see the end before he jubilates, lest it should turn out that there was really nothing to jubilate over. The end in this case is enough to cause a touch of dismay in the heart of the most stalwart McKinleyite. The average weekly capacity of the iron furnaces in blast last year was only 157,750 tons, against a like weekly capacity in 1890 of 176,784 tons.

The same journal already referred to has an account of the failures last year in the iron trade, where it finds "some interesting but gloomy facts." It says:

"In Pittsburg the pressure has been particularly powerful, and several large firms have been compelled to yield. One old and honored iron firm liquidated its liabilities, aggregating about $1,000,000, and retired from business. Two companies, with liabilities aggregating about $2,500,000, were forced to ask extensions, and two other companies went into the hands of receivers. A dozen other concerns engaged in various branches of the iron trade throughout the State, came to grief during 1891. There was one heavy failure in New England, half a dozen in the West, and a few small ones in the South."

When is McKinleyism going to make the country prosperous?

Yield of Wheat.

Our Agricultural Department at Washington places the yield of wheat for 1891 at 611,730,000 bushels. The largest previous yield was 512,765,000 bushels in 1884, or 98,965,000 bushels less. The value is placed at $513,472,711. The nearest approach to this was $497,030,142 in 1879, or $16,442,569 less. In 1887 the value was only $310,612,000, or $202,859,751 less than the value of last year's crop. The amount of corn harvested is placed at 2,060,154,000 bushels. This was never exceeded excepting in 1889, when the total was 2,112,892,000 bushels, or 52,738,000 bushels more. But the value this year is placed at $836,439,228. The highest value of this crop ever before recorded was $783,867,175 in 1882, or $52,572,083 less than the value of last year's crop. The yield of oats is stated at 738,394,000 bushels, and the value at $232,312,267. In 1889 the yield was 751,515,000 bushels, or 13,121,000 bushels more, but the value was only $171,781,008, or $60,531,259 less. The highest value of the oat crop in any year before the last was $200,699,790 in 1887, or $31,612,477 less than that of last year's crop. Adding the highest values of these three crops for previous years, that of the corn crop in 1882, the wheat crop in 1879 and the oats crop in 1887, we have a total of $1,481,597,107, against a total value of $1,582,224,206 for these three crops last year—a difference in favor of last year of more than $100,000,000. Comparing with any one previous year the difference, of course, would be much greater. In fact, the value of these three crops last year was greater than the total value of all cereal crops together in any previous year, the nearest approach to it having been $1,470,957,200, or $111,267,006 less. When we deduct the amount of the annual expenditures of the General Government from the value of the annual grain crop we find nearly a third of it gone.

Disappearance of Copper Coins.

The one-cent pieces coined by the Government seem to vanish and no one knows where. During the year 1891 Government coined nearly one hundred millions of pennies, and the cost of them is about a tenth of a cent each, and the coinage of these pieces continues. A penny changes hands in trade ten times as often as a dime, and they are of so little value that little care is taken of them. The country once coined 800,000 half-cents, and they have all disappeared. Of our larger old copper pennies, nearly the size of the silver half-dollar, 120,000,000 remain unaccounted for, and we rarely see one of them now. Three million of the four and a half million bronze two-cent pieces remain unaccounted for, and 2,000,000 of the nickel three-cent pieces are still outstanding and we now rarely see one of them. From these facts the small copper and nickel coins seem to be nearly all profit to the Government, as a majority never come back to be redeemed. A large amount of the fractional currency issued during war time has never come back to the treasury for redemption.

Peculiar to Vassar.

Vassar is probably the only college that has a fund to be used in giving its students "good times." For several years past a sum has been given the college by a New York gentleman to be used for such a purpose. It is known as the "free money," and when parties of students start for a day at Lake Mohonk or some of the other beautiful places along the Hudson it is the "free money" that turns the wheels.

THE Chinese Government has not yet made a reply to the demand of European governments and the United States in relation to the persecution and killing of white men there. Sooner or later the Aryan may find it best for himself and the world to take possession of China, as has been done with India. It would be the easiest thing in the world to do this. The Aryan is in no mood to tolerate much nonsense from the Chinaman, and will not tolerate much more.

BEFORE resolving to buy nothing that you can possibly do without, but to save your money instead, just pause and consider the effect that such a resolution universally kept would have.

FUN FOR YOUNG FOLKS.

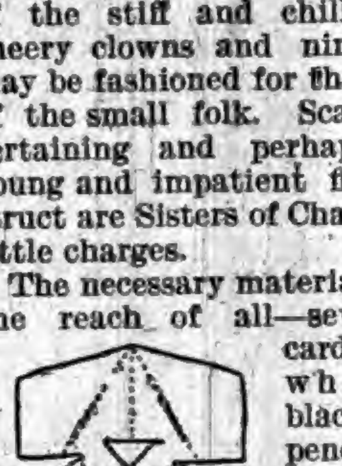
QUAINT FIGURES MADE FROM PASTEBOARD.

Sisters of Charity and Small Girls in Sunbonnets—A Pastime That Will Keep Idle Hands Out of Mischief for Hours at a Time—The Necessary Materials.

Card Board Curiosities.

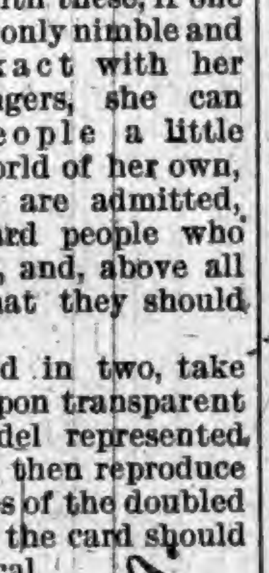
Not every one is aware that the visiting cards which accumulate in most houses with such perplexing rapidity may be put to strange and pleasing uses, keeping idle hands out of mischief for hours at a time. Out of the stiff and chilly pasteboard cheery clowns and nimble puppets may be fashioned for the amusement of the small folk. Scarcely less entertaining and perhaps easier for young and impatient fingers to construct are Sisters of Charity and their little charges.

The necessary materials are within the reach of all—several visiting cards, some stiff white paper, a black pencil, a pencil with one end red and the other blue, and a pair of scissors. With these, if one is only nimble and exact with her fingers, she can people a little world of her own, where no bugabooes are admitted, with pretty pasteboard people who will bow and scrape, and, above all things, do nothing that they should not.



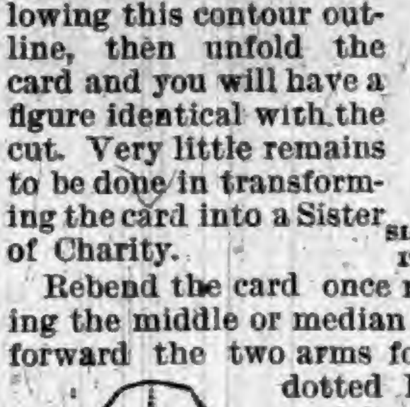
SISTER OF CHARITY IN OUTLINE.

Bend a visiting card in two, take it lengthwise; trace upon transparent paper half of the model represented in the first drawing, then reproduce it on one of the halves of the doubled card. The crease in the card should then become identical with the dotted line in the middle of the figure. Once the contour of this half-figure has been traced, cut the card following this contour outline, then unfold the card and you will have a figure identical with the cut. Very little remains to be done in transforming the card into a Sister of Charity.



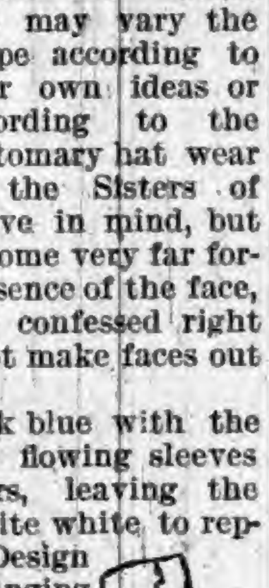
SISTER OF CHARITY COMPLETE.

Rebend the card once more following the middle or median line. Bring forward the two arms following the dotted lines of the model, then form the cap by making two long oblique folds. Of course you may vary the shape according to your own ideas or according to the customary hat wear of the Sisters of Charity you may have in mind, but remember, it must come very far forward to cover the absence of the face, because it must be confessed right here that you can not make faces out of visiting cards.



LITTLE GIRL IN OUTLINE.

Color the skirt dark blue with the crayon, and also the flowing sleeves that the sister wears, leaving the front of the skirt quite white to represent the apron. Design the rosary and a hanging bunch of keys, and if you want to perfect the figure place in her hand a little wax taper to represent a candle; or a little piece of bended paper to represent a mass book.



LITTLE GIRL COMPLETE.

You may be surprised to see that the sister's small pupil has four legs in the outline. Do not be alarmed. When the card upon which the demi-contour of the model is traced is bent back two of these superfluous legs will be cut off, leaving just one on either side for her to stand on. If, however, these supports prove insufficient, the little girl's feet may be inserted in the crack of a split cork. Then she will be able to stand up boldly and face even a high wind. With the colored pencil her frocks and stockings may be given just that color which is most becoming to her.

If a still larger family of cardboard people seems desirable, it is quite possible to manufacture them in whole rings by folding and cutting the paper properly. Take a generous square, fold it in two; by a perpendicular fold bend it into four; then crease it in the middle and you will have the bit of paper folded into eight sections. On one side of the folded paper trace the model of the half sister and half girl, being sure to have their hands clasped one in the other. Cut with one stroke of the scissors the eight thicknesses of paper, following the outline. On unfolding the sheet you will find four sisters and four little girls holding hands in a cozy circle. The figures must be colored with the greatest care, as they are very fragile, especially at the juncture of the hands. The folds in each case should be made as in the single figures, and the superfluous legs must be amputated. When completed the circle may not be able to dance without some assistance, but it will stand splendidly. Place it upon a stiff piece of pasteboard with green paper gummed over it, and if you have any imagination at all you will see merry figures at play upon the green sward of a well-kept lawn.

The Unruly Man.

A small boy made a big fat woman furiously angry and a car-load of people very merry, says the Kansas City Times. He was sitting down quietly when this portly woman came in. As nobody got up to give her a seat, she stood in the aisle at the mercy of the bumps and twists and turns of the road. The car had gone about two blocks, when the small boy got up, and, in a whisper that could be heard all through the car, said: "I'll be one of three men to give the lady a seat."

A Little Child's Science.

A little child of my acquaintance was looking out of a window one bright sunshiny day not long ago. Far out in the field lay a tin can, so placed that it reflected the rays of Old Sol in all its glory.

The child glanced up in the sky, but the sun was not there. It was back of him on the other side of the house. He took another look at the dazzling light in the field, and then, clapping his little hands with glee, he cried:

"Oh, mamma, the sun's fell; may I go get it?"—Wilmington Star.

New Abbreviation.

A lady tells a story of a young man who had come from the country to the city in which she lived, and in a short time fancied himself equal to any social emergency. He never asked advice upon questions of etiquette, and therefore made many mistakes.

At one time the lady issued cards to a dancing party, and among the invited guests she included this rather conceited and exceedingly awkward young man. He had to be out of town at the date of the party, and so was unable to accept the invitation. At the foot of the card he read the letters, R.S.V.P., and was much perplexed as to their meaning. However, he was nothing daunted by his ignorance, and wrote a note declining the invitation in as formal and stilted terms as he could command, and after signing his name added the letters, M.S.C.C.

On his return after the party, he went to call on the lady, and in the course of the conversation asked:

"By the way, Mrs. G., what did you mean by R.S.V.P. at the end of the invitation you sent me?"

Without a note of surprise in her polite voice the hostess replied: "Why, they stand for the French phrase, 'Repondez, s'il vous plait'—'Answer, if you please.'"

Then said the young man with a tone of satisfaction: "So I was all right. I thought I should hit it in my answer."

"Oh, by the way, now that you speak of it, I do wish to ask you what M.S.C.C. stand for. I can not imagine, nor can I find any one who has ever seen the abbreviation used," said the courteous hostess.

"That meant 'Mighty sorry couldn't come.' I should think that was plain enough," said the visitor, airily.

Higher Education of Women.

The higher education for women is undoubtedly an excellent and commendable thing, but it is open to question if it may not get too high for the best practical utility, says the Boston Jester. I number among my acquaintances a most charming young woman, who has devoted a number of her more recent years to the general furbishing of an intellect naturally bright. As a result, she scintillates with a continuousness and readiness that at once daze and delight. She knows as much about literature as the late Lowell, and she handles the piano with a touch altogether Paderewskish. She has also given much earnest thought to the Rig Vedas of the ancient Hindoos, and also to theosophy. She is, in short, intellectual. These tastes naturally compel a residence in the immediate purlieus of Boston, but she occasionally pays a fleeting visit to her home, remotely situated in New Jersey. Thither at the recent Christmas time she went. On the breaking of Christmas morn her little brother, a young person of 4, was up early to begin the investigations of the day, and Erudita, wishing to lighten the maternal cares, essayed to dress him. Finally, after great deliberations and frequent experiments, he was duly attired. But the young man was not happy, and after the manner of his kind he soon began to snivel. "Why, my estimable brother, what is it that distresses you?" "Boo, boo! my clothes hurt me." A long and careful search utterly failed, however, to disclose anything amiss. But the tender tears still flowed till the mother appeared on the scene. "Who dressed that child?" she asked. "I did," replied her accomplished daughter. "Well, you've got his pants on hind side before."

Never Missed His Aim.

It is supposed that we have no men nowadays who could compete on even terms with the old archers. A man named Uri Bailey recently died in Pennsylvania who was worthy of a place with the old-time soldiers. His skill in throwing stones was said to be marvelous. He was mentally deficient but a giant physically. His aim with stones at any mark or game was as unerring as that of the most skillful handler of the rifle. He annually bagged scores of small game, pheasants, rabbits, quails and squirrels, which he killed with stones. He could kill a bird on the wing or a rabbit at full speed almost as easily as he could kill it at rest.

He had a large leathern pouch attached to one side of his coat, in which he on all occasions carried a good supply of carefully selected stones. An exhibition of his skill which was always a favorite with him was to set up a scythe blade edge toward him, and at the distance of 100 feet cut apples in halves by throwing them against the edge of the blade. He could almost exactly halve two out of every three apples he threw. Robin Hood's great feat of skill was to set up a peeled sapling at a considerable distance and split it with an arrow. We do not see that this is more difficult than splitting the apple on the scythe blade.—Rural New-Yorker.

Bird Migrations.

A few scientists recently spent the night in the hand of Bartholdi's Liberty on Bedloe's Island, New York harbor, making observations on the migration of birds. They saw flocks of blackbirds, robins, thrushes, mocking birds, woodpeckers, kingfishers, larks, sand-pipers, plovers, snipes, bobolinks, brants, ducks, and geese. With large nets they were able to catch all the specimens necessary for examination, and when the temporary prisoners were set free they at once started southward. Hundreds of birds dashed against the statue and fell to the ground dead. Each flock seemed to have a few veterans as leaders, whose calls were answered by a rear guard. The birds that migrate at night are supposed to take their direction from the stars and not the topography of the country.

Chinese Tea Culture.

It is estimated that 100,000,000 of the Chinese people are engaged in the culture, preparation, sale, carriage, and exportation of tea, and their interests are adversely affected by the rivalry of other countries.

Incomplete Men.

Man is but an incomplete being without a helpmeet—in fact, only a moiety of a man, waiting to be perfected by the addition of a "better half." The royalty of his nature remains undeveloped while he is single. Only when he has a wife to protect and cherish, and children to train and discipline, does he attain his true status in the world.

Abdon, the Judge of Israel, whose forty sons and thirty grandsons filed off before him, mounted on three score and ten ass colts, may be supposed to have felt wonderfully edified and built up by the spectacle. How the old man's heart must have bounded with honest exultation when he beheld such a cavalcade of his own raising.

Home and family—what a dreary, objectless life is his who has not these to care for, and what a desert of a world this would be without the wives and babies!—New York Ledger.

La Grippe.

On December 19, I was confined to my room with the Grippe. The Treasurer of the "Commercial Advertiser" recommended that I should try a bottle of "Ayer's Cherry Pectoral," as it had cured him of the same complaint. I sent for a bottle, and in two days I was able to resume my business, and am now entirely cured.

As I took no other remedy, I can but give all credit to the "Cherry Pectoral," which I gratefully recommend as a speedy specific for this disease.

Yours very truly,
F. T. HARRISON,

Leather for Base Balls.

There are two factories in Philadelphia that use up in a season 100 horse hides a week each to cover base balls. They are alum-tanned.

One hide will furnish covers for ten dozen No. 1. balls and five to eight dozen inferior ones. Horse hides for this purpose sell from $2.50 to $4 each, as to size. Kips are also used. They sell at 14 cents a foot and sheepskin $3.50 to $8 a dozen.

The best regulation balls sell at $1.25 to $1.50 each. A piece of rubber form the center, around which yarn is wound by hand. Then they are covered.

They are "dead balls, and won't bounce."—Shoe and Leather Reporter.

The Modern Pirate.

The story of the cruise of the Hattie Gage, a steamer that is now proceeding from Sitka to San Francisco, would charm even the most enthusiastic reader of the most melodramatic of dime novels. At the instigation of two of the sailors the captain was abandoned somewhere on the coast near Coal Harbor, and then, with the mate in command, off they sailed for Behring Sea, robbing the altar of a Greek church in a deserted village in Alaska, raiding a storehouse of the Alaska Commercial Company, and plundering a gold mine. Has a wilder crew ever sailed the ocean in the piping time of peace since the bold buccaneers of Capt. Kid?—New York Sun.

Dead Sea Fruits.

They slay multitudes when they are the product of neglect of incipient disease. A "slight" cold, a fit of indigestion, biliousness or constipation, each or any of these "minor ailments," advance in many cases with "league-destroying strides." Give them a swift, early defeat with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters and avert the danger. Abernethy administered an alarming rebuke to the man who informed him that he had "only a cold!" "Only a cold," repeated the Doctor. "What would ye have—the plague!" Rheumatism and la grippe are easily extinguishable at the start. Why then allow them to get up a full head of steam? Put on the breaks with the Bitters. The genial warmth which this superb medicine diffuses through the system, the impetus it gives to the circulation of the blood, its soothing and strengthening effect upon the nervous, specially recommend it to the enfeebled and sick. 'Tis the great specific for malaria.

Worth Thinking Of.

A Boston physician thinks that humane people who are so fond of raising funds for the unfortunate in foreign lands might more wisely do something for the consumptives of their own country. In New England there are at least 15,000 consumptives, half of whom might be benefited if they could afford to live in another climate. And the same is true of the whole region, which he calls the "consumptive belt." He thinks that all consumptives ought to go to New Mexico, where consumption is altogether unknown among the natives, and he calls on the churches to start a consumptive emigration movement to that Territory.

A FASHIONABLE young man has just received a sentence of twelve years and six months in prison from a New York judge, having six times fired his boarding house in hopes of securing an insurance of $1,800 on his personal property therein. The sentence, although severe, was insisted upon by the judge, who argued with great emphasis, against a stay of sentence. A stay has, however, been obtained.

The Old Soprano Spoke Up.

It was the new soprano's turn. The way she dallied with the upper register was enough to make the eyes bulge out of the back hair of the front-row matrons. She led the organist a merry chase up and down his four-storied keyboard, and she was a good length ahead all the time; but suddenly it got tangled up in the chandelier and broke off short. A deep, dark fast-color gloom hung over the congregation and everybody recognized the voice of the old soprano. It was her chance. "That's right," she says, "don't do it if it hurts you."—Philadelphia Record.

Here It Is.

To the man who labors with his hands, physical trouble is a very serious thing. It is not merely the pain he endures, racking and tormenting as it is, but the prospective loss of time, money, and place haunts him and aggravates his suffering. He is bent on having prompt relief and sure cure. He wants the best and the proof, and here it is: —Mr. W. H. Schroeder, Gilbertville, Iowa, stated, April 10, 1884, that he had used St. Jacobs Oil in his stables for horse complaints and upon himself for rheumatism, and had found it the best remedy he had ever tried. Again, February 11, 1887, he writes: "I have used St. Jacobs Oil for rheumatism and sore back, as stated, and it cured; and for burns and bruises it does its work as recommended to do. I always keep it in the house and recommend it to my neighbors."—Mr. John Garbutt, 656 Minna St., San Francisco, Cal., writes: "Some time back I sprained my knee and suffered agony until I tried St. Jacobs Oil. The result was a speedy and permanent cure."—Miss Ida M. Fleming, 7 S. Carey St., Baltimore, Md., says: "I had been afflicted for two years with neuralgia, and tried every means to get rid of the tormenting disease. I had been given so much quinine that my nervous system was seriously injured. I was advised to use St. Jacobs Oil, which I did, and it relieved me entirely."

A very sad case of accidental shooting occurred last Thursday forenoon at the home of Levi Denison. Daniel Leeper, who has driven the ice wagon heretofore, was in his room up stairs, when Mrs. Denison sent her little boy to call him to dinner; he returned, saying, he was asleep and that he could not waken him. Upon someone else going up, he was found dead with a pistol shot in his forehead. He was sitting on a chair leaning forward, his right arm dropped at his side, the revolver on the floor, having evidently dropped from his hand. In front of him was another chair on which were cartridges. It is supposed he was cleaning and had loaded his revolver, and the shooting was accidental. He is said to have been engaged to be married to a young lady, a resident of Mayesville, N. Y. What will be the next disease to punish humanity. The world of people should be better, that God would not visit us with the plagues of sickness such lagrippe, etc. We read of plagues being sent on the Egyptians nearly six thousand years ago, and God is just as able to-day as then.

There seemed to be a chance for the young vets if Chile had not hauled in her horns. Will the editor please give us a brief history of their war footing, population, marine equipage and the distance to be traveled to reach her ports? It would be very interesting to all who reads your valuable paper.

Chile and Its Resources.

Our correspondent at St. John asks, as will be seen, for some information as to Chile. We can only give a brief sketch. Chile is the most remakably shaped country on the maps of the world. It is a sort of landed shoestring as its with is but a few miles, while its length is about 2,800 miles along the west coast, where it is washed by the South Pacific, and then its coast line turns east around by the straits of Magellan, for 400 miles more making a total coast line of 3,200 miles From the coast it reaches back only to the crest of the Andes, making its width vary from a few miles to 190 in its widest parts. It has been likened to what Rhode Island would be if, retaining its width, it were stretched from its present place across to San Francisco. Its area is about 200,000 square miles, and its population less than three millions. As to its war strength, the regular army numbers about 5,000, though reports vary and they have besides, a sort of militia variously estimated at about 50,000. But of course a war with Chile would be mainly on the sea. In regard to war vessels, they are nearer our equals. Their best ships are of the most modern kind and all are purchased abroad. She can show on the sea 2 of the best make of modern guns, while we have of as good ones, at least 100. But some of their ships are stronger than our best ones, for we have no great armored battle ships of the first-class, while Chile has two; they have but one "coast defense," ship, and, we have two; they have two "torpedo cruisers," and we none; they have no properly called "gunboats at sea" while we have six. But of real live, common men of war, if we except their two great battle ships, we are ahead, as we have 11 to their three. Both nations have other, but unimportant vessels. Our own regular army is limited by law to 25,000 men, but we have partially drilled and armed militia in the various states amounting to about 100 000, and the men capable of bearing arms in the United States is shown by the census to be 7½ million. The great distance to Chile would make a war with her very difficult. From our Pacific coast, her distance is as great as from New York to Europe, while from the Atlantic side the distance is about twice as great, or more. The people of Chile, of the best sort, are descendants of the early Spanish settlers, then come the native Indians, and then the race mixed from the two. Besides these, are considerable numbers of people from nearly every country of Europe, who have come to Chile to work or to follow commercial pursuits. Happily, the trouble is now over, and we hope to count them our friends, and not enemies.

Our Little Ones

The pretty little magazine for children "Our Little Ones and the Nursery," published by The Russell Publishing Co., 196 Summer St. Boston, shows an extra good number for February. Those who have not seen it can best judge of it by a list of the articles found in this number though of course this will give them no idea of the many beautiful pictures that illustrate the stories. This number has the "Old Garret," "the Mouse Frolic," "My Valentine," "a New Year Day in India," "a Hero of our Day," "You Boys," "Letters from Frank and Pet," "The Bright Eyes Family," "Ten Little Pigs," "Our Pet Cockatoo," "Mamma's Valentine," "The Ring Cake," "A Naughty Barn," "How Parrotts are Caught," etc. All are written in the entertaining and lively way that children like, and the illustrations are superb. It is a monthly at $1.50 a year.

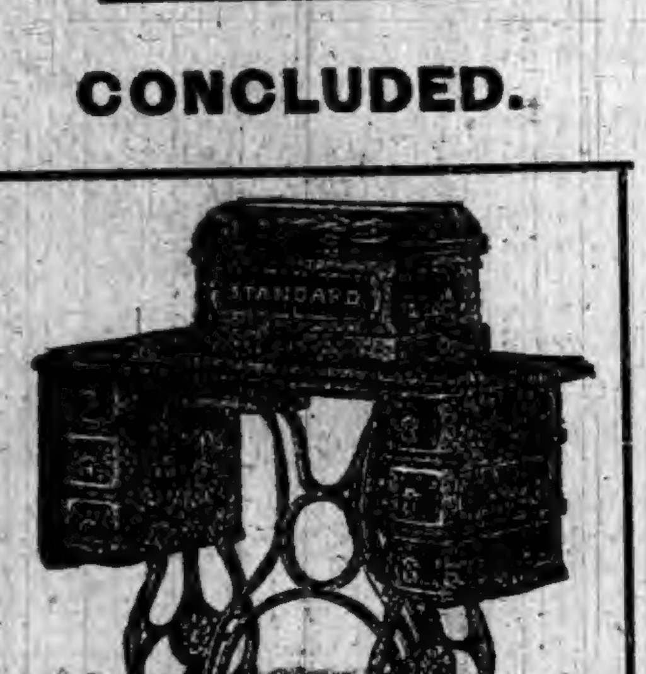
CHAPTER VII.

CONCLUDED.



WONDERFUL FIGURES. PRACTICAL RESULTS.

The rotary shuttle is the greatest labor saving invention of the age. Let us demonstrate.

You can do 50 per cent. more in any given time than on the old style machines.

The number of stitches ordinarily made by an old style shuttle is 400 a minute. The "Standard" will do 600 in the same time with less effort.

This saves—
200 stitches in one minute.
12,000 " " hour.
120,000 " " day of 10 hours.
720,000 " " week.
37,540,000 " " year.

NOW LOOK.

By this saving you get the following results at 15 stitches to the inch.
22 yards gained in one hour.
222 " " " day.
1,332 " " " week.
69,264 " or 39⅓ miles gained in 1 year

Ladies who do their own sewing cannot afford to waste the time shown by the foregoing figures by hanging on to the old style shuttle machines.

Ladies who earn their living by sewing cannot afford to lose the benefits of the time gained on the "Standard."

See the financial side of the question.

Stitching is worth one cent per yard.

222 yards gained in one day of 10 hours at one cent gives extra cash earned	$ 2.22
1,332 yards gained in 1 week gives extra cash earned	13.32
5,328 yards gained in one month, extra earnings (enough to pay for a "Standard"	53.28
69,264 yards gained in 1 year gives extra cash earned	692.64

$692.64 saved in one year on the "Standard."

A gain of 1,300 per cent. in one year on the cost of a "Standard." Where can you invest and make as much?

In Conclusion wish to say, the Sewing Machine Department will be under the supervision of Mr. R. A. YORK, a gentleman skilled in all the details of sewing machines. If you want a machine it will pay you to call before buying.

AUBURN AND VICINITY.

Some Reminiscences of its Early Days and Pioneer Citizens.

1858—Continued.

The case of Gregory McDougle is worthy of notice in detail both on account of the prominence he held in lawlessness and the gravity of the punishment inflicted by the Regulators. As will be seen his guilt was undoubted and the stern justice of his taking off struck panic into the hearts of his confederates in crime.

One of the nine arrested, McDougle was brought before the committee of the Regulators on the night of Jan. 25. To them whether voluntarily or by compulsion it is not known, he made confession and was placed under guard in secluded apartments while a committee of five men was appointed to examine witnesses, report evidence and make final disposition of his case. This committee found unmistakable proof that the prisoner had committed murder and recommended that at 2 p. m. Jan. 26, 1858 he being hung by the neck until dead.

This was at Ligonier, where the regulators had him confined and put on trial. He was ably defended by counsel, before this strange tribunal, and great excitement prevailed in the town. On the day of the decision the main street, Cavin, then narrower than now was filled with excited people, and orators both for and against the proposed hanging made able and impassioned addresses. The people were plainly divided in opinion, but those who clamored for the death sentence, appeared the most violent. At last, as a final hope for mercy, and to settle the terrible question and the responsibility for whatever might be the outcome, it was announced in a loud voice a vote by mass would be taken, and that all who favored the execution should fall back to one side of the street, and those who leaned to the side of mercy should stand on the other side. This was at last accomplished, although the crowd was so great, that only a small line was left in the middle of the street. A careful inspection up and down the line resulted in a decision that more were for hanging, that for a regular trial before a legal court. McDougle was informed of this, was put into a wagon, and followed by the regulators and vast numbers of people, was taken out to Diamond Lake, about four miles on the road from Ligonier to Albion, and there hanged to a tree. This spot is well known, and a few years ago, a tree was pointed out, as the one on which McDougle expiated his crimes.

It is said that before his execution, he rose calmly and with self-possession confessed to the theft of many horses, justified the committee and hoped "that they will succeed in their undertaking, and sort out all thieving, coining, counterfeiting and horse stealing," and his execution followed.

Malcom Burnam, another of the party arrested, chiefly criminated others. Wright, at Fairfield Center, DeKalb county, was robbed of goods according to his testimony, by two men, McCoy and Charles Smith. The goods were taken to Hill's Corners, four miles east of Lagrange, to a tavern kept by Drake & Woodward, whom he charged with dealing in stolen goods and horses. Burnam was taken to Indianapolis, tried and sent to the penitentiary for a term of two years.

Miles C. Payne turned state's evidence and his disclosures were of a startling character. He became a detective for the Regulators and by his zeal in bringing to justice his former associates won the confidence of the committee.

He stated that during two years of crime, he had stolen thirty-six horses, large quantities of goods and had dealt in counterfeit money to a great extent.

Although many arrests had been made, the leaders had not been taken and to share in the responsibility and add to the chances of their apprehension, a central committee was organized and the people were encouraged to form companies in different sections of the county.

At Auburn, on Jan. 4, 1858, a horse thief detecting society was formed with an enrollment of forty one persons. This was followed by organization of the Union Regulators, enrolling 24 men, Richland Rangers, 40 men, Fairfield Protectors and the Stafford Mutual Protection society, and perhaps others.

Enrolled in these law and order organization are found the names of many leading citizens of the county and some of the men reading this brief allusion to those times will recall their service as regulators in ridding the county of hardened, dangerous criminals.

Reuben J. Dawson was then judge of DeKalb circuit court and his record contains mention of convictions for larcenies, forgeries and concealment of stolen goods and with brief notice of two of these lawbreakers we close the chapter.

George T. Ulmer emigrated in 1835, from Ohio to Noble county and settled on a farm near the present town of Kendallville. In 1843, he returned to Ohio and appeared in the character of a religious exhorter. Afterward he emigrated to Lagrange county, this state and as a well-to-do farmer was a secret ally and confederate of blacklegs. When the Regulators were seen to be in earnest, Ulmer fled the country.

Perry Randolph was another of the gang whose home was a rendezvous and trading point for felonious commerce by felons and counterfeitors and the Regulators tried every effort to arrest Ulmer and Randolph, and C. P. Bradley, of Chicago, was hired to arrest and deliver them to the Sheriff of Lagrange at $500, for each. Randolph was first found, and shadowed to find Ulmer.

On July 9, Bradley and posse with full information started for Warren, Ohio, where they found and arrested their men and two days later turned them over to the Sheriff of Lagrange county.

Perry Randolph was indicted at the fall term of the Lagange circuit court on a charge of receiving and secreting stolen goods. At this term he filed an affidavit for a change of venue, which was granted, and the case was referred for trial to the ensuing term of the DeKalb court, where he was tried before Judge Dawson. The jury found him guilty and he was sentenced to the state prison for two years. When this term was served, it was expected that he would be liable to further prosecution and punishment.

Ulmer was indicted at the same term of the court at Lagrange on charge of having secreted stolen property, applied for and was given change of venue and was sent to Auburn, DeKalb county for trial.

Upon trial he was by the jury found guilty and was sentenced to the penitentiary for a term of five years. His attorneys filed a motion for an arrest of judgment for some defect in the indictment which was sustained by the court and he was held to bail in the sum of $2,000, for appearance next term at Lagrange circuit court. Having obtained security on the bond he was again arrested by Sheriff Cummings on another charge and returned to the Lagrange county jail, to await the spring term of court.

He was again tried on the first charge, found guilty and sentenced for seven years, and again obtained a new trial. He then consented to go on trial on the charges in the second indictment, was found guilty and sent up for the term of seven years. After serving his time, he settled down and became a respectable citizen in Ligonier, and for many years had a store on the east side of the street there. Later he helped to build the frame grist mill on the northeast side of the town.

A third party indicted for the same offense, threw himself on the mercy of the court and was sentenced to two years in prison at hard labor.

Although a death blow had been struck at lawless practices, yet evil doers were not wholly suppressed despite the hanging of McDougle and the imprisonment of Ulmer and Randolph, and down to the close of the war and after, the detective organizations were maintained in this county with occasional unexpected and startling arrests. But they have long been disbanded and the Regulators of 1858 have with their acts in furtherance of honesty and the detection and punishment of crime, passed into history.

(To be continued next week.)

Strong Witnesses.

Among the thousands of testimonials of cures by Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, is that of Nathan Allisons, a well-known citizen of Glen Rock, Pa., who for years had shortness of breath, sleeplessness pain in left side, shoulders, smothering spells, etc., one bottle of Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure and one box of Nerve and Liver Pills, cured him. Peter Jaquet, Salem, N. J., is another witness, who for twenty years suffered with heart disease, was pronounced incurable by physicians, death stared him in the face, could not lie down for fear of smothering to death. Immediatialy after using the New Cure he felt better and could lie down and sleep all night, and is now a well man. The New Cure is sold, also free book, by F. E. Davenport. 2

This is to certify that my little boy was taken with the measles and whooping cough, and was left unable to walk, and remained in this condition for three years. I tried three of the best physicians of the place, and found no relief. I then called on A. Y. Rosenbury and he had my boy on his feet in six weeks, and he is now able to run wherever he pleases. A. Y. Rosenbury:—Dear Sir. In response to your request for a certificate from me that I have been cured by you of lameness, I will say that I have never been a believer in the power of anyone to effect cures by the laying on of hands; but will also cheerfully add that since I was treated by you I have used no medicines of any description whatever on my knee, and have also steadily grown better of my lameness. I was at the time quite lame and compelled to use crutches I can now walk quite well and have long since discarded the crutches. Very respectfully, R. W. McBRIDE.

THE FLEETING NEWS

IS CAUGHT ON THE WING FOR OUR READERS.

Michigan Knights of Labor—A Ravisher Hung in Arkansas—Rich Gold Find in Colorado—Garza's Cry for Sympathy.

Hanged the Brute.

Miss Chloe Wright of Wilmar, Ark., the 16-year-old daughter of Captain A. J. Wright, was assaulted while on her way to school by Henry Beavers, a negro. When the news of the crime became known a posse was organized, which captured Beavers. He was taken to the Wright house, where he was identified by Miss Wright as her assailant. The posse then marched Beavers through the principal streets of the town, after which they took him to a piece of woods where he was hanged to a tree. His body was perforated with bullets, no less than sixty bullets being fired at the swinging body. The negro was only 17 years old. His brother, Will Beavers, was hanged a year ago for a similar crime. Miss Wright is badly injured, but will recover.

Michigan K. of L.

The annual convention of the Michigan State Assembly of the Knights of Labor opened at Grand Rapids under the Presidency of State Master Workman Henry I. Allen. In his annual address the Master Workman admitted that the Order had not grown in Michigan, but that on the contrary there had been a falling off. It therefore behooved the members of the Order, in view of the probable facts that the next two years would be fraught with events of great interest to the masses, to commence an earnest campaign in order that Michigan might be placed at the front in the fierce battle for wage-earners' rights. A committee was appointed to report upon ways and means of increasing the membership of the Order.

Garza's Cry for Sympathy.

San Antonio (Texas) special: Garza is still in the field. The latest reliable news of the revolutionist is contained in El Chianco, the first number of a local Spanish paper, which has just appeared as the avowed organ of the revolutionists. El Chinaco publishes a copy of what purports to be a lengthy letter sent by Garza to President Harrison. It is written under date of January 11, at La Siroeta, State of Tamaulipas, Mex. Garza's letter explains the patriotic purposes of the revolutionists to secure a republican form of government in Mexico and condemns the press for having placed him in the light of a bandit and a violator of the neutrality laws while a resident on American soil.

Millionaire Hopkins' Will.

The will of the millionaire, Moses Hopkins, has been filed for probate at San Francisco. It bequeaths three-fourths of the estate, worth $4,000,000, to his wife, Emily, whom he married only five years ago. One of his nephews is Timothy Hopkins, who is contesting Mrs. Hopkins-Searles' will. Moses leaves Tim $210,000 in cash and $190,000 to his wife and children. There are no bequests to charity. One curious feature of the will is that the provisiou requesting his burial in the Hopkins family plat at Sacramento, by the side of his brother, can't be carried out as Searles is the owner of the lot, and has sworn that no more of the Hopkins tribe shall lay their bones there.

Cable Car Accident.

Five persons were injured at Brooklyn, N. Y., in a runaway car on the Brooklyn Heights Cable railroad. The gripman, in trying to avoid running into a carriage, applied the brake too suddenly and the brake-chain broke. The car at the time was at the top of a steep hill on Montague street. The car started down the hill at a terrific pace. At a curve near the bottom of the hill the passengers were all knocked out of their seats. There were five in all and every one of them sustained injuries.

Rich Gold Find.

Boulder (Col.) special: Another big strike is reported from Copper Rock and it promises to be even larger than the Orphan Boy. It is called the Shady Side and is located a short distance south of the Orphan Boy. The vein is about four feet wide and pieces of ore from the top show streak of white quartz two inches wide that is so full of free gold that it is yellow in color. Every miner and prospector in town is outfitting for the new field.

A Surprise.

President Coate, of the Old Colony railroad, created a sensation at Boston recently by going before the committee on railroads and asking that steam railroads be granted the right to use electricity as a motive power.

Kentucky and the World's Fair.

The Kentucky Legislative World's Fair Committee has decided that Kentucky's exhibit shall not be open on Sunday, and that no whisky, even in original packages, shall be sold.

Grain Elevator Burned.

Fire destroyed the grain elevator of G. & W. Vaundelsworth at Athens, Mich. It contained 6,000 bushels of wheat and the loss is estimated at upwards of $10,000.

Against Free Coinage.

The Senate Committee on Finance has decided by a vote of seven to four to make an adverse report on Senator Stewart's bill for the free coinage of silver.

Big Spot on the Sun.

Prof. Holden telegraphs from Lick Observatory that an enormous spot is now visible on the sun.

Fraudulent Relics.

The British Museum has discovered that the two alleged Etruscan antiquities which it recently purchased at an enormously high figure, are mere Italian fakes, and are absolutely worthless.

Accepted Frenzel's Terms.

The employes of the Citizens' Street Railway Company at Indianapolis, decided to accept the terms offered by President Frenzel, and there will be no tie-up.

England's Exhibit.

London special: The papers of this city devote much attention to the report on the Chicago Columbian Exhibition made by Colonel J. H. Sadler, British Vice Consul in that city. The Standard says that the trading nations of all the world will compete at the Fair, and expresses the hope that British manufacturers and business men will realize this, adding that it hardly looks as if the British Government did enough, while France is affording £90,000, Brazil and Mexico each over £100,000, and England only £35,000. It will be a serious misfortune, the Standard says, if Great Britain is not adequately represented at the exhibition. It concludes its article by expressing the hope that the Government will not sacrifice the interests of commerce by applying for smaller space than is likely to be required by the large number of British exhibitors.

BRUTAL SLAVERS.

Emin Pasha Tells of Their Awful Work.

London special: A letter just received from Emin Pasha dated at Oswa, on the west coast of the Albert Nyanza, in August, tells a terrible tale of the doings of the African slave traders. He says that there is a fearful crop of them between James Gordon Bennett Mountain and the Ruwenzvi, while following the Omar Bochalid for six days, the letter says, he, Emin Pasha, found fifty-one emaciated corpses and thirty-nine bodies with broken skulls. Emin Pasha estimates that 1,200 persons have been carried away from that district into slavery. Postscript to this letter, dated at Kibiro, on the eastern coast of the Albert Nyanza, Emin Pasha vividly describes an earthquake which occurred there on August 11th. He says that the lake which up to the moment the earthquake was felt, had been quite calm, was turned into a cauldron by the fury of the subterranean agitation. Many people on the mountain slopes, he adds, were killed by falling rocks. Emin Pasha also says that the situation of affairs at Uganda and at Unyoro is menacing.

A rumor, it will be recalled, reached Europe recently to the effect that Emin Pasha was once more in serious difficulty in Central Africa. He was said to have been engaged in a series of sanguinary conflicts in the lake districts and his force was said to be in danger of annihilation. It was then said that people were very sorry for poor Emin, but that there was little prospect of another expedition being sent to his relief as was done when the news that Gordon's Lieutenant was no longer the Governor of the equator, but that a number of rebellious natives were at the helm.

IS IT TASCOTT?

Fred Fitzsimmons, the Murderer of Gilkinson, Said to Be Also the Murderer of Millionaire Snell.

Pittsburgh special: Police officials here think that Fred C. Fitzsimmons, the murderer of Detective Gilkinson, of this city, is either Tascott or had a hand in the Snell Murder. Fitzsimmons broke jail here several months ago, and is now under arrest in New Orleans. Officers are on their way to bring him back. While detectives were trailing the fugitive murderer it was discovered that Fitzsimmons was in Chicago when the Snell murder was committed, and left there about that time. Since then he would never go near Chicago and he told his friends many times that that was the only city in the United States that he would not visit. This leads to the belief that if he is not Tascott he was concerned in the Snell murder in some way. A special dispatch from New Orleans says Fitzsimmons, although talking freely about the murder of Gilkinson and the escape from jail, was greatly startled and grew silent when his possible identity as Tascott was mentioned.

A telegram from the Leader's correspondent at New Orleans states that the murderer Fitzsimmons, who recently killed Detective Gilkinson and made a remarkable escape from the Allegheny County Jail, cut his throat in the Parish Prison at New Orleans and will die. Detectives were about to start with Fitzsimmons for Pittsburgh.

IN THE DEADLY CHAIR.

Murderer McElvaine Cheerfully Walks to His Death.

The murderer, McElvaine, was executed by electricity at the Sing Sing Prison, New York. He went to his death calmly. When he was brought into the room he looked quickly about and then fixed his eyes on the chair. At a signal from the chief keeper he walked over to it unflinchingly and sat down. Then he stared straight ahead of him as the deputies quickly adjusted the straps and drew them tight. As the face strap was adjusted McElvaine grew excited and shouted, "let her go." Instantly the current of 1,600 volts was turned on and McElvaine was silenced. Steam began to rise from the salt water in the sponges on the electrodes. The current was turned off and then applied again as in the case of the previous executions at Sing Sing.

The first contact was at 11:49, and was continued for 50½ seconds. It was through the head and hands. The second contact was 43 seconds later, and was continued for 36 seconds. Between the two contacts sounds resembling groaning came from the victim's lips, but the physicians state that the man was dead and the sound was caused by reflex movements of the chest muscles. After the second contact there were no sounds or movements. The body was at once taken away to be dissected.

CHEAPER TO MOVE.

Railroads Will Not Elevate Tracks in Chicago.

Chicago special: Mayor Washburne has on his hands the fight of his life in attempting to make the railroads elevate their tracks in Chicago. President Hughitt of the Northwestern, has studied the question carefully and declares it will cost the road $65,000,000 to elevate its tracks. His estimate of the cost for all Chicago roads is $350,000,000. This enormous sum is the one argument of the railroads. But the Mayor has back of him an aroused public spirit and the railroads see that a desperate course must be adopted. At least ten railroads and perhaps more have determined they will not spend a cent to elevate their tracks. Already they are looking for an eligible site outside of Chicago and it was almost determined yesterday to buy a large tract on the borders of Indiana for immense joint yards. When the inevitable comes they intend moving their Chicago terminal to the proposed site and leave but enough surface track to carry the local business. It may be years before this is done, but if forced to a choice these roads will move instead of elevating their terminals.

Her Last Waltz.

Miss Kittie Shaw, daughter of a prominent physician of Pittsburgh, dropped dead while dancing at the reception given by the Pittsburgh Club in honor of the opening of the club house. Socially the Pittsburgh Club is the foremost organization of the city, and the reception was the society event of the season. At the close of the reception dancing was inaugurated by the young people, and was continued until the ball was suddenly brought to a close by the messenger of death. Miss Shaw was about twenty-three years of age and a great favorite in her set. She had danced frequently during the night and was dancing the final waltz when she suddenly threw up her hands and fell to the floor. She was carefully carried to the reception room and medical aid summoned, but before it arrived she was dead. The sad affair cast a gloom over the assemblage and the ball was immediately broken up.

A New Coast Defender.

For some time past Lieut. Marshall, attached to the torpedo station, at Newport, R. I., has been engaged in very close study of the torpedo construction and harbor defense. His latest invention is a submarine mine. In shape it is like a coffin and is made of sheet iron. Its total weight is 480 pounds and it contains a charge of gun cotton equivalent to 2,000 tons of dry gun cotton. The mine is so constructed that it may be fired from a battery on shore, or by contact, at will. A test was made from the wharf of the torpedo station and was for buoyancy and immersion and the result was satisfactory. The mine was exploded by electricity from shore.

AN EXAGGERATED REPORT

As to the Prevalence of Grip in Indiana and Michigan.

Special dispatches from numerous points in Michigan and Indiana indicate a slight cessation of the epidemic of grip that has prevailed throughout the States during the past two months. In a number of places, however, the disease is raging with unabated strength. At Ann Arbor there are about 1,800 cases. Many of the most prominent citizens of the town and a considerable number of students and professors at the State University are among the sufferers. Upwards of three thousand cases of the disease are said to be in the county in which Coldwater, Michigan, is located. Bloomington and Shelbyville, Ind., each report from 2,000 to 3,000 cases. At the latter place the death rate has been very heavy, comparatively, over 200 fatal results being reported. In the other towns, while the deaths are not so numerous as when the disease first appeared and are confined almost wholly to the aged, the mortality is still so large as to excite alarm. Physicians express the belief that the worst is over, and are confident of their ability to stay its ravages.

Died from Exposure.

Guthrie special: The recent cold weather has caused great suffering among the new settlers in the Indian country. Three deaths have already occurred, and several settlers are now in a precarious condition. Mrs. Tolford and Mrs. Warner, living in a tent near Purcell, in the Pottawattomie country, were found dead. They had died from exposure and insufficient clothing and food. E. J. Daniels, from Western Kansas, died from the same causes near Chundler, in the Iowa country. He leaves a wife and five children, the youngest being only 5 weeks old, the oldest 11 years. They are all ill, and in the most destitute condition.

Why They Were Discharged.

Cincinnati special: Several of the Adams Express Company's messengers who have been discharged claim the reason is the company wished them to join the Expressmen's Aid Society instead of belonging to the Express Messengers' Brotherhood. The men claim that L. C. Weir, manager of the western division of the company, is president of the Aid Society, and that J. Zimmerman, agent of the company in Chicago, is one of the executive committee. It is also claimed that Mr. Weir is one of the guarantee company's officers in which messengers are required to insure.

Insanity Dodge Won't Work.

During the trial of Joseph Levo, at Cincinnati, for the murder of Ida Kepp, his sweetheart, a great sensation was caused by the introduction of proof that Levo's father is alive and well. It has been understood that he committed suicide twenty-two years ago while insane. The defense claimed that they had witnesses to prove it. But the old man has been identified and acknowledged by his children. It is said the defendent is not insane and never has been. It is thought that Levo's conviction is sure.

Failed Again.

Berlin special: Another attempt was made to set fire to the royal castle at Koenigsberg. As in the previous attempt, the main tower was selected as the place in which to start the conflagration and the time chosen was about 8 o'clock in the evening. In both cases the incendiary poured kerosene over the woodwork of the tower and then set a light to it.

Dashed to Death.

Catcher Michael Logan, of the Scranton Base Ball Club, made a misstep in chasing some roughs who had stoned him and two companions at Scranton, Pa., and tumbled 100 feet from the Delaware, Lackawana and Western railroad bridge into the gully beneath, being dashed to instant death.

County Treasurer Short.

The examiners of the accounts of the ex-Treasurer of Putnam County, Ohio. are finding many irregularities in the accounts. Many tax receipts found in the hands of tax payers are uncredited on the books. There appears to be a discrepancy of several thousand dollars.

Hyer Makes Good His Escape.

Richard Hyer, who wast taken East from San Francisco some time ago for embezzlement and who escaped from Detective Dalton en route, near Fort Wayne, was in Oakland recently. It is believed that he has now gone to Australia.

"Get-Rich-Quick" Scheme Fails.

The National Three Year Benefit Order of Boston, has passed into the hands of a receiver.

Loss By an Iron Works Fire.

The destruction of the National Malleable Iron Works, at Indianapolis, by fire, caused a loss of $60,000.

MR. BLAINE DRAWS OUT.

IS NOT NOW A CANDIDATE FOR THE PRESIDENCY.

His Formal Letter of Withdrawal Sent to Chairman Clarkson—Various Views as to How It Will Concern Other Possible Candidates—Political Gossip.

Effect of the Declaration.

Blaine is not a candidate for the Presidency. He has made this official announcement in the following letter to Chairman Clarkson, of the Republican National Committee:

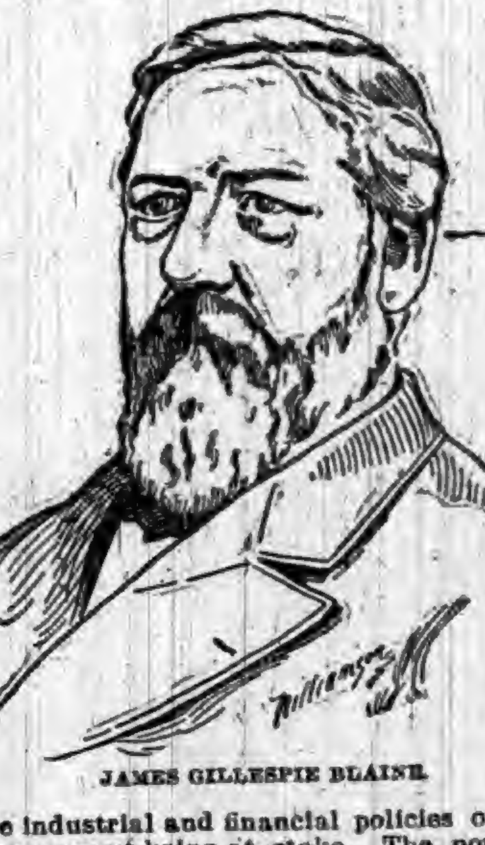
WASHINGTON, D. C.

HON. J. S. Clarkson, Chairman of the Republican National Committee.

DEAR SIR—I am not a candidate for the Presidency, and my name will not go before the Republican National Convention for the nomination. I make this announcement in due season.

To those who have tendered me their support I owe sincere thanks, and am most grateful for their confidence.

They will, I am sure, make earnest effort in the approaching contest, which is rendered especially important by reason of the industrial and financial policies of the Government being at stake. The popular decision on these issues is of great moment and will be of far-reaching consequences. Very sincerely yours, JAMES G. BLAINE.



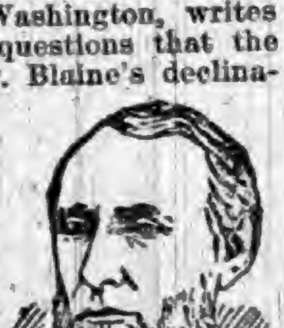
JAMES GILLESPIE BLAINE.

W. B. ALLISON.

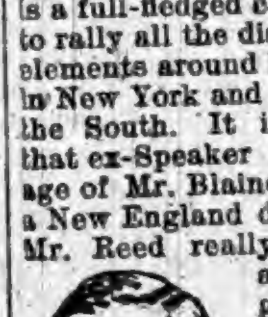
In speaking of his withdrawal Mr. Blaine said: "I don't suppose any man who has once sought the office can truthfully say he doesn't care for it. I confess I would like to be President, but I will never again risk my health and life in seeking it. The office of Secretary of State is a broad enough field for me during the rest of my public career."

Democrats agree with practical unanimity that Blaine not being in it, nothing can prevent President Harrison's renomination, and Republican Congressmen are mostly of the same opinion. Members of the administration naturally will not discuss the situation for publication.

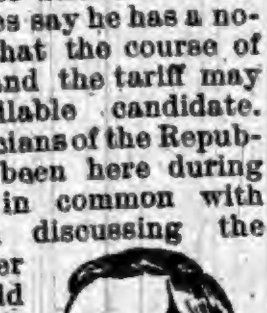
FAVORITE SONS TO THE FRONT.



S. M. CULLOM.

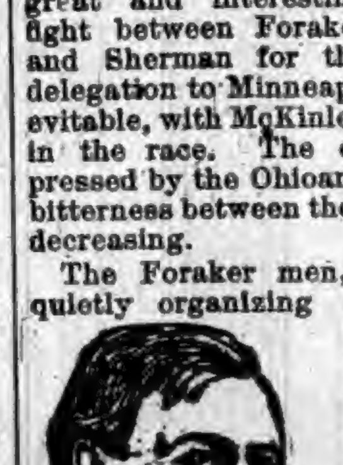


JOHN SHERMAN.



J. B. FORAKER.

While no one in Washington, writes our correspondent, questions that the ultimate effect of Mr. Blaine's declination will be the renomination of President Harrison, the immediate result will be to start up all the favorite son candidacies. Senator Cullom's expectation of a Cullom delegation from Illinois, with some support from the new States in the Northwest, has already been set forth, and it is said the Illinois Senator will now start in as an avowed candidate and will have his name presented to the Minneapolis convention. Senator Allison has not got to this point yet, but in the end he will probably give the Iowa delegation permission to name him. Gen. Alger, in spite of Michigan's divided electoral vote, is a full-fledged candidate. He may try to rally all the disaffected anti-Harrison elements around him, and look for votes in New York and the East as well as in the South. It is more than probable that ex-Speaker Reed will take advantage of Mr. Blaine's declination to seek a New England delegation for himself. Mr. Reed really has the Presidential ambition and wants to get in training for a nomination. The only possible candidacy that excites much attention is John Sherman's. Mr. Sherman himself is a stanch supporter of President Harrison's administration. But Senator Sherman's colleagues say he has a notion that the course of legislation on silver and the tariff may make him an available candidate. Some of the Ohio politicians of the Republican faith who have been here during the last week have in common with everybody else been discussing the question as to whether or not Mr. Blaine would withdraw. The nomination of Mr. Sherman at Columbus in January left some ill-feeling on the part of the Foraker people to the administration, and it was generally supposed that a great and interesting fight between Foraker and Sherman for the delegation to Minneapolis would be inevitable, with McKinley only secondarily in the race. The opinion lately expressed by the Ohioans shows that the bitterness between the factions has been decreasing.



JEREMIAH RUSK.

The Foraker men, who have been quietly organizing since the recent Senatorial contest to control the Ohio delegation to Minneapolis, are badly broken up over the announcement. They are knocked out of the fight by the loss of a candidate. The Foraker following unquestionably had as their object the nomination of Blaine or anybody to beat Harrison, and the effect of the withdrawal at this time may allay the bitter contest promised over the selection of delegates.

Blaine's withdrawal is exciting politicians all over the country, and both Democrats and Republicans are expressing themselves freely as to the outcome.

As to Senator Allison, a Des Moines correspondent sends a telegram, saying: "There is no one here who is in position to speak for Senator Allison, but it is known that when he was in Iowa during the campaign he spoke in terms of high praise of the administration of President Harrison, and expressed himself as favoring his renomination. His friends in this city say they think that there is scarcely any question that Senator Allison will give Harrison cordial support for the nomination, and that Iowa will go to Minneapolis ready to vote for him for renomination."

W. Q. GRESHAM.

A prominent Minnesota Republican says: "It is difficult to foretell what the Republicans of the State will do under the changed condition wrought by the publication of Mr. Blaine's letter, but Mr. Blaine's withdrawal will probably add quite a number to those who favor the renomination of the President. Judge Gresham has always been very favorably regarded by the Minnesota Republicans, and it would not be surprising should a very large proportion, if not a majority of them, transfer their allegiance to the distinguished jurist, now that Blaine is no longer a possibility."

Henry C. Payne, Chairman of the Wisconsin Republican State Central Committee, said that if a new man is to be nominated it may be Secretary Rusk. Since it became generally understood that Blaine was to decline, Rusk's name, he says, has been very prominently mentioned in the East, and now with Blaine's positive withdrawal many of Blaine's strongest supporters, he thinks, will favor Rusk.

Some of Senator Cullom's friends on being interviewed expressed themselves as being confident that the Illinois Senator would receive the solid backing of his State at Minneapolis, and would be the leading candidate before the convention. One of the Senator's supporters offered to bet $500 against $200 that Senator Cullom would be nominated at Minneapolis and $250 more that he would win his bet.

Senator McMillan, of Michigan, said: "General Alger is now a candidate for the Republican nomination and will go into the contest with the solid delegation from his own State, with support from many other States and with a stronger following than many people and better chance of success than most people think for."

It is the unanimous opinion among Republicans at Indianapolis that the letter takes Blaine entirely out of the question as a Presidential quantity and leaves the President with a practically clear field for the party nomination.

Minor Medical Mention.

DR. HAMMOND reports that during the past ten years seventy men have died suddenly from the strain of running after street cars.

ATLANTA, Ga., claims to have the most interesting natural curiosity in a man 122 years of age. Hiram Lester was 7 years old when this country was born and has a son 70 years of age.

IN a small village in France a woman died in labor. There was no physician present, but a knowing priest performed an operation by which he brought a living child into the world. This exhibition of presence of mind and expertness, resulting in the saving of one life was, however, contrary to man-made law. So the priest had to be arrested and convicted for illegal practice and was fined fifteen francs. The States of this Union are already loaded down with just such legislation, and the only reason why it is not regarded as a general nuisance is because it is not as punctiliously enforced as in France.

FRENCH physicians report a curious and almost unexampled disorder in a woman only 21 years of age. She looks as though she were 70. She is said to have "a decrepitude of the cutaneous system." In other respects she is doing quite well. The wrinkling of the skin and aging of her countenance began soon after she received a great fright, and would therefore seem to be due to a sort of paralysis of nerve centers which control the nutrition of the skin of the face. No treatment thus far tried has been of any service to improve her appearance, and her mental condition is suffering from worriment over it.

MR. KENNAN, who braved indescribable hardships of all sorts in his travels all over Russia, says: "The vilest stuff I ever tasted was a stew offered me by Prince Djordjadzi while I was his guest in the Caucasian Mountains. It was made from the feet of cattle, including the hoofs. The taste and smell of the stable pervaded the dish." Mr. Kennan says that reindeer moss is very nutritious, but too hard of digestion for the human stomach. The Koraks feed it to the reindeer, and after he has partly digested it they kill the animal and take it for their own food. It tastes slimy and clayey, but it is heartily relished by those who like it.

TESTS of human endurance, which have rather more of sensational than practical and useful influence, continue to be made—doubtless because somebody finds it possible to make something out of it. In London a fasting match was won by Mr. Jacques, who lived without food for fifty days, thus breaking the record. He lived on air and eleven gallons of water. In Detroit half a dozen men tried to go a week without sleep. Only one of them succeeded. Another went five days, and half of them three days. It is reported that they were not apparently harmed by the experiment. In New York three men did over 1,400 miles on bicycles in six days, the first covering 1,468 miles with only twelve hours' sleep.—Dr. Foote's Health Monthly.

ROYAL RANGER RALPH;

—OR—

The Waif of the Western Prairies.

BY WELDON J. COBB.

CHAPTER XXV—Continued.

The Indian princess had extinguished the light. Darrel stepped forward and called her name. She stepped slowly into view and peered suspiciously into his face. Then she siezed his hand impulsively.

"The ranger's friend!" she cried.

"Yes."

"Then you escaped from the Crow, as my father promised?"

"I did. Have you heard from the ranger?"

"No. But he is alive and on the trail of his enemies."

"How do you know this?"

"The mountain hermit says it must be so, although he has not been able to find him."

"It was he I saw with you a few moments since?" asked Darrel.

"Yes. How comes the ranger's friend here?"

Briefly, Darrel informed her of his adventures since last they met. She told him of being at the cave when Despard had come to demand Inez Tracey's fortune. She had secured the casket of jewels, and had become lost in the hermit's place of abode in the mountains.

When she found her way to liberty, amid its intricacies, the ensuing day, she found that her father's tribe had gone.

"And was the girl Inez a prisoner with them?" asked Darrel anxiously.

"Yes."

She went on to say that she had started after them, when she came across the old hermit Walford. He had lost trace of Ranger Ralph, but was himself determined to rescue the daughter of his old friend Tracey. Together they followed the tribe. Two days previous they came up with a wounded warrior of the Modocs. He told them that a portion of Despard's band had pursued and overtaken the Modocs. A fierce conflict had ensued, resulting in the utter defeat of the Indians. The outlaws had wrested a large treasure from Shadow Snake and forced him to fly.

"And the girl—Inez—the Modocs took her with them?"

"No."

"The outlaws rescued her?"

"Yes."

"Then the camp on the mountains——"

"Is theirs. They have the girl with them, and are seeking their old leader, Despard."

Darrel Grey became greatly excited at this intelligence.

"And the hermit?" he asked.

"I traced the outlaws here, and visited the neighborhood of their camp an hour since."

"You saw Inez?"

"I saw the covered wagon in which she is. I returned to the hermit. He decided to rescue her."

"How?"

"By strategy. He will tell me nothing, except that he believes he can secure her. Stay! you are not going?"

"Yes."

"To the outlaws camp?"

"I must. I will aid Walford."

"You may defeat all his plans."

"No. I will act with the utmost caution."

A minute later he was on his way toward the point in the valley where a narrow path led to the cliffs above.

Meantime, Walford had preceded him at some distance. The old hermit was certainly an adept at disguises, for he presented no familiar resemblance to his natural character.

He reached the cliffs and looked searchingly around him. Some distance away he saw the reflection of a campfire and made his way toward it at once. As he neared it he could make out a score of figures and a covered wagon.

For a moment he paused, engaged in deep thought, as if to decide on a definite plan of action. Then he placed the reed he bore in his hand to his lips. Immediately a wild, weird strain awoke the silent echoes of the scene.

At the camp Despard and Danton had just been welcomed with the most extravagant exhibitions of delight.

The entire band started in suspicion and alarm as the strange music reached their hearing.

"What is that?" demanded Despard.

The others seized their guns and stood on the defensive. Nearer and nearer came the music. Into the open space where the camp was a strange form suddenly emerged.

At him the outlaws stared in the profoundest surprise. To all seeming he was some demented creature so engrossed in his music as not to notice them. It appeared as if he would walk past them and on through the woods. A suspicious look came into Despard's face.

"This means something," he whispered to Danton.

"You think so?"

"I do."

"What?"

"Treachery—a spy—a trap."

"I think not. He seems to be some crazy woodsman. He don't even look at us."

"Probably all assumed."

"I'll find out."

Danton caught the old man by the arm.

"Stop," he ordered.

The disguised Walford halted, and stared at him wonderingly.

"What do you want?" he asked.

"Who are you?"

"The king of the woods."

"Well, what are you doing here?"

"Getting ready for my show."

"What show?"

Walford tapped the box on his shoulder.

"Have you got a show there?" asked Danton."

"Yes."

"He's stark mad," said Danton to Despard.

"I don't know that," replied the latter. "See here, stranger; who sent you here?"

"No one."

"You're a spy."

"Am I? Nobody ever called me that before," replied Walford, innocently. "See here gentlemen," he called, "I am about to begin the greatest show on earth. Admission free. Gather around and see if the old king of the woods ain't a regular professional."

And executing a caper that seemed to remove all suspicions of his sanity, Walford flung his hat on the ground and faced the amused and curious outlaws.

CHAPTER XXVI.

THE RESCUE.

So fantastic and unreal were the actions of the hermit that Despard had evidently abandoned his suspicions of his being a spy. Like Danton, he began to believe that their strange visitor was some one of those demented creatures often met with on the frontier.

The hermit had opened his hat and had taken from it several small packages.

"The first thing will be a balloon ascension," he said.

He had produced and lighted a small alcohol lamp, and he allowed the hot air it produced to ascend into a fine rubber object he had in his hand.

"Watch the balloon, gentlemen," he said, "and you'll see it ascend and explode in midair."

The bag began to fill, and finally arose in the air. Every eye was lifted to watch its course, and the hermit prepared for his final move in his clever game to delude the bandits. The balloon arose a few feet. Suddenly it exploded.

Simultaneous howls of pain arose from the throng. Every man seemed gone wild suddenly. The balloon, as Walford had intended, in exploding had released some cayenne pepper, which had fallen into the eyes of the gaping bandits. Blinded and in pain, they were for the most part helpless.

Despard and Danton, however, had escaped the general suffering, as they had watched the hermit at a little distance. As Walford noticed this, he flung a package of powder over the lamp. Immediately a dense vapor spread over the scene.

"The girl—the wagon!" cried Despard. "This is all a trick of our enemies. See, the man has disappeared!"

The hermit had certainly left the spot where last they had seen him. Despard and Danton made a simultaneous rush for the wagon. At its rear stood the man they sought.

Danton seized him by the arm and held him firmly. Despard tore aside the canvas and peered into the vehicle.

"The girl is gone!" he cried.

Walford started, fully as much amazed as the bandits.

"Gone?" echoed Danton, incredulously.

"Yes. It was all a plot. Who has taken her?" he demanded of Walford. "Tell me, or I will kill you."

"I do not know."

"You do—it was some friend of yours."

In his rage, Despard dealt the hermit a blow that felled him to the ground insensible. Then he rushed back to his men. By this time they had got the pepper out of their eyes, but were still in deep pain. Hastily, Despard explained what had occurred. He divided the men into parties, and sent them out in search of the missing Inez.

He himself and Danton, with several of the men, also started on the quest. They learned later what had really occurred.

Darrel Grey had rescued Inez Tracey.

He had reached the bandit camp, and while the hermit engaged the attention of the outlaws, had hurried her away. He went direct to the ravine. The happy Inez did not delay their flight by questioning him. Together they reached the place where White Fawn awaited them. Darrel hastily explained all that had occurred.

"We must not remain here," said the Modoc princess.

"Is it not a safe retreat?"

"No."

"Why not?"

"We will be pursued."

"But the hermit."

"He will care for himself. Come."

She led the way rapidly down the ravine.

"Look!" she said, after they had proceeded some distance. "We are pursued."

They could see hurrying forms behind them.

"We must reach the cliffs," said White Fawn.

She finally found a path leading from the valley. It was a toilsome ascent, but they finally gained the top of the cliff. It proved to be a kind of natural fortification. On the other side a stream flowed fifty feet below.

There was no way of going on. They must remain where they were, or retreat the way they had come.

"We are in a trap," murmured White Fawn.

"The outlaws may not trace us here," remarked Darrel.

They crouched behind some rocks and waited. White Fawn watched the ravine below. It was just beginning to get light. Day was breaking. She saw several dusky forms coming up the narrow mountain path.

"We are pursued," she said. "Let the Ranger's friend prepare for a desperate conflict."

CHAPTER XXVI.

THE ESCAPE.

There was little doubt but that the outlaws would soon discover the fugitives. Several of them were coming directly up the path the latter had pursued in their flight, and must inevitably come upon Darrel and his companions.

The breaking light of day showed a grim determination in the face of the Modoc princess.

"You are armed?" she asked of Darrel.

"No, my revolver was taken away from me by Despard."

The princess handed him a small revolver, and herself poised a small rifle she bore over the edge of the natural fortification behind which they were concealed. This commanded a view of the path leading up to the place.

"We must hold them at bay," said White Fawn determinedly.

"They may not find us."

"Yes; they are coming directly up the path."

There was a brief spell of silence. Through the interstices of their rocky barricade, the three beleaguered fugitives watched the advance of their enemies. One party was searching the ravine for them. Despard led them. The other divison of the outlaws, headed by Danton, consisted of half a dozen men, and these were rapidly nearing the crest of the cliff.

Crack!

The rifle in the hands of White Fawn gave forth a sharp report. Its echoes ended with the yell of a wounded bandit fifty feet below. Instantly the bandits knew where their enemies were located. They disappeared behind sheltering rocks as if by magic.

"You have revealed our hiding-place to them," said Darrel.

"They would have come upon us, and got still nearer if we had not done so," replied White Fawn. "Take my rifle and fire if they make any advance."

"Where are you going?"

"To see if there is not some means of escape from here."

The Indian princess crept cautiously in the shelter of the rocks toward the other edge of the cliff.

Darrel watched the mountain path and ravine closely. He saw Danton retreat cautiously to the valley. Here he joined Despard and his party, and a close consultation was held. They seemed to be devising some plan to surround and capture the fugitives. Darrel's observations were interrupted by the appearance of White Fawn.

"What have you discovered?" he asken.

"A means of escape; But it is a perilous one."

"In what way?"

"We must lower ourselves from cliff to cliff, to the other side of the valley."

"Then let us not delay."

"Some one must remain here to keep back the outlaws and give time for the escape."

Darrel glanced anxiously at Inez, but said, "I will do that."

"Come," said White Fawn to Inez.

The latter cast a tender look at her brave lover, and followed the Indian girl.

Darrel's attention was now entirely centered on the foes he was to keep at bay. He had confidence in White Fawn, and knew that her long familiarity with frontier life constituted her a safe guardian of the woman he loved.

Despard and his men, to Darrel's satisfaction, did not apparently suspect the attempt to escape. They appeared instead, to be combining their forces for a general assault on the summit of the cliff, where the lone defender was stationed.

Several times they started boldly forward up the torturous mountain path. Darrel's steady fire, however, dismayed them, and drove them to cover again. Each onslaught brought them nearer to the fort of rocks, and this fact the young scout noted with some anxiety.

A glance behind him showed no sign of his recent companions. White Fawn and Inez had disappeared, and he hoped they had found a means of escape to the valley in safety.

Meantime it had begun to rain, and a dim mist began to gather over the ravine. It partially shut out the position of his enemies, and he feared would enable them to make a secret advance to his stronghold.

In this his fears were not groundless, but the climax came in a different manner from what he had apprehended. It seemed that the bandit leader had, a few moments previous, been made aware of the exact position of affairs. A man he had sent to reconnoiter had returned very much excited.

"Well, what have you learned?" asked Despard.

"That there's only one person in the fort up yonder."

"Then the girl who escaped?"

"I don't know where she is; she ain't in the place there."

Despard looked perplexed. He had believed that, whoever was defending the fort, the rescued Inez was also there.

"If there is only one person," he said to Danton, "the girl has been sent away."

"Where?"

"Perhaps there is a descent to the other side of the valley."

Danton started.

"Ha! I never thought of that," he muttered.

"And whoever is in the fort is simply holding us at bay to cover the girl's escape."

"What shall we do?"

"Some of us hurry around to that side of the ravine."

"We can't do that, Captain," spoke the man who had reported the state of affairs.

"Why not?"

"Because, we're in a bad fix."

"A bad fix! What do you mean, man?"

"Indians."

"What?"

"Yes, Captain: Modocs. I saw them in the valley from over yonder."

Despard looked very much concerned.

"Are there many of them?"

"Two to one against us."

"Shadow Snake's men."

"They look like it. I saw them before the mist came down upon us."

Despard and Danton discussed the situation for some time. They finally decided to continue their ascent, but in a line beyond the fort. Their enemy did not notice their movements, or did not care to attack them, for their progress was uninterrupted.

They reached the eminence, and Despard at once began to investigate the other side of the cliff. In his wanderings he came to a place where some twisted grape vines showed signs of a recent passage from rock to rock. A bit of cloth torn by a bramble from a dress told him that Inez must have fled this way.

"We're on the right trail," he said to Danton, confidently.

"You think the girl has gone this way?" asked the latter.

"I am sure of it."

"But there seems no way to reach the valley."

"Except by careful climbing from rock to rock."

"Can you go that way in safety?"

"The girl seems to have done so."

"Very well; we can try it."

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

His Dire Revenge.

During the halcyon days of the roller-skating rink I was in the ticket office of a rink in Louisville when a man came in and asked if he could hire the floor for one hour. It was about 10 o'clock in the forenoon, and, after some figuring, he was told that he could have it for $10.

"I want to bring a friend here and teach him to roll," he explained, "and I want it understood that no one is to raise a hand to help."

This was agreed to, and he paid the money and went away. When he returned, ten minutes later, he had his friend with him, and he selected one pair of rollers, strapped them to the man's feet, and after a little led him out to the center of the floor, where there was a single column reaching up to the roof. Here he loosened his hold, stood back with folded arms, and said:

"James Burns, you are a cheat and a liar! You lied me out of $50 a year ago!"

"Look here, Sam, what does this mean?" demanded the other, who was clinging to the post for support.

"It means that the hour for my revenge has come at last! James Burns, you are a scoundrel! Yes, sir; you are a contemptible, miserable wretch!"

"You—you must be crazy!" gasped the victim, as he recovered from a "slew" made by one of his feet.

"No, sir! Far from it! I planned this to get revenge. You are a low-lived miserable cur! Words fail to express my contempt for you!"

The other made a move at him, but "slewed" right and left, and came near going down. He got a new grip on the post, and stood there with his legs wobbling and trembling. The other steadfastly regarded him for a long minute, and then exclaimed:

"Liar, vilifier, slanderer—I defy and spit upon you!"

He advanced and spat, and then turned on his heel and walked away. The other was so mad and helpless that he shed tears, and he offered an employe $5 to come and help him sit down and get his skates off. This was against the bargain, however, and no one went near him. He got so mad that he decided to try it alone, but the instant he let go of the post one foot shot one way and the other in a contrary direction, and he came down like a block of stone. After ten minutes' work he got his skates off, and then he crawled across the floor on hands and knees. His companion had disappeared, but as he was ready to follow after him, he waved his hand to us, and said:

"I will hunt him! I will find him! I will skin him, and use his skin for fish-bait to catch bullheads with!"—New York Sun.

Great Place for Lilies.

Twelve miles north of Norwich, Conn., is one of the most wonderful lily ponds in all America. It is a lake one mile in diameter, and so closely grown with lilies that during blossoming time it is hard to get a glimpse of the water. When the wind is strong and the lilies are open the perfume is perceptible a quarter of a mile away. So thick are the lilies and in such tangled masses that it is almost impossible to propel a boat in the pond, and the lily gatherers wade for them in rubber boots. Not only are the lilies very plentiful, but the blossoms are of a deeper hue than in other ponds.

J. C. HENRY, Prop'r,

The River of the Great American Desert.

The few rivers of the American desert are as strange and as treacherous as its winds. The Colorado is the only large stream of them all, and the only one which behaves like an ordinary river. It is always turbid—and gets its Spanish name, which means the "Red," from the color of its tide. The smaller streams are almost invariably clear in dry weather; but in a time of rain they become torrents not so much of sandy water as of liquid sand! I have seen them rolling down in freshets with waves four feet high which simply sand in flow; and it is a fact that the bodies of those who are drowned at such times are almost never recovered. The strange river buries them forever in its own sands. All these rivers have heads; but hardly one of them has a mouth! They rise in the mountains on the edge of some happier land, flow away out into the desert, making a green gladness where they touch, and finally are swallowed up forever by the thirsty sand. Mojave, for instance, is a beautiful little stream, clear as crystal through the summer, only a foot or so deep, but some two hundred feet wide. It is fifty or sixty miles long, and its upper valley is a narrow paradise, green with tall grasses and noble cotton woods that recall the stately elms of the Connecticut Valley. But presently the grass gives place to barren sand-banks, the hardier trees, whose roots bore deep to drink, grow small and staggling; and at last the river dies altogether upon the arid plain, and leaves beyond as bare a desert as that which borders its bright oasis-ribbons on both sides.—C. F. Lummis, in February St. Nicholas.

AN OCEAN cable now connects Florida with the Bahama Islands.

THE great Diamond Match Company reports a profit last year of 13½ per cent.

THE latest from Blaine is that he will resign, on account of ill health, and go to a warmer climate.

ANOTHER New York murderer executed by electricity. Died quick, and left no report as to how he liked to be "electrocuted."

THE profits of Flint, Walling & Co., of Kendallville, last year were $20,000. Surely it will not be claimed that McKinley did this.

THE present congress will have to practice economy whether it chooses to or not. The last congress didn't leave much money to spend.

BLAINE's refusal to run, means either that his health is too poor and he knows it, or that his party is likely to be defeated, and he knows it.

A TURK in Grand Rapids, has taken out naturalization papers, and will be an American citizen. He is a merchant, dealing in Turkish goods.

HOTEL ROYAL, New York City, burned Sunday evening, and about twenty perished. If this thing keeps on no one but a tramp is safe from hotel fires.

CLAIMED that a number of Indians have been found in a Montana cave asleep, "hibernating," or wintering like bears, etc. Pretty fishy story.

NEW YORK democrats are divided as to whether they ought to hold their state convention Feb. 22, the Cleveland men thinking it should be later.

THAYER, who has been holding on to the governor's office in Nebraska, a year or so after his time was out, has acquired the title of "Stay Thayer."

CLEVELAND has been spending a few weeks fishing near New Orleans. As he returned north, every town he passed through gave him a rousing welcome.

RECEIPTS from all sources in the month of January, were five millions less than the expenses. Republican administrations are such "able financiers."

THE Connecticut legislature is having a tough time. As they can't agree, the republicans went out, leaving the democrats to organize and run what was left.

EX-SENATOR INGALLS says we don't need a navy. There is some truth in this. We don't need a big one, but we should have a few ships that are first-class.

MORE rich strikes of gold have been found at the new diggings in Colorado. Some of the rock will yield $12,000 to the ton. There is great excitement, of course.

ANOTHER big trust, with millions behind it. The great electric light companies have combined. This includes the Ft. Wayne, the Thomas-Houston and the Edison.

WITH Blaine out of the race, Harrison has no opposition, but the little boomlets of Alger, Gresham, Allison, McKinley, and about a dozen others, who hope to be dark horses.

THE candidates for president on the democratic side, mentioned so far, are: Gov. Gray, Cleveland, Hill, Gorman, Gen Palmer, and Judge Craig of the Illinois supreme bench.

CHICAGO and St Louis are expecting to have an air line railroad to connect them, 250 miles long; trains to run by electricity at the rate of 100 miles an hour. Survey has begun.

MANY prominent men think Blaine would have been the nominee had he staid in the race. Others think not, and some think the convention will meet and choose him anyway.

CLEVELAND will deliver an oration at Ann Arbor Feb. 22, the students having selected him for that occasion. There will be a big meeting and special trains will bring people from all over the state.

MASON J. NIBLACK speaker of the Indiana House of Representatives for the last two legislatures, is a candidate for governor, So is Gilbert Shanklin of the Evansville Courier, who was secretary of state several years ago.

GOV. BOYD, has at last taken his seat as governor of Nebraska, a place which "Stay Thayer," the former republican governor has held for a year without a shadow of right. Boyd took his place Monday, and "Ah Thayer" went out.

THE Shelbyville democrat has the announcement of a large list of candidates for the various county offices. All of them read "Subject to the decision of the democratic primary election." It will thus be seen that another staunch democratic county favors a choice by all the voters.

THE Ohio legislature has passed a resolution asking John Sherman to take action in the U. S. senate, to ascertain of Senator Brice is entitled to his seat. As there are a number of republican U. S. senators with poorer titles than Brice has, it is likely that Sherman will not open up the matter.

THE Dispatch finds fault that congress is in session at $4,603 a day and does nothing. That is 3½ millions a day cheaper than the republican congress that preceded it. They did no work, except to appropriate money at the rate above named. We are ready to compare this congress with the last at any time.

HON. ROBERT LOWRY is announced as a candidate on the state ticket for appellate judge of this, the Ft. Wayne district. The judge is by nature and long training, a highly desirable person for place, and he should receive the united support of every democrat in the district. Indeed, we believe there is no other candidate.

JOHN SHERMAN a few years ago, got an "anti-trust" bill enacted. It is not enforced, never has been, although trusts and combines are numerous. It was only made for election purposes, to make people believe they were opposed to trusts But as these protected trusts, contribute money for campaign work, they are not likely to be disturbed.

THE Chilean court, has at last brought in its verdict as to the men who attacked and killed our seamen. Carlos Gomez got 920 days for "wounding" William Turnbull, and Jose Anumado got for same; Frederico Rodriguez got only 140 days for "wounding" C. W. Riggin, though the "wounds" killed both Turnbull and Riggin. Pretty thin justice.

JUDGE WOODS' confirmation by the senate is still unsettled, though undoubtedly he will be confirmed in the end. It will not do for Harrison to let him be defeated, as it would throw a still darker shadow over the record of the Harrison campaign in Indiana. Woods and Wanamaker, were both too useful to be left out in the cold. Will Dudley get the next plum? If not, then why not?

BLAINE has at last written a letter about the presidency. He says he will not be a candidate, and that his name will not go before the convention. If Blaine is in earnest about this, it means a re-nomination for Harrison. It makes little difference however, as the people will not be likely to elect any man who favors higher tariff duties out of the pockets of the poor, in favor of the rich.

County Committee Meeting.

The committeemen from the various precincts of the county met at the room in the Draggoo building, south of the public square, on Saturday, Feb 6, at 2 p. m., pursuant to the call of Chairman Ab Kelley, as published in the COURIER. They were called to order by Mr. Kelley, and J. F. Shuman, the secretary, read the call. The several precincts were called in order to see if all were present. All responded but south Smithfield, Troy, Stafford, west Franklin, north Jackson and No. 5 in Wilmington. It was decided by a vote that the delegate or delegates present from a given township should cast the entire vote of the township. During the consideration of this, remarks were made for or against by Blackburn, W. H Leas, D. Tomlinson, Fred Waterman, I. N. Cool, W. J. Frederick and others. The call of precincts brought out but two candidates for chairman, J. Wm. Wagner, of Garrett, and Beeks Erick, of Spencerville. The call for the votes was then made, each township having gone into seperate caucus to decide whom it would support, As each township was called the chairman of its committee arose and announced its vote. The result was: Wagner, 11½ and Erick 21½, and Erick was declared elected. Mr. Erick then took the gavel and Mr. Kelley retired. On motion of Thomas McNamara, a vote of thanks was given Mr. Kelley for the able and impartial way be had administered this important position. I. N. Cool was then elected vice-chairman, there being but one candidate, and W. H Leas having made a motion that the secretary cast the entire vote of the committe for him This was done. Motion of F. C. Waterman that chairman select his secretary; carried, and after some consultation Dr. Nelson J. Shook, of Spencerville, was chosen. W. H. McIntyre was chosen treasurer. After a good deal of discussion it was decided to leave the selection the executive committee to be done after the county convention, so that candidates could assist the committee in the selection. After other informal discussions, the meeting, on motion, adjourned. The attendance was quite large, although some precincts were not represented, owing to the bad roads and the short notice. Many leading Democrats were present and took an active interest in the work of the meeting, although of course only committeemen could vote. In some cases the old committeeman was present to act for his precinct, as no new one had been selected. The adjournment was made subject to the call of the chairman. The newly elected chairman, Mr. Erick, is a wide awake young business man of Spencerville, and an active hard working Democrat. He has had considerable experience in politics, and will, we believe, make a good leader. His opponent, Mr. Wagner, is a man against whom nothing can be said, and undoubtedly the Democrats of the county would have been as well suited to have him for a leader as anyone. He is always at the front in time of battle, and has the confidence of all; but Mr. Erick happened to get a majority of the votes. The organization is now completed, except the executive committee, which as said before will be arranged later. Mr Kelley and Mr. Shuman, the retiring officers go out with the best wishes of all with whom they have been for the past two years associated. They have been earnest workers and have earned the good will and esteem off all.

County Offices.

Among the prospective candidates for county offices, we find as usual that those who seek to be sheriff, are the most numerous. No one has authorised a formal announcement as yet, and it is too early, perhaps for that. But among the names we hear mentioned for the place are: Ab. Kelley, G. C. Ralston, J. D Rowley, G. W. Bleeks, D. W. Wasson and perhaps one or two whose names have escaped us. There is also a talk that John J. Baxter of Smithfield, will be a candidate, but we have no positive information on this. Mr. Sawvel will of course be a candidate for treasurer without opposition. He has made an excellent officer. There will be a surveyor to be elected, but we have heard no one named for the place. Indeed, if a man has to work for $3 a day and pay three assistants out of that, we think the candidates for that place won't tumble over each other to get it. There will be a coroner to elect, also a commissioner for the north district, one for the southeast district, and also a county assessor. So, although not as many places to fill as usual, there will be enough to make it lively, and being presidential year, no grass need grow under the the feet of the politician.

LETTER FROM HONDURAS.

PORT BURCHARD, HONDURAS, Central America, Jan. 12, '92:—About one month after leaving home we finally reached our destination on the north coast of Honduras, We never got to the place we started for, because there is no harbor along that part of the coast where a ship can land or cast anchor with safety. But we have cast our lot with a young colony of Americans, located about the middle of the north coast of Honduras. This colony is six weeks old and contains about forty people, all whites of our own land. I find the climate very pleasant, the mercury standing at 70 at sunrise, 80 at noon, and 75 at sundown with but slight variations, and a pleasant sea breeze blows most of the time. Every evening all hands take a bath in the salt water and the sport is immense. We live in a house built from cabbage palm leaves which is very confortable in this climate. We do our own cooking (and eating of course), and take turns at cooking. We are quite in love with this country, and think it has a great future. This colony will engage in the culture of bananas, cocoanuts and other tropical fruits. This is the first white yankee colony in this republic. I have traveled quite often into the woods around here and have not yet seen a snake or other venomous reptiles, and insects are not as plentiful as in Indiana in summer time. The cattle that I saw were in good order, not having any flies to fight off. The soil back from the shore line is very fertile and will produce every product known to the tropics and will, we think in time become valuable. At present most of this country is covered with a jungle of vines, bushes, shrubs, trees in places very dense. The interior of the country is mountainous with level valleys of great fertility along the rivers.

This company is just finishing a large hotel and store room at this place, and living will be moderately cheap. This would be a grand place for those afflicted with lung trouble, rheumatism or other diseases common to cold countries. But very little clothing is necessary, as the temperature is even throughout the year, never getting as hot as in Indiana, and never below 61 in winter, and frost is unknown. The natives are few in numbers and are very peaceable, doing some trading with the white settlers. They are of the Carib race, have frizzled hair, most of them are black and very homely. I shall write again in a couple of weeks and give a more detailed description of this strange land and its products.

Yours Fraternally,
JOSEPH A. SHADE.

Our readers will remember the murder about two years ago, of Edmund Calkins, who formerly worked on the Butler Review. The Elkhart court gave Hendryx, a life sentence, but let off Mrs. Calkins, who had helped him drown her husband in the Elkhart river. Now the supreme court reverses this, because the court did not allow Hendryx an attorney at public expense.

The traveling public find our new Lake Shore passenger house a great convenience. It is one of the very best in this part of the state, and is a credit to the company. Now, they should fix up a walk on their grounds, to get to it; and people on both sides of the street should see that the walks along their property are maintained and kept in good condition.

Mr. Gordon, at the post office is now supplied with three sizes of postal cards now made by the government. The large one is at least a third greater than the old one, and is the "Number one," of the series. Then comes the old size, or "Number two. Then we have the smaller one, or "Number three." We make no doubt, the large one, will be in greatest demand, for quite a letter can be written on it. People should make a note of these improvements.

Two of the brightest planets, Jupiter and Venus, appeared together in the western sky last Friday evening. Our attention was called to this by our friend Joe Whetsell of Huntertown, he and his wife having been fortunate enough to see this beautiful but rare sight. It is what is called a "conjunction," that is the two planets in their journey around the sun at different rates and distances, get, at rare intervals in such parts of the heavens that they are in a straight line from us, and seem to be together.

Capt. Jerry Likens, formerly of this place, has fallen into trouble at his present home, Bassett, Nebraska. It will be remembered that the Courier spoke a year or so ago, of his good fortune in being elected treasurer of his county. But this it appears has been proved a misfortune, for in some way, the money has been lost and he has been arrested as a defaulting officer and at last accounts in the dailies, was in jail. The amount lost is put at over $7,000, and some claim it was lost in wheat speculations. We sincerely hope he may be able to prove himself innocent of this grave charge, for he was always highly respected in this, his home county.

The Lagrange Democrat tells of a trouble into which "Drs. S. & B." who have been extensively advertised around here, got into in that county. They got a lady they were treating to sign notes amounting to $600, as pay for services, and she now denies signing them, but says she signed some "testimonials." A lawsuit will settle matter.

Thomas Hallam received last week from friends in the east a very valuable sketch of the family history. It commences with 1775 and gives the births, marriages and deaths of his grandfather and family, then the same of his father's family, and adds a list of all the deaths that have occurred in the family to date, ending with the death of Mr. Hallam's mother, Dec. 11, 1891, at the age of 83. It is a very interesting family history and Mr. Hallam will get copies of it made, so it can be preserved.

The Auburn Stove Works, or the Eagle Iron Works, at the Junction is doing an extensive business in the manufacture and sale of patent backs for stoves. Their trade is especially large in the south part of the state, and over in Kentucy. Just now, they are getting out the sash weights for a large church in Peru. This order was sent in by the Mr. Hoffman, who built the M. E church in Auburn, and who has the contract for the Peru church. The Iron Works are also putting on the market their tubular iron culverts, a very valuable article for making ordinary road culverts or small bridges.

Obituary.

Mrs. Evelena J. Strong, daughter of Geo. W., and S. Elizabeth Hamilton, was born in DeKalb county, Indiana, Feb. 18, 1869. Her childhood was unusually joyous and pleasant, protected from the invasions of want and vice, by loving parents whose chief object in life was the welfare of their only child. In December 1891, under the pastoral labors of Rev. F. M. Hussey, she was converted, and, with her parents, united with the Methodist Protestant church at Rehoboth, where she has since ever been a faithful and consistent member.

Maidenhood, bright and beautiful, found a happy termination on Feb. 21 1891, in her marriage to Rufus E. Strong. On Jan. 6, 1892, to this union a child was born, and named Willard Marion. With the ambition of a true mother she declared that "he shall be a good and noble man if I can make him so." But just when the hopes of life seemed most radiant and the bright promise of the future most assured, the All Wise Father, whom we may, always trust, though not always understand, removed her from her home on earth, ere she knew the bitter sorrow that comes to many in later life, to her home eternal in the heavens.

Sister Strong died Feb. 2, 1892, aged 22 years, 11 months and 15 days.

We sorrow with the heartbroken husband so soon compelled to relinquish his priceless treasure; with the grief stricken parents, suddenly deprived of the hope of their declining years; yet more, far more, for the helpless innocent whose mother's life began in paradise almost as his began on earth, and whose tiny feet must tread the thorny paths of life, choosing, without a mother's counsel, between the right and wrong. God grant that those to whom He has delegated the sacred duty of his guardianship here, may guide them into the paths which leads to the angel mother waiting on the golden shore. On the 6th inst, the funeral services, conducted by her pastor, J. J. Fred of M. P. church, were held in the Rehoboth church. The manifest grief an the part of very many in that crowded congregation, while there was no lack of sympathy for the relatives, was largely from a sense of personal loss of one, whose life has often cheered them on their way. The remains were laid away to rest in the Woodlawn cemetery at Auburn. ⁂

A LOS ANGELES clergyman is in danger of being ejected from his pulpit for having declared in a sermon that no man ever made $1,000,000 without being a thief. SOL SMITH RUSSELL is an entertaining and amusing actor, but in the name of all that is appropriate, seemly, and in accord with the eternal fitness of things, let him quit playing the lover on the stage. AN erroneous opinion is possible in connection with the many published announcements of late to the effect that several large insurance companies are retiring from business; that English insurance organizations are to purchase others in this country; that the insurance companies are about to raise their rates, etc. These statements refer to fire insurance companies only, and never to the American standard life organizations, which, being mutual in nature, belong to their policy-holders, and so are not likely to go into liquidation or be sold.

FOR plain people we are getting to be very snobbish. We break out into all sorts of aristocratic societies, designed to cultivate exclusiveness, and parade titles and insignia with all the zest of denizens of the effete monarchies. The latest of the brood is the Colonial Dames of Maryland, composed of ladies who are descended from some ancestor who came to this country prior to 1774, and who rendered efficient oervice to the country during the colonial period. This would take in all the convicts who were sold into Virginia and the Carolinas during colonial days, and who, doubtless, rendered efficient service.

WHETHER we have peace or war, the cry of the peace lover that we should have neither navy nor fortifications will not count for much in the light of this present experience. We want strong fortifications upon the coast. We want a navy—not as numerous and powerful as that of England—but strong enough to overpower any country on this continent and to inspire Europe with respect. The people will hereafter approve of liberal defensive appropriations and will not call a halt until we can enjoy the blessings of peace without the constant fear that some tu'penny nation may humiliate us with half a dozen ironclads.

AN English paper has distinguished itself by the statement that "the American papers themselves are staggered by the enormity of the business caused by the big harvest on the Western roads." In the first place it may be objected to this way of stating the case that no great quantities of grain are grown on either rail or wagon roads in this countrys and secondly that the word "enormity" is an awkward one to use in such a connection. It is susceptible of being read to mean that the farmers of the United States have committed an enormous crime in raising so much grain as they did last year, and deserve punishment for the act.

AT Chicago Chief McClaughry's odious order requiring prisoners to be dragged from a justice court to a photograph-room, in order that their portraits may be taken, received a serious set back. Mrs. Catherine Seeley, who is accused of various fraudulent practices in soliciting funds for imaginary charities, was bound over by Justice Kersten. The officers immediately marched her to the Armory and seated her in front of a camera. Mrs. Seeley said nothing but quietly removed her false teeth and began making faces. For half an hour the photographer tried in vain to secure a satisfactory negative. He finally did secure something, but it looked more like Prometheus writhing under the attack of a swarm of vultures than it did like Mrs. Seeley. This interesting woman may be very much of a fraud, but she is entitled to public gratitude for having furnished an effective opposition to Chief McClaughry's tyrannical and indefensible order. Mrs. Seeley's example should be followed by every person who has the misfortune to be bound over by a justice. Not all of them will be able to divest themselves of false teeth, but every one of them can make faces.

THE career of the crank reads like a page from "Alice in Wonderland," and yet there is no denying the facts. The mad crime of the dynamiter who assaulted Sage, and perished in his attempt, has raised a host of imitators. And now the army is apparently reinforced by criminal and vindictive persons, who mean to use a feigned insanity for facilitating demands for money, backed up by dynamite. Before the Norcross incident the capitalist might have been excused for skepticism as to the courage of the cranks and pseudo-cranks. But now he knows that they mean business. At this juncture the menaces made against Mr. Jay Gould are enough to alarm anyone. The most impassive millionaire cannot forever maintain an icy calm when every mail brings him written threats that he must "pay or die." The helplessness of the richest individual, in spite of all the supposed safeguards of police and laws and troops of servants, is very striking. No millionaire can say that he is safe from sudden and deadly assault. Society is terrified by the dynamite bomb, like the Czar of Russia. One primary and essenstep toward safety, therefore, would seem to be the absolute interdiction, except for Government agents, of the making aud selling of high explosives. Strike at the root of the danger!

"Yoke of Oxen."

Time was when a yoke of oxen were considered indispensable adjuncts of a New-England farm, but it seems that they no longer occupy that position. At the Hampden County Harvest Club meeting, the other day, a farmer called attention to this fact, saying that a few years ago in his town over forty yoke of cattle were gotten together for the moving of a church on wheels. New scarcely a yoke can be found there. Oxen are fast giving way to horses for farm work, and the latter are considered cheaper on the whole and more generally useful. At the same time, a New-England farm without a yoke of oxen looks queer to the men of today who passed their boyhood tilling the soil. So says the Boston Journal, and it confirms the impressions of any New-England man who knew anything about a farm in boyhood. What splendid-looking animals the oxen used to be at a New-England fair, and how proud the farmers used to be of them! Some of the "solid men" in the county were not ashamed to take a hand in a plowing match in those days.

BRAZEN EFFRONTERY.

WORKINGS OF REVENUE AND PROTECTIVE TARIFFS.

In the Case of the Tin-Plate Tariff the Full Duty Has Been Added to the Price —Domestic Manufacturers Can Pocket the Whole Duty.

Revenue and Protection.

Major McKinley has often undertaken to enlighten the public as to the difference between a revenue and a protective tariff. He thinks that he makes a strong point against a revenue tariff when he tells us that it is a tax to the full extent of the duty, the total amount of it going into the national treasury, and being used to meet the Government's obligations. And any duty, he is careful to add, which does not protect some American industry is a revenue duty, not a protective duty.

When McKinley took hold of the tariff bill he found a duty of one cent a pound on tin-plate. As there were no tin-plate mills in the United States, he proposed to raise the duty high enough to be protective, thus getting rid of a revenue tariff.

Niedringhaus, Cronemeyer and a host of others were on hand in Washington to persuade the willing McKinley to double the duty and make it protective, and they would set to work in short order to make tin plates for the American people.

The plea of these applicants was a virtual petition to McKinley to pass a law to raise the price of tin-plates to all the people in order that they might make plates at a profit. Their plea was that they could not make plates and sell them in competition with the English plates under the old duty of one cent a pound; for Cronemeyer himself had tried it, and even after adding one cent to his prices the wicked English just would undersell him and drive him out of business. They must be able to add at least another cent before they could feel safe from English competition.

Well, the good and patriotic McKinley took them at their word; he raised the duty 2.2 cents per pound—in order to make it protective; in order, that is, to compel freeborn American citizens to buy their plate of Niedringhaus, Cronemeyer, etc., at the enhanced price.

Now let us see how the thing will work. Last year we imported 1,036,400,000 pounds of tin, worth, without the duty, $35,700,000, or about 3.4 cents a pound. The old duty on this yielded a revenue of $10,364,000, all of which was paid by the consumers and went into the treasury of the United States.

Just here is where the brazen effrontery of Niedringhaus, Cronemeyer, and their abettors in and out of Congress is seen in its true proportions. They said that this ten millilion dollars' tax was not enough; it must he more than doubled, must be made $22,800,000, and then we shall have a protective tariff instead of a revenue tariff on tin-plate, with Niedringhaus, Cronemeyer and other prospective manufacturers of tin-plate to collect and pocket the tax.

We have now had the McKinley tin-plate tax in operation since July 1, 1891, but it was practically a certainty a year before that date, and was even then causing prices to go upward with a bound. It was promised by the prospective manufacturers and their friends in Congress that the infant tin-plate mills would be in operation within a very short time after the law passed, Senator Allison said within a month. Up to the present date no American tin-plate is quoted in our market reports, and the insignificant quantity produced by our manufacturers has cut no figure except as a political curiosity. If, however, the time should ever come when they make all that we need, is anybody so simple as to believe that they will sell it for less than they can get for it in competition with English plates handicapped by a duty of 2.2 cents? Manufacturers are not built that way.

Meanwhile prices in the American market have come up to the McKinley tariff notch and even gone beyond it. In January, 1891, the price of tin plates of the largely used grade known as "Bessemer steel, coke finish, IC basis," was $5.55 per box in New York, $4.38 in London (difference $1.17), in January, 1891, against $5.70 in New York, $3.06 in London (difference $2.64), in January, 1892. The price in London last year was high, owing to the artificial demand caused by the anticipation of the McKinley tax. Now the price there has dropped back to the figure that prevailed three years ago, and has gone even slightly lower; but with us the price is higher than last year. It is all that the McKinley duty adds to the foreign price, and more, too.

Thus McKinley's tin-plate tax is getting in its work. It is making the people pay about twenty millions a year, so that Niedringhaus, Cronemeyer & Company may make experiments in plate manufacture for political purposes. If these men ever make tin plate there is no more reason to suppose that they will surrender their tariff spoils and sell at foreign prices than the steel rail trust does.

A protective tariff is a tariff for private profit and collected by private hands.

Mr. Whitman's Protest.

The small clique of men who adopted the name of the National Wool Manufacturers' Association and had a few professional wool growers, with an equally high sounding name, meet them at Syracuse in 1865 to agree upon a tariff to tax the American people on their woolen goods, held a meeting recently at which resolutions were adopted and sent to Congress protesting against the putting of raw wool on the free list and reducing the duty on woolen goods. In commenting on the following statement of the Boston Herald in its account of this meeting, "The wool manufacturers of New England, who met in a body, have shown their accustomed cowardice in treating this subject," the American Wool Reporter says:

"If the Herald means that the wool manufacturers of New England 'met in a body' when the recent memorial against the Springer bill was adopted by the 'National Association of Wool Manufacturers,' we are surprised that our usually well-informed contemporary should have been so deceived. In addition to the very small attendance at the meeting at which the 'memorial' in question was adopted, it should be stated that some of those present agreed to the 'memorial' with the express reservation that a certain section of the McKinley bill might need to be changed. An explanation as to the small number of manufacturers by whom this 'memorial' was adopted is necessary in justice to a large and increasing number of influential manufacturers who have not believed in the McKinley bill, and who do not like to read the misleading statement that 'the wool manufacturers of New England met in a body' in its support."

This clique of a few manufacturers, under the leadership of William Whitman, is becoming quite as offensive as the National Wool-Growers Association, which Judge Lawrence carries about with him in a bag on his travels, to be called out to pass appropriate resolutions at a moment's notice.

How Much Tin?

Professor Claypole, of Buchtel College, Ohio, has written a report on the famous Black Hills tin deposits which is not calculated to cheer the hearts of the protectionist wiseacres who look to the Black Hills for a vindication of McKinley's wisdom in putting a duty of 4 cents a pound on tin. Professor Claypole is an expert geologist. After making a careful personal investigation of the deposits in question, he reports that "a sanguine estimate" might place the proportion of tin ore in them "at 2 per cent. and probably in order to attain this some of the poorer mineral must be excluded." This, he says, is about the same percentage as the tin mines in Cornwall, England, yield.

The result of this examination does not bear out the extravagant claims made for the Black Hills tin deposits. All sorts of extravagant assertions have been made about the richness of those deposits. It was reported last year, for example, that "about April 1 a five-stamp mill was started on ore that is said to have yielded 10 per cent. of tin and eight tons of ore were crushed per day."

April 1 was a very good day on which to start this tariff industry. Its tin has never been heard of in our markets.

We now import about 40,000,000 pounds of tin for use in the various industries of the country. The tax on this quantity after the McKinley duty goes into effect July 1, 1893, will he $1,600,000. If the tin-plate enthusiasts should ever realize their dream of supplying the home market with American made tin-plate, an additional 25,000,000 pounds of pig tin will be needed every year, making the annual duty then foot up a round $3,000,000, not to mention the far larger tax on the tin-plate itself.

All the protection afforded by this tax, too, will be gobbled up by the English companies which own or control the few mines in California and South Dakota. How do American voters like the McKinley plan of taxing themselves for the benefit of English capitalists?

Exporting Apples.

During the year just past, about 600,000 barrels of apples were received in Liverpool from the United States and Canada, by far the larger part being from the United States. Our exports were the largest on record. During the fiscal year 1891, before last year's crop came on the market, we exported apples, green and dried, to the value of nearly $900,000, and if any apples came into the country from abroad, the fact is not mentioned in the Government reports.

Even before the present law was passed, no mention was made in the reports of any imports of apples. However, something had to be done to make the farmers think that they, too, are getting some of the benefits of the protective system. Hence the McKinleyites took apples from the free list, and made them dutiable at 25 cents a bushel. This transparent humbug may deceive such farmers as want to be deceived. Certainly no one can be taken in by it who knows that we import no apples, but export them in considerable quantities.

And what is true of the duty on apples is also true of nearly all other products of the farm. Farmers can get no direct help from protection, because their own products go into foreign markets, and offer successful competition there with all the world.

No Politics in It.

The duty on Canadian barley was 10 cents a bushel. The framers of the McKinley law sought to raise it to 30 cents. The border towns, without regard to party lines, protested against any increase, but offered to compromise at 15 cents. Senator Hiscock was indifferent or hostile, and the objections of Buffalo, Oswego, etc., went unheeded.

The increase was gratuitous. It was not needed for purposes of protection. The farmers of New York cannot be induced to raise barley to any extent. It is an expensive crop. Western barley will not answer the uses of brewers, who are the principal consumers of barley. It was not an instance of a foreign underselling a domestic product. Maltsters cheerfully paid a higher price for Canadian barley than they could buy the New York product for, because they believed that Canadian barley alone would make the best quality of beer.

The malting and brewing interests of Buffalo are very large. This trade now claims that "the experience of the past year has demonstrated that the predictions of those favoring the increased duty on barley were erroneous, as is evident by the fact that the value of barley is lower now than it was when the duty was only 10 cents per bushel." A meeting will be held on 'Change at noon to-day to ask Congress to restore the old rate of duty. Congress should heed the request.—Buffalo Express.

HOW THE wool tariff operates against the use of wood in goods and in favor of substitutes in "woolen goods" is described by a New-England woolen manufacturer as follows: "Free wool, with the present ad valorem rates upon goods, would be a great gain to woolen manufacturers; and, as on the woolen schedule, free wool brings a very large reduction in the duties on goods, with largely reduced cost on many woolen goods, the bill for free wool would benefit everybody. It is a very exceptional item in the tariff law. Free raw material for woolen manufacturers also means a greater use of wool for so-called woolen goods; mills running upon 'all-wool goods,' so-called, are now in many instances using no wool at all, but some waste or shoddy, and mostly cotton. Free wool would also put up the price of wool abroad which competes with American wools." No wonder that the shoddy manufacturers are opposed to free wool.

THE Mexican Government has decided to place an export duty on silver-lead ore shipped to the United States, in retaliation for the duty of 1½ cents per pound on the lead contents imposed on Mexican ores by the McKinley tariff. A short time ago we showed how the imposition of this duty on the part of the United States cut down our production of lead from silver-lead ore and at the same time send a great deal of capital to Mexico to be expended in the building of smelters there. Now that these have begun working, Mexico feels bound to help them as much as possible.

WE are sorry to be obliged to repeat that we desire no "poetical" contributions. This world is full of ordinary human clods of both sexes who seem to think it a patriotic duty to send us an installment of rhymed slush as often as they feel a rush of imbecility to their brain tanks, which is altogether too often for the capacity of our present waste basket.—Pullman, (Ill.) Journal.

THE SENATE AND HOUSE.

WORK OF OUR NATIONAL LAWMAKERS.

Proceedings of the Senate and House of Representatives—Important Measures Discussed and Acted Upon—Gist of the Business.

The National Solons.

The House spent another monotonous day in the discussion of the rules on the 3d inst., but it was marked by the adoption of an amendment which provides that all Senate amendments to House bills, other than appropriation bills, shall be considered as soon as laid before the House by the Speaker. In the Senate the joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States relating to marriage and divorce was referred to the Judiciary Committee. The Senate bill for the creation of a fourth judicial district in the Territory of Utah was passed. The bill appropriating $350,000 for an extension of the public building at Los Angeles, Cal., was passed, also the bill to pay the State of West Virginia the sum due it under the direct tax law. The bill for postoffice buildings in towns where postoffice receipts are $3,000 a year was discussed and went over without action. The public printing bill then came up and was amended by adding the words, "but the provisions of the eight-hour law shall apply." Without disposing of the bill the Senate adjourned.

In the Senate, the 4th, Mr. Brice introduced a bill for the erection of a monument at Put-in Bay, Ohio, to commemorate the battle of Lake Erie in 1813. Referred. Mr. Peffer offered a resolution, which was agreed to, changing the day for holding special services in memory of the late Senator Plumb to Thursday, Feb. 18. The report of the Committee on Privileges and Elections in the case of the Florida Senators (declaring Mr. Call entitled to the seat) was taken up for action, and the report was read, closing with the sentence: "The appointment of Mr. Davidson was an act of mere irrelevancy, which it is not necessary further to notice." After a long debate the resolution was agreed to without a division. The Senate then adjourned till the 8th. The House agreed to the code of rules. Mr. Dickerson, of Kentucky, offered a resolution directing the Committee on Judiciary to make an investigation and report whether Congress has the constitutional authority to appropriate money for the World's Columbian Exposition. Adopted. On motion of Mr. Goodnight, of Kentucky, a Senate bill was passed to provide for the creation of a Fourth Judicial District in the Territory of Utah.

In the Senate, on the 8th, a bill was reported and placed on the calendar for the construction of a boat railway at The Dalles and Celito Falls and Ten Mile Rapids of the Columbia River and for the improvement of Three Mile Rapids (appropriating $2,860,356). Mr. Sawyer, from the Committee on Commerce, reported a bill to repeal the act requiring life-saving appliances on steamers, so far as it applies to the carrying of line projectiles and the means of propelling them on steamers plying exclusively on any of the lakes, bays, or sounds of the United States, and it was passed. The Senate then went into executive session. When the doors were reopened the Senate resumed consideration of the bill providing for the public printing and binding, and the distribution of public documents. Without disposing of section 77, which had given rise to a good deal of discussion, the Senate adjourned.

A Horse's Weight.

Many people, even among those who frequently make use of horses, have little idea what an ordinary horse weighs, and would have hard work to guess whether a given animal, standing before their eyes, weighed five hundred or fifteen hundred pounds. Yet they would have no such difficulty with a man, and would probably be able to guess, especially if they were good Yankees, within ten or twenty pounds of his weight.

The governments of Europe have long been purchasing and weighing horses for the military service, and transferring them from carriage or draught employment to the various branches of the cavalry and artillery. The animals are ordinarily assigned according to weight.

The French military authorities find that an ordinary light carriage or riding horse, such as in the United States would be called a "good little buggy horse," weighs from 380 to 400 kilogrammes—say from 850 to 900 pounds.

Such horses as these are assigned to the light cavalry corps.

The next grade above, which in civil life passes as a "coupe horse," or carriage horse of medium weight, ranges in weight up to 480 kilogrammes, about 1,050 pounds. This horse goes to mount the cavalry of the line.

Next comes the fashionable "coach horse" of persons of luxury, which weighs from 500 to 580 kilogrammes, or from 1,100 to nearly 1,300 pounds. These horses go to serve the purposes of drill for the cavalry belonging to the reserve military forces.

Above these there are still two grades of heavy horses. The first are those used for ordinary draught purposes and are commonly found drawing the omnibuses of Paris. These weigh from 500 to 700 kilogrammes—1,100 to nearly 1,500 pounds.

The heaviest horses are the Clydesdales and Percherons, which are oxen in size and strength, and which weigh from 600 to 800, and sometimes even up to 900 kilogrammes; that is, from 1,300 up to nearly 2,000 pounds.

None of these Percherons of the heaviest weight are employed in the military service; but some of the lighter ones are used for draught and artillery purposes.

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN NERVINE TONIC —AND— Stomach AND Liver Cure

The Most Astonishing Medical Discovery of the Last One Hundred Years.

The Great South American Nervine Tonic

Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stomach. No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incalculable value who is affected by disease of the stomach, because the experience and testimony of many go to prove that this is the ONE and ONLY ONE great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.

HARRIET E. HALL, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to the Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration, and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors, with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly."

MRS. ELLA A. BRATTON, of New Ross, Indiana, says: "I cannot express how much I owe to the Nervine Tonic. My system was completely shattered, appetite gone, was coughing and spitting up blood; am sure I was in the first stages of consumption, an inheritance handed down through several generations. I began taking the Nervine Tonic, and continued its use for about six months, and am entirely cured. It is the grandest remedy for nerves, stomach and lungs I have ever seen."

No remedy compares with SOUTH AMERICAN NERVINE as a cure for the Nerves. No remedy compares with South American Nervine as a wondrous cure for the Stomach. No remedy will at all compare with South American Nervine as a cure for all forms of failing health. It never fails to cure Indigestion and Dyspepsia. It never fails to cure Chorea or St. Vitus' Dance. Its powers to build up the whole system are wonderful in the extreme. It cures the old, the young, and the middle aged. It is a great friend to the aged and infirm. Do not neglect to use this precious boon; if you do, you may neglect the only remedy which will restore you to health. South American Nervine is perfectly safe, and very pleasant to the taste. Delicate ladies, do not fail to use this great cure, because it will put the bloom of freshness and beauty upon your lips and in your cheeks, and quickly drive away your disabilities and weaknesses.

MY VALENTINE.

Oh, yes, I have chosen my valentine—
I have chosen forever and aye;
And now, at the feet of my lady-love,
I hasten my gifts to lay.

I have been afar, "to the ends of the earth,"
For a sapphire of glorious blue;
And down to the depths of the ocean cave
For a pearl of a tender hue.

The rare, red gold from the darkling mine,
That never had seen the light,
I have laid by the side of my priceless store,
To gladden my lady's sight.

And, lest she should wonder, my peerless queen,
The meaning of these I bring,
I have whispered the gem from the mermaid's home,
My story of love to sing.

To tell how the gold, the rare, red gold,
That knoweth no sad decay,
Is the type of a love that never shall change,
But lasteth "forever and aye."

The fountain of hope from "the ends of the earth"
Shall speak to my darling for me,
Of a home one day in a cloudless land,
Where partings never shall be.

You ask "where I hasten to meet my love"
And "what is her rank and fame?"
My boyhood's home is the trysting-place,
And mother my lady's name.

MANGOLDS' VALENTINE

"There's nothing against the Mangolds as I know of," the jolly storekeeper at the Prairie Rock settlement remarked, "but it's plain they don't amount to much."

"That's so," spoke up one of the settlers who were warming themselves at the stove on an early February evening. "They make the two little fellows do all the work. I've never seen the father anywheres."

"Neither have I," said the storekeeper. "They came here in September; the first we see of 'em was noticing the white-topped camper's wagon standing on the section of government land near the cabin that the Blagg boys left when they found the land wasn't first-class. The two boys have been here for a few things and always paid for what little they got; but they wouldn't talk much. I guess they're pretty hard up, and I've thought I'd go over and see 'em, but I never got to it."

The other men agreed with this history of the family, and remarked that they, too, had thought of going to see the family, but had never carried out their purpose.

One had passed the cabin about a month before; he had seen a woman through the window, but nothing more was known of them. They were evidently the one family of delinquents in a prosperous community of settlers.

"Nice, open winter," remarked Squire Gillett, as they all rose to go.

"Yes," said the storekeeper. "Plows'll be going next week, though the nights are kind of chilly yet."

"If the Mangolds expect to hold government land, they must get some plowing done right off."

"Correct. Too bad the old man puts it all on those two boys."

Buttoning up their heavy coats, the settlers mounted their ponies, and rode homeward together.

"There's the two boys now," remarked Squire Gillett, when they had ridden two miles or more across the brown prairie. Looking off to the west, they saw two small boys mounted on large, rawboned work-horses, their outlines distinct against the sunset sky.

The two boys were jogging along slowly and in silence. Their slender forms seemed oddly in contrast with the size of the horses they were riding. They shivered in the raw evening air. Heavy clouds were coming up in great black masses from the northeast.

"We must hurry, Joe," said one of the boys, "or we'll get wet."

"I suppose so, for our coats aren't quite waterproof," said the other.

"Say, Clive," Joe went on, after a moment's silence, "don't you think it's been a pretty lonesome winter?"

Joe nodded three or four times, rather ruefully.

"I shall be glad enough when spring comes," he continued, "for then papa can get out of doors and see folks."

"He's pretty sick, don't you think?"

"Yes, Joe, but mamma says he's feeling better, and if we're brave, strong boys, he'll get well again."

"But the plowing? Can we do it all?"

"Do it? We've got to do it, and there are only a few days left before the time will be up, and if we don't have it done we shall lose the claim. It's too bad the harness broke this afternoon, but if the storekeeper has some straps, we'll be all right."

The horses had started into a gallop, and the boys bobbed awkwardly in their seats. Over the swells, down the grassy slopes they went, and then, with a still faster pace, whirled down another declivity, and crashed through the dead sunflower stalks and tumbleweeds that covered the bottom of the slough.

They had gone but a few yards here when the horses suddenly stopped, and sent the young riders sliding forward to the animals' shoulders and manes.

The object which had stopped them was a large and dilapidated "prairie schooner," which stood at the side of the trail. The horses that had been attached to it browsed upon the dead weeds.

A camp-fire had been started beside the wagon, and near it, his hands holding his head and his elbows on his knees, was a flannel-shirted and unkempt man.

He did not look up until the boys called to him, and then he raised a worn, anxious, hopeless face.

"Anything the matter?" Joe asked.

"Yes, something's the matter. It's the little one." He motioned toward the wagon.

"Sick?" asked Joe.

"Yes, and maybe dying. I've dome for days from the West, calculating to take the child home to the old folks in Missouri, but the little codger couldn't stand the journey."

The boys slipped to ground, and by the light of the fire approached the back part of the wagon. They drew aside the cover and let the firelight into the interior.

A child, hardly more than a baby, was moaning on the bed of straw within.

"Can't we help you?" asked Joe, anxiously.

"I don't know. I've tried to find a doctor, but I don't seem to make out. Maybe the folks are afraid of me. Anyhow, they don't seem to want me around, and now I've clean lost my way."

"I'll tell you what we'll do," said Joe. "We'll take you home. Papa can doctor people."

"But the harness, Joe?" said Clive.

"That's so; I forgot it. Well, I'll tell you: You drive home with the man, and I'll go to the store. I aint afraid."

In a few minutes the emigrant was on the road toward the Mangold cabin with Clive, while Joe, his courage just a little weakened by the appearance of the still darkening sky, was riding rapidly in the other direction.

"My goodness, who's this!" exclaimed the storekeeper, as he was putting up the blinds of the lonely prairie store for the night. He could hardly believe his eyes when the young rider presented himself.

"And you've come all this alone?" he said, when he had heard Joe's story. "Well, my boy, you must be a good one. Look here! I'm going home with you."

He put on his overcoat, and wrapped a shawl about the slender boy's shoulders.

"Come," he said, picking up a bundle which Joe thought was certainly too large to contain nothing more than the piece of harness, "let's go."

Together they mounted the horse, and through the falling rain the two rode on mile after mile, the steady swish of the horse's feet through the dead grasses being the only sound to break the stillness of the night.

At last the faint light in the cabin of the Mangolds shone across the plain, and a few moments afterward the storekeeper and the boy had entered the house.

"I tell you what," said the storekeeper the next evening, when a group of settlers had again gathered about his fire, "it wasn't a pleasant sight. There was the baby moaning and suffering, while the little woman was trying to comfort it. Over in the other corner was Mangold himself."

"The old man, eh?" said the Squire.

"He's sick, boys, pretty sick. He's been a kind of doctor in the East, but was ordered out here for his health. He hasn't been able to go about any since he came, and his brave little wife and the two boys have looked after everything."

"That's it, eh?"

"Yes. And besides that, out of all of us they were the ones to take care of the camper. The poor fellow was about discouraged, and it was a godsend to him that the boys came across him, for the baby'd surely died right there in the ravine.

"More'n that, boys, I found out that the plowing that has to be done on the claim to hold it from the Government ain't near finished. Those children have been trying to do it, and they've got only a few acres plowed. The times expires on the fifteenth of the month,—that's day after to-morrow,—and the claim's likely to be jumped by some outsider."

"I know two fellows who've got their eyes on it," said the Squire. "They've been wanting it for some time, and are going to make a break whenever they can. They're sharp, and I think they've got wind somehow that the railroad's going to strike through that quarter section."

"It'll be tough on the Mangolds to lose their claim," slowly droned out a lank herder, who was occupying the top of a sugar-barrel; "but then they don't amount to much in the settlement, and the Hay boys being hustlers——"

He got no farther. The look that the storekeeper gave him quite upset him, and he relapsed into silence.

Then a very important conference was held between the storekeeper and the other settlers; and after it the party separated with smiling faces.

The rain had cleared the atmosphere, and next morning the sky gleamed in such blue splendor as only prairie skies can know. The air was full of the softness and warmth of an early spring morning in Southern Kansas.

At an early hour there were seen here and there wagons wending their way along the prairie. In each wagon was a plow or a harrow, and in some of them were heaps of corn and other provisions.

Clive and Joe looked out of the Mangold cabin, and noticed that the horses' heads were all facing them.

"Let's hurry and hitch up," said Joe, "and get to plowing. All the folks are coming by here, and we ought to be at work."

They ran out and began harnessing the horses to the plow, the stranger emigrant looking on dolefully.

"Hold on there, boys! Unhitch those horses!"

It was the storekeeper, with a grin on his face.

"All you have to do to-day," he went on, "is to boss. We'll do the work. Now, say, wheredo you want your forty acres plowed?"

Joe, bewildered, looked around upon the gathering teams, and pointed to a tract around which the boys had made several straggling furrows.

"All right. Now, fellows, hurry up!" shouted the storekeeper.

There was a great rattling of chains and much laughter, as team after team went with its plow to the corner of the field, presently to send a long chocolate ribbon of sod rolling after as it took its way around the great square piece of prairie.

"Twenty-four of them," said Mrs. Mangold, counting, with extended finger, her worn face lighting up with pleasure. The strange visitation, and the pile of provisions brought by the settlers, had almost overwhelmed her.

Following the plows were harrows; and the land rapidly took on the appearance of a field long tilled. The sun was half-way across the sky, when all stopped at a signal from the storekeeper.

"Boys," he said, when the men had gathered around, "now let's eat dinner, and then we'll finish. But while we're finishing how would it do for some one to go to the village and bring out a certificate of entry on the claim? That'll make it all sure. By that time he will be able to prove that the required plowing is done, you see."

The proposition was received with a shout of approval.

"I'll go," said the lank herder, who had been completely converted to the Mangolds' side.

As he had the fastest pony in the neighborhood he was allowed to take the trip.

Just before the sun reached the horizon, the square of prairie sod had been blotted out.

As the party gathered around the cabin in the twilight, the herder rode up, his horse white with foam. He held a large official envelope in his hand.

"February the fourteenth," read the storekeeper, aloud, beginning the certificate. "Boys," he said, with a laugh, looking up, "this is St. Valentine's Day."

"That's so," said several of the settlers.

"Tell you what let's do," proposed Squire Gillett; "let's give the certificate to the woman for a valentine!"

Gathering together, with the Squire at their head, they knocked at the door of the cabin. Mrs. Mangold opening it, and the pale face of her husband was seen behind her shoulder.

Squire Gillett made a very handsome little speech, and presented her with the certificate as a valentine, accompanying his formal words with some hearty praise of the brave boys.

"And the little fellow," he said, "how is he?"

"Much better," said Mrs. Mangold. "His father will leave him here and come back in the summer to get him. It will be safer for him to travel then."

Then she faltered a little. "I—I—can not thank you enough, gentlemen, for this—valentine," she said, "but you know how grateful we must feel."

"Tut—tut—tut," called out the storekeeper. "No thanking. We ought to be ashamed of ourselves that we didn't help you before, oughtn't we, boys?"

"Of course we had," they all said.

"And before we go, let's give three cheers for the little woman."

The cheers went up, heartily.

"Now three for the boys," said the squire.

"Hurrah! Hurrah! Hurrah!"

"And three for the baby," added the lank herder.

The cheers went up again.

As the wagons rattled away in the darkness, there was great happiness in the Mangold cabin. There was happiness among the departing visitors, too; and the start they had given the stranded family enabled its members to become as prosperous and as hearty as the rest of the community.—Youth's Companion.

HISTORICAL ITEMS.

It is said that the Sibyl of Cumæ used a fan while delivering her oracles.

The Scandinavians introduced the use of the battle-ax into general warfare.

The Free Church of Scotland separated from the national establishment in 1843.

Several of the monasteries on Mount Atlas date back to the time of Constantine.

The first war steamer was built in 1813 by Robert Fulton, and named Fulton the First.

In ancient times the standard was used to convey signals rather than a point of rallying.

The transportation of criminals to New South Wales ceased in 1837, and transportation to Van Dieman's Land ceased in 1853.

The franc became the monetary unit of France in 1795, but gold coins of this name were first made in 1360, and silver coins in 1575.

The Cossacks used to elect their ottoman or supreme chief by throwing their fur caps at the candidates in a general meeting called for the purpose.

The English order of the Knights of Bath originated at the time of the crusades. The order was neglected and discontinued from 1664 to 1725.

From 1827 to 1852 the national congress or constituent assembly of Buenos Ayres did not meet, and during the greater part of that time Rosas was absolute ruler of the country, although nominally only its Governor.

When the army of Suvarov retreated from Elm in 1799 the march of the men loosened the snow of the Alps so that avalanches descended upon them, and 300 mule drivers and their animals were buried under one of these immense snow slides. Only 17,000 of the 20,500 who left Elm made the march in safety.

There have been female cricket players in England. In 1797 a match was played in the parish of Bury between eleven married women and eleven maidens, which was won by the matrons by eighty runs. In 1811 two women elevens, selected from Surrey and Hantz, played a match at Ball's Pond for 500 guineas. The contest was promoted by two sporting noblemen. The performers were of all ages and sizes—from 14 to 60. The young wore shawls and the old long cloaks. Hampshire's color was blue, while Surrey sported blue and orange. Surrey's best bowler and runner was Baker, who was 60 years of age. Hampshire won.

A Disgusted Tabby.

In some manner a cat found its way into a cyclorama building several days ago, says the Portland Press. The man in charge attempted to chase the trespassing feline through the door, but the cat evidently thought there was a better way of escaping the rising temper of the irate man. It looked cautiously about, as if to avoid steping on the prostrate forms of heroes slain in battle. Finally its eyes caught sight of a tree. A projecting limb hung very low and here the cat thought to find a place of safety. It gave one leap, and, no doubt, was the most disgusted cat in Portland when it learned by sad experience that the tree was on the canvas. It picked itself up and slowly slunk through the door, down the stairs and out of the building.

Brazilian Enterprise.

An elevated railroad is to be built in Rio Janeiro soon. The official permission has been granted and all preliminaries for the construction have been arranged. It is a kind of belt line route, going one way and returning another. It is said that a network of elevated roads is being planned for Rio which will embrace the whole of the federal district of the city. The service contemplated is to reach the outer points ever hour, nearer every twenty minutes, still nearer every ten minutes, and in the heart of the business district trains are to be run every five minutes.

The Temptation

To go out of doors in rough weather is not strong, but we are, many of us, compelled to face rough weather frequently. Diseases which arise from a chill are peculiar to no season of the year. This is true, therefore there should be in the closet of every household—what? Not an unmedicated stimulant, absolutely devoid of anything but an excitive action, but a tonic combining, in the effective form of an invigorant and an alterative, the quality of defense against changes of weather. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has three or four properties that no other article of its class possesses. Not only does it relieve the complaints which it eventually cures, it fortifies the system against the bad effects of changes of temperature, fatally and too often shown in the deadly form of "la grippe;" it produces a radical change in the weakened condition of a system peculiarly liable to be attacked by it, and it tends to provide against the danger resulting from an impoverished condition of the blood and a disordered state of the liver or bowels.

Practically One Town.

There are two Kansas Citys, one in Missouri and one across the river in Kansas. But, according to the Kansas City Star, they are really only one city. It says: "The practical union of the two cities has progressed because it was natural that it should; men own property in both cities; men sleep in Kansas City, Mo., and work in Kansas City, Kan., and men have their homes in Kansas City, Kan., and their places of business in Kansas City, Mo. Morning and evening the cars are crowded with workers of every grade going both ways. It is difficult to tell which crowd is the larger."

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury,

As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co.

A movement to abolish the "annoying anachronism" of church bell ringing is talked of in San Francisco. The Report of that city contends that the theaters have as good a right to use steam whistles as the churches have to use bells, more especially as the theaters would not, in announcing their performances, awake people before daylight in the morning.

No man can go straight ahead who looks backward.

It Should Be Remedied.

In only five States has a mother any absolute legal right to the custody of her children. These are Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Oregon and Washington, where both parents have equal rights in the matter. In other States a mother has no control over the children, not even if driven from home by her husband's cruelty, unless she applies in the court for the custody. In other words, the father, by right of fatherhood, can claim his child; but motherhood is not enough, the court must be appealed to before the mother can have absolute right to her children. This injustice is so tangled with legal technicalities that it is hard to unravel the snarl, but since it has been done in five States it can be done in others.

Don't give up and say there is no help for Catarrh, Hay Fever and Cold in Head, since thousands testify that Ely's Cream Balm has entirely cured them.

I have been bothered with catarrh for about twenty years; I had lost sense of smell entirely, and I had almost lost my hearing. My eyes were getting so dim I had to get some one to thread my needle. Now I have my hearing as well as I ever had, and I can see to thread as fine a needle as ever I did, my sense of smell seems to be improving all the time. I think there is nothing like Ely's Cream Balm for catarrh.—Mrs. E. E. Grimes, Rendrill, Perry Co., O.

A Treasure.

The University at Upsala has within its walls many interesting relics; among them the library is, of course, most fascinating to men of letters. Here one may find 200,000 volumes and 7,000 manuscripts. But the golden treasure is the famous "Codex Argenteus"—the four gospels translated by Bishop Ulphilas, and written on 182 leaves of parchment in letters of silver on ground of faded purple. It is kept in a glass case, and under lock and key. This wonderful manuscript is said to date back to the second half of the fourth century, and to it, almost alone, we are indebted for our knowledge of the early Gothic, the parent of all the Germanic tongues.

CORRESPONDENCE.

WATERLOO.

F. Deventer went to Elkhart last week

Frank Beiller and Phil Morel were sick last week

Fred. Williams is here visiting his relatives and friends.

Mr. Speer is slowly improving but is not able to be at the store yet.

Last week Rev. Ackman of Ligonier, spent a few days with friends in Waterloo.

Mrs Sarah Edge has moved her goods to Auburn, where she at present resides with her son.

W. C. Lockhart goes this week to Michigan, to make sale of the perfection fruit sprayer.

The meetings at the Methodist church are still in progress, and said to be of much interest.

Flora Speer is at home for a short time, having come back on account of her father's illness.

Word has reached here, that Mr. Dye is at Cincinnati, where it is ascertained he had called for his pension.

A. Y. Rosenbury has several patients over at Auburn, making if necessary for him to make regular trips to that place.

Roads were so rough the first of this week, that the buses did not go to the train. But the walking was good—on the sidewalks.

The young people's monthly union meeting was held last Sunday at half past four in the afternoon, at the U. B church, led by Dessa Mountz. The meeting was interesting and the house was well filled.

Quite a number of our democratic politicians were over at Auburn Saturday to attend the county meeting. Mr Kelley is now out of the chairmanship, and Mr. Shuman is no longer secretary, but both are satisfied with the new officers.

A few weeks ago an item appeared in some of the papers stating that the one of the daughters of the Prince of Wales smokes cigarettes. This is not surprising if true, as foreign correspondents write that her mother does the same thing; also that her aunt, the Princess Louisa of Lorne, was seen in Paris seated on a public piazza, smoking cigarettes and sipping brandy and water. When we read of such illustrious persons setting such bad and unwomanly examples, it is refreshing and quite encouraging to read of those of high birth and great wealth, like Lady Henry Somerset, who cares nothing for high life and gay society, but devotes her means and her time to doing good, to promoting temperance and every good work. A tale has been published of her since her arrival in this country, to the effect that she owns two licensed inns in London, where liquor of course, is sold. But this slander falls to the ground when the facts are known, that this property fell to her, already under lease, and she of course is unable to cancel it, but when the lease expires, it will not be renewed by her. She is now in the Moody Biblical Institute in Chicago, taking the course of studies prescribed.

BUTLER.

A little son of May Collins (colored) was buried Sunday.

Jacob Grindell is improving, and hopes are entertained of his recovery.

Mrs. Elizabeth Imhoof, whose serious illness was mentioned last week, has materially improved.

Rev. Tedro, is ill from the prevailing malady. Martin Everts and Prof. Kriebel are acting as supplies.

A protracted effort is being made at the church of God, by a former laborer in that church, with moderate success.

A very successful revival effort is being made at Wilson's chapel, northeast of Butler, by an M. E. minister, of Edon, Ohio.

The quietude of the saloon end of Butler, was broken last week by a fight between a country gentleman (?) and a well known ex-county official. Moral: Let respectable ex-county officials give saloons a wide birth.

Another little scrimmage is also reported to have taken place between Marion Blackwell and George Freed. This proved unpleasant to the former as he received the worst of the injury and had all the cost to pay.

William Walker who resided with his son John, on west North street is reported very ill. He lost nearly all his property a year or two ago, by a man known as Colonel Thomson, and last summer he buried his wife; and now a wasting illness seems to be filling his cup full to overflowing.

John Wilson after remaining indoors over three months with a broken leg, ventured out on the streets last week upon crutches. He attended Sunday school and church last Sunday and on his way home accidentally fell on the side walk and broke his leg in another place. This is particularly unfortunate as his circumstances are in a very unfavorable condition. He is deserving of the sympathy of all his neighbors and friends.

The patience of a large part of the people living in the east part of town has been sorely tried for a number of years by the utter failure of our town authorieties to abate an intolerable nuisance on the north side of North street between Pearl and Main streets. The street has a good plank walk on both sides for nearly half a mile, yet there is four rods of mud walk at the place named, and pedestrians are compelled to wade the mud here, or go out into the street, or go back to the next street, cross over and take the opposite side. This state of affairs has existed several years, yet no move has ever been made by the powers that be to remedy the evil. If this criticism reaches their eyes or ears we hope an immediate move will be made to improve the situation. If the owner of the property is unable to make the improvements let a subscription be opened for this purpose at once.

GARRETT.

We notice the familiar faces of Mr and Mrs. Condell on our streets.

Father Young was taken suddenly ill Tuesday, and is lying in a critical condition.

Mrs. John Eberle from Chicago Junction, is spending several weeks with Mrs. M. J. Driscoll.

It is reported that George Dolph and Mrs. Clara Boardman were quietly married last week.

Our town has a new marshal. Upon the resignation of Geo. Arnold, the town board appointed Henry Houser to finish the term.

Norman Jones, who has been spending a week's vacation with his parents and other friends, returned to Greencastle this morning.

Rev. Wones came up from Ft. Wayne Saturday in answer to a message requesting him to assist in the funeral services of J. F. Manuel.

Miss Mona Morse of this place, shot herself with a revolver Monday afternoon, probably fatally. She was a young lady of the highest respectability and no cause can be guessed for her rash act.

Quite a serious wreck occurred at North Baltimore on last Tuesday night No 56 was running at a high rate, the engine was derailed and the engineer J F Manuel, was buried beneath the ruins. After several hours labor they succeeded in finding the body in a mangled condition. The remains were brought to his home in this place on Wednesday evening and Sunday they were interred in the cemetery north of town. He was very highly esteemed by all who knew him He was a member of the B. of L. E., also the I. O. O. F., which orders were largely represented at his funeral.

CONCORD.

Minnie Hornberger is on the sick list

Harry Buchanan spent Sunday at home.

Mrs. Nettie Culbertson is reported to be very sick.

Theodore Kline advertises a large sale of stock at his farm Thursday, Feb. 18.

Mrs. Wayne Scott and baby Frank were the guests of friends in St. Joe a part of last week.

Mrs. Tillie Sheldon came down from Garrett last week to help take care of her father, who is sick.

Mrs. Sidney Gill, who has been assisting in the care of her sick mother and sister for a couple of weeks, returned to her home in Garrett Monday.

Mert Johnson of Huntertown, was in town Friday. He talks of moving his family to Lagrange in the spring as work is not plenty where he is now located.

George Morr, sr., was taken sick very suddenly last week, and remained in a critical condition until Sunday, he began to mend and is still better at this writing.

Mrs. Smith's daughter from Garrett is visiting her. Mrs. Smith has had very poor health all winter, and does not seem to improve as fast as her family would wish.

Uncle George Draggoo's entire family are still confined to the house with the grip. Noah Morr is doing the work about the farm and taking care of the family.

Quite a number of logs have been hauled to the mill yard which will be sawed up some time this spring by Mr. Smith, who owns the mill Anyone who has work in his line should give him a call.

Mr. Wasson is no better, and the prospect of his regaining his health is lessened on account of his refusing to take medicine. It seems he is so heart broken over the death of his wife that he does not care to get well.

Those Free Tickets.

We are sorry to see the Dispatch so anxious for a controversy over the free tickets of the fair, as we do not believe any good to the association can come of it. And had we thought it would have provoked a discussion we would have said nothing about it. It says the COURIER is misinformed. Not so. The editor of this paper was present and took part in the discussion of the question and there was no limit named as to free tickets The proposition was that there be no free tickets of any sort. And if the instructions of that meeting are carried out by the board of directors, there should be a clean sweep. No exception should be made in favor of ministers and editors. If stockholders who have paid in their money on a promise that they were to have free tickets, cannot have them, then we say that editors and preachers, who have paid nothing, must also be cut off. To leave them on the free list, would be an additional slap at the men who have paid in their money, and made the fair a possibility. Editors, if any of the classes named, should pay. Right at this point we recall that the Dispatch says, "The COURIER need have no fear about being obliged to pay for admission." The COURIER has no fear, and plainly so stated at the meeting. The editor of the COURIER has also no fear but that his reputation for liberality in matters of this kind is as high as that of the editor of the Dispatch. The Dispatch's plea for free tickets for editors because "That class of tickets is paid for ten times." comes with very poor grace from a man who is at the same time asking that there be no free tickets for men who paid $25 in cash for the privilege of using one. The fact that he favors but one kind of free ticket--that for editors—shows his idea of liberality, and the kind of "business basis" on which he thinks the fair should be conducted. He would be liberal to his own class, but niggardly with all others. He says, the burdens of the debt, etc., will fall heaviest on the large stockholders in case an assessment is made, etc. But he knows the stock cannot be assessed. So that ends this plea. He says in another place: "There were days last fall, when there were probably a thousand persons on the fair grounds, who had not paid one cent for admission." What about the stockholders who had paid $25 each for their tickets? In conclusion: If stockholders will all come and pay for their tickets; if exhibitors will all be there; if the stand men will be as numerous as before; if ministers will all come and pay a quarter; if the officers of other societies will honor us with their patronage in cash; if all the editors in this section will be liberal enough and wealthy enough to come up smiling with twenty five cents, no doubt the fair will be "run on a business basis this year." But will they do this?

Some Reminiscences of its Early Days and Pioneer Citizens.

Education has always held prominent position in the minds of Auburn people. For this cause, no expense has been spared and no debt has been born more patiently and paid more cheerfully than the bonds issued to provide funds to build and re build our public school house—an ornament and advertisement of the town. As is our school house, so was the old academy in 1859 when popular pride and personal interest were com bined to bring education to the front,

John H. Moore completed his engagement at Auburn and removing to Waterloo caused the erection of a building which was known as the Waterloo seminary, where he also conducted a normal school.

At the first teachers' institute held at Auburn, Mr. Moore was an instructor; he delivered lectures on school studies at the academy and was a recognized educator. In the fall of 1861, he associated with him in the seminary J. B. York to whom he sold a half interest in the building, and in April 1862 Mr. York bought his remaining share and conducted the school, while later Mr. Moore enlisted as orderly sergeant in a company of the 100th Indiana Infantry.

In March Andrew Larimore, a man of scholarly attainments and brother to Dr. Larimore well known in Auburn during the years succeeding the war, made formal application to the town board for use of the academy in which to conduct a three months' term of select school.

As the action of the board in this matter would establish a precedent, the sub ject was fully discussed by the trustees and it was finally decided to give him permission to use the building under condition that pupils attending should be restrained from any interference with the upper rooms or tools and material belonging to the contractor, J. W. Case, who was at work finishing the rooms.

Prof. Larimore taught with success, and on Aug. 8th was employed as principal of what was then known as the Auburn Union School, for a three months' term at a salary of $50 a month, and after a brief vacation, he was engaged for and taught the winter term.

In this work, he was assisted by Laura Nimmons, Elizabeth Smith, Hannah Davis and Vesta Ward, and the school gave promise of a prosperous future with growing reputation.

Isaac Shafer built fires and swept the rooms for his tuition during the fall term; and in the winter, the janitor work was shared between Henry Bolinger and William Tinney.

Tuition rates were low and yet upwards of $55 of so called "foreign tuition" was received, thus showing quite an attendance from outside the corporation.

The school examiners appointed by the county commissioners were James B Morrison, and W. C McGonigal and M. F. Pierce, all residents of Auburn.

The examination of teachers was still considered a perfunctory requirement and did not sensibly interfere with the professional and official duties of the lawyer, the publisher and the county auditor.

We have stated that William A. Lowry was not paid in full on his building contract and he promptly instituted suit against the town to recover the shortage. Wyllys Griswold was appointed a committee to employ counsel for the defense.

It appears from the financial result of litigation, that the imposition of an arbitrary penalty for failure to get work done on contract time, was a boomerang against the town, for Lowry won his suit and the town, in addition to other costs had $25 attorney's fees to pay to J. B. Morrison, whom Mr. Griswold had employed on the case.

The town seems to have enjoyed at this time a light wave of of prosperity from some cause. Population was increasing, and at the annual election a hundred votes were cast, thus indicating about five hundred inhabitants.

Among names of new comers occur those of M. L. Rhodes, Jacob Ochs, George Keesler and Henry Wartensleben. Mr. Rhodes engaged in store keeping, Mr. Keesler was a physician in good standing and quite popular with Auburn people, and Mr. Wartensleben, yet a resident is well known as quite a genius at almost any kind of work to which he can be induced to give his attention, from the rehabiliment of an easy chair to the reconstruction of a Cremona violin.

He has built several houses in the south part of Auburn where he lives, and both has been and is a useful citizen.

The strength of political parties in town was represented by a vote of 61 to 39, and Messrs. Ford, Griswold, Stimely, Tinney and Job. C. Smith were elected trustees; M. F. Pierce, clerk; John Butt, treasurer; William Valleau, assessor, and Thomas D. Gross, marshal.

We have spoken of the steam flouring mill in the south of Auburn, of which mill, Messrs. Parks, Houghton and McBride were owners in 1859, and it appears that in answer to a popular demand and carried forward by a spirit of enterprise, quite a number of such mills had been built in the county and were in operation. Among proprietors of mills, of this kind were Robert M. Lockhart at Waterloo, R. J. Stone in Fairfield township Pierce & VanWinkle in Newville and C. Buss in Richland, and these men utilizing the produce of the location were of great and lasting service to the community.

Realizing the advantages to farmers of association and the benefits naturally to be enjoyed by Auburn of a fair ground and an annual fair at which competitive exhibits could be held and improvement in stock, machinery and handiwork encouraged, Wesley Park on April 2nd leased to the directors of the DeKalb County Agricultural Society, about seven acres of ground lying north of Park's Addition to the town plat and just west of the public road running from Auburn to Waterloo.

A Fierce Battle in Mexico—Confession of an Express Robber—The Prince of Wales Coming to America—Saw Mill Explosion—Three Girls Injured.

TWENTY MEN KILLED.

The Federal Troops and Revolutionists, in Chihuahua, Fight a Fierce Battle.

El Paso (Tex.) special: The news has been confirmed here of a battle between the revolutionists and Federal troops at Temochi Puebla, in Chihuahua, near the Sonora line, in which twenty men were killed, mostly all Federals. Another battle is reported from Las Alamos where eight soldiers and the commandant were killed. Another skirmish was reported at Jeekery, where the revolutionists were driven to the hills and three killed. Rumors of the actions between the revolutionists and Federals were brought to this city several weeks ago, but were not credited. The man who brought the information says the priests are telling the people that the country is in the hands of a tyrant who will not give them justice nor their liberty. They tell the people that they have $60,000,000 with which to supply arms and ammunition and provisions. The uprising is being brought about by the priests, some of whom claim to be saints and inspired to tell the people of their wrongs and lead them on to glorious victory. It is feared that a popular uprising of the lower classes will take place after the June election, when Diaz will begin his third term of the presidency. To counteract this feeling many Diaz clubs are now being formed all over the Republic.

Three Girls Injured.

Misses Lydia Hayes, Lulu Saunders, and Cora McPherson, prominent young ladies of Guthrie, O. T., went horseback riding and their horses ran away with them. Miss Hayes fell from her horse, and, her foot catching in the stirrup, she was dragged some distance, her life being saved by a man shooting the horse. She was terribly cut and bruised and one eye was knocked out by the horse's hoof. The other two girls were also thrown from their horses, Miss McPherson being terribly cut about the head and Miss Saunders having her nose broken. The girls formerly lived in Eastern Kansas.

Typhoid Fever Among the Jews.

Oakdale (Mass.) special: Typhoid fever has broken out among the families of Russian Jews recently located in town. The people are employed by the L. M. Harris Manufacturing Company, and the disease was brought here by them. They are not the persons whom the New York health authorities are searching for. If any of the Massilia's passengers are in the city the authorities have been unable to find them.

Adelbert D. Sly Confesses.

John I. Martin, in behalf of Adelbert D. Sly, the train robber, entered court at Clayton, St. Louis County, Mo., and pleaded guilty of robbery of the Adams Express Company of some $20,000 on November 30 last. Judge Edwards presided and deferred sentence until the trial of Hedspeth and wife, alleged accomplices of Sly, when sentence will be pronounced upon all three.

Nicaragua Wants a College.

The Republic of Nicaragua has authorized the sale of 40,000 acres of the most fertile public land in the department of New Segevia, in lots not to exceed sixty acres to be used in the cultivation of coffee, sugar cane, etc., the proceeds of which are to be devoted to the establishment in the city of Ocal of a college.

Assaulted by a Convict.

Foreman Edward Patton, of the buckle shop in the Ohio Penitentiary, was assaulted by John Jones, a life convict who used an iron bar. Mr. Patton might have been killed but for the prompt interference of Guard Dan Donavin. Jones was treated to the humming bird and will wear a ball and chain.

Coming to America.

According to a private cable dispatch received at Albany, N. Y., the Prince of Wales and suite of twenty-five persons will pass through Albany on May 27 on their way to Niagara Falls, where rooms at the Clifton House have been engaged. The party's destination is Ottawa. The object of the Prince's visit is not disclosed.

Terrible Accident at Lima.

The saw mill of Jacob Kisting, about ten miles from Lima, Ohio, exploded, killing Mr. Kisting, his son Frank, and John Shiverdecker, an employe. The building was almost entirely demolished. The men were blown into fragments, no piece larger than a person's hand being found.

Town Threatened.

The immense gorge of ice which holds back the waters of the Allegheny River from Brady's Bend to Franklin, Pa., is hourly becoming more formidable. The lower portion of Parker is now in danger, as well as all real low lands between the points named.

The Catholic World Startled.

In court at Cincinnati, recently, the astounding fact leaked out that the Court of Record had declared Archbishop Purcell an imbecile only a few hours before his assignment, which startled the whole Catholic world.

In a Sweet Puddle.

Andrew Roth, 40 years of age, employed in Havemeyer's sugar refinery, Brooklyn, fell into a vat of boiling sugar and was so badly burned before he was rescued that his recovery is considered doubtful.

A Peacemaker Killed.

Daniel Chesbro, while attempting to pacify George Rathbourne, who was quarreling with his wife, near Stonington, Conn., was shot and instantly killed by the infuriated husband.

A Missionary Murdered.

Advices from Alaska are to the effect that Prof. Charles Edwards, a citizen of Dallas County, Iowa, but for the past four years in the employ of the Government in Alaska as teacher and missionary to the Indians, had been brutally murdured by a desperado named Campbell. The particulars, though meager, are thought to be as follows: Campbell had been selling liquor to the Indians, and Prof. Edwards ordered him arrested. The Indians promptly followed the orders and kept Campbell a prisoner by tying him up in a hut until he could be tried and sent to prison. He got loose, however, and for revenge deliberately shot and killed the Professor. The remains will be brought to his home at Earlham, Ia., for interment.

A HERO IN BLACK.

He Rescues an Invalid Lady from Her Burning House.

Louisville (Ky.) special: Mrs. Edward Wetstein, the wife of a wealthy farmer, had a narrow escape from death. In the morning her husband came to this city with some stock, bringing all the farm hands but one, a colored boy, with him. Mrs. Wetstein has been an invalid for years, and cannot leave her bed. In the afternoon the house caught fire, and the whole upper part of the building was quickly a mass of flames. Mrs. Wetstein was unable to move.

Her death seemed certain, and the few neighbors who quickly reached the scene were too panic-stricken to furnish help. Just when she had been abandoned to her fate, a negro boy, who occupies a cabin on the farm, ran into the house, made his way through the smoke and fire up the stairs, and in a few moments later emerged with the unconscious form of Mrs. Wetstein in his arms.

He was severely scorched, but the lady was unharmed, the boy having, with rare presence of mind, wrapped his overcoat about her head. He carried Mrs. Wetstein down to his own cabin, and placed her upon a bed. The neighbors congratulated the boy on his bravery, but coolly mounting a horse he rode after a physician.

The house was completely destroyed, at a loss of $5,000.

COAL CREEK RIOTS

Being Resumed with Renewed Vigor.

A special from Coal Creek, Tenn., dated the 17th inst., says: Company G, of the Twenty-second Regiment, Tennessee Guards, a Gatling gun, and a six-pound howitzer, commanded by Capt. Killer Anderson, is in a strong position commanding the town and railway approaches.

A number of shots are exchanged almost every evening between the miners and troops. Several miners are reported wounded and serious trouble is expected to occur at any moment. Both sides are confident of victory. A shot was fired over the town last night and the excitement among the citizens is intense. The troops are acting very insolently toward the citizens and an outbreak is looked for.

The postmaster was fired upon the other night and driven into his house. Only one mine out of ten is working. One hundred and twenty-three convicts strongly guarded by troops, are stationed at Oliver Springs, but everything is quiet there. The troops raided the quarry on Waldon's Ridge, and captured all the dynamite stored there.

DYING BY THOUSANDS.

Typhus Fever Sweeps Relentlessly Through the Famine Districts of Russia.

A dispatch from Pensa, the capital of the Russian Government of that name, gives additional details regarding the horrible suffering among peasants in that famine-stricken district. Birds, it appears, drop dead from the cold and men are found frozen to death along the roads. The typhus and other fevers and diseases are mowing down the inhabitants. There are 200 dead around Pensa, and 18,000 people are being fed by charity. A quantity of grain has arrived at the city of Penas, but owing to the fact that nearly all the horses in the neighborhood have been killed for food, there are no means of distributing it in the country districts. The dispatch says that matters are even worse in other districts, and in Samara, Sartovo, Charkov, Kazmaa, and Njjini-Novojord the inhabitants are said to be dying by the thousands.

A BRAVE SAILOR

Saves the Lives of His Comrades at the Risk of His Own.

A thrilling story comes from St. Johns, N. F., of the rescue of the crew of the Prince Edward Island schooner Avenger. She was driven on the rocks two miles from St. Johns in a blinding snow storm. While she was pounding to pieces, the boat was launched and immediately swamped. Murdock Willis volunteered to swim ashore with a life line. He was carried ashore on a big wave but could not land, the coast being so precipitious. He was drawn back on board the vessel, where he rested an hour and then tried it again, and successfully. He drew himself up from one point of rocks to another until he reached a place where he could fasten a line. Then he drew ashore a large line, by means of which the captain and crew all got safely to the shore.

Anarchists in Barcelona.

Barcelona special: The troubles in Barcelona between the anarchists and the authorities show no sign of abatement at present, but the two or three disturbances that have occurred this week have not been serious enough to render necessary the calling out of the military to aid the gendarmes in preserving order. Though revolver shots have been exchanged by the police and members of the mob, nobody has been hurt except a woman, who, it is believed, had nothing whatever to do with the affair in which she was wounded. The execution of the four anarchists at Xeres is believed to have precipitated the disturbances, their friends here desiring to show their sympathy for them.

A Second Messiah.

News comes from Iron Hill, Iowa, or, as it is called, the New Jerusalem, in Jackson County, that the Free Methodists of that section have gone wild over a religious craze. Revival meetings are being held, and the entire community has become greatly agitated over religious matters. People come for miles around to attend the meeting. The climax of excitement was reached when the announcement was made in New Jerusalem that a lady had given birth to a child, which the promoters of the meetings declared was none other than a second Messiah. The entire community is perfectly wild with joy, and the statement is almost universally believed.

Over a Bridge.

The regular freight train from West Boston on the Fitchburg road, was wrecked on the Nashau River bridge at Ayer, Mass. The engine and four cars passed over safely, but the twenty-four following cars were thrown from the bridge into the river. Three-fourths of the bridge was badly wrecked. It is thought that the wreck was caused by the breaking of the trucks of the fifth car. The wrecked cars were loaded with hay and grain. Conductor R. G. Connors was last seen upon the top of the cars near the middle of the train. As he has not reported there is but little doubt that he is in the river under the cars.

Thinks He Is Christ.

Chihuahua (Mexico) special: The recent trial of Carmen Maria Lopez, the self-proclaimed Messiah, took place before the Federal Judge at Guerrero, and resulted in the accused being acquitted of the charge of being an impostor. He was brought back to this city, where he was received with great enthusiasm by his Indian followers. The rough journey over the mountains, however, proved too much for the so-called Christ, and he was attacked with a severe sickness. He is now in the City Hospital, and there is no prospect for his recovery. He has announced to the Indians that he will die and rise from his grave in three days.

Frenchmen Inspecting Our Hogs.

Chicago special: A party consisting of Maurice Duclos, the accredited delegate of the Agricultural Department of France. E. Roume of the Foreign Department of the Ministery of Commerce, and A. Riche, member of the Academy of Medicine and professor of chemistry, accompanied by M. Bruvaert, French Consul in Chicago, and others, visited the stock yards and witnessed the preparation of live hogs into sugar-cured hams, etc. They were particularly interested in the microscope inspection department and afterwards expressed themselves pleased and satisfied with the arrangements to insure pure meats.

Saugatuck in Trouble.

Kalamazoo (Mich) special: Officials from Saugatuck are here looking for the original plot of that village, which was recorded in this county in 1824. To their dismay it was found that the plot had been torn from the book and immediately the question arose by whom? It was learned that Jennie Swetland, formerly abstractor here, had once offered to sell a plot of Saugatuck, and as she had been convicted of crooked work in the abstract office, some of the officers propose to question her on the subject. It is of great importance to the village now, as some suits depend on it.

Cash Registers Smashed.

Secret Service Officer John Webb, acting for the U. S. Government, seized twenty-five automatic cash registers at Dayton, Ohio, among the business men because he found on the front of the registers fac-simile representations of twenty-five cent pieces in silver. Three of these pieces were grouped together on each register to represent a trademark of cash. All the registers were destroyed and the manufacturers at Syracuse, N. Y., were notified to stop making the fac-simile of the Government's money, and to call in all machines bearing such fac-simile trademarks.

O'Brien's Shortage.

A committee of the various branches of the Catholic Knights of America, appointed to examine the books of the Grand Treasurer, O'Brien, who was recently indicted for the embezzlement, has made a report through Chairman Dolle, of branch No. 60, Covington, Ky., recommending that Grand Secretary George W. Barr send in his resignation, for the reason that they are satisfied he withheld the knowledge that O'Brien was in default, and therefore was subject to censure. Mr. Barr is of Lebanon, Ky.

Morton Will Not Run.

Information has been received from Washington that Vice President Morton has told President Harrison that he would not be a candidate for the Vice Presidential nomination. Mr. Morton said a man from New York should be on the ticket, and he suggested Secretary Tracy as the one most acceptable to the politicians of the State. It is said that this met with a favorable response from the President.

A General Strike.

Superintendent Darlington formally discharged the striking machinists in the Pan Handle shops at Indianapolis, and announced his intention of hiring new men. The workmen in the other departments at once gave notice that the employment of new men in the shops would be the signal for a general strike. Both sides are determined, and it is believed a general strike cannot be avoided.

Sullivan and Maher to Fight.

John L. Sullivan, champion of the world, and Peter Maher, champion of Ireland, will fight at New Orleans to a finish in August next. The prospective battle is agreed to in writing by the principals. The purse aggregates $35,000.

Cincinnati Gets Religion.

It is estimated that no less than 5,000 people in Cincinnati have been converted to Christianity by the efforts of Mr. Mills, the great revivalist, who is now holding meetings in that city. Great interest is still manifested and hundreds flock to the meetings each night.

The Emperor Coming to the Fair.

Berlin special: At the dinner given by Herr Boetticher, Minister of State, Emperor William said that he was greatly interested in the progress of the Chicago Exposition and would visit it himself if his engagements did not interfere.

THEY WANT FREE WOOL

WOOL CONSUMERS PETITION CONGRESS.

It Is Asked that Schedule K, Relating to Wool and Woolens, in the Tariff Act of 1890, Be Changed for the Relief of Manufacturers and for the Benefit of Consumers.

Petition of the Association.

To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States:

The Wool Consumers' Association respectfully petitions the Fifty-second Congress to change Schedule K, relating to wool and woolens, in the tariff act of 1890, for the relief of woolen manufacturers, and for the benefit of all consumers of woolen fabrics.

It is, of course, undesirable in general to change tariffs frequently, but the general principles of the act of 1890, as applied to wool and woolens, are the same as have been tried unsatisfactorily for very many years, except that it aggravates some of the worst and most oppressive features of the former acts in relation to wool.

The act has therefore practically been tested by the trials of many years, and there is no occasion to test it by longer experience. It is not true that the act, in its present form, can work no harm to woolen manufacturers. It works the same injury to the makers of woolen and worsted cloth that the restrictions on the use of wool always have produced; and, in the case of the carpet trade, which consumes a very large proportion of all the imported wool, it is the most oppressive act ever passed.

The wool schedule (K) of the tariff act of 1890 offers an exceptional opportunity, by amendments making wool free and relatively decreasing both the specific and ad valorem duties on woolen goods, to benefit immensely the woolen manufacturers by giving them free access to the supplies of wool of various qualities, such as all other competing manufacturing countries enjoy, and by reducing thus without injury to manufacturers the cost of their goods to them and to the consumers, while leaving sufficient protection. With free raw materials, the tax on imports of competing goods would be almost entirely for the protection of labor, and as free raw materials would greatly increase the consumption, there would be an increased demand for labor.

Neither is it true that no harm has come to consumers by the law of 1890. In the first place, the increased cost of wool, as compared with prices in Europe, has forced the use of cotton and other adulterants to a great and unusual extent; secondly, if woolen goods have not advanced, they might have been lower but for the duties on wool. There is no question among manufacturers that the act of 1890 was intended to advance prices, nor that it was well calculated to do so to the extent that consumers could afford. The almost universal fall in prices was caused in very small degree, if at all, by the tariff act of 1890. The tremendous losses in the Argentine Republic and elsewhere, the failure of the Barings, the distrust caused by silver legislation, the low price of cotton in the South on account of an enormous crop, the failure of crops in the North and West prior to 1891, causing dull trade and reduced consumption, are the principal causes that brought distress and falling prices.

What those manufacturers and wool growers who arranged the wool schedule with the intention of increasing prices want, is, no doubt, to be let alone, so that the tariff act may produce under more favorable auspices the results they expected and worked for. But the rest that the public needs is a permanent relief from taxes which oppress both them and manufacturers, which hamper the latter, as every manufacturer admits, and which largely increase the cost of woolen goods to the public. The readjustment of the tariff on the basis of free wool, is perfectly simple; it needs but the removal of the duties on wool and a corresponding reduction of the duties on goods which were put on to offset the cost of the wool duties. Here is a great boon to every manufacturer of wool and every consumer. It is absurd to say that, because the duty is taken off of one article, free trade must follow. Congress is not obliged to adopt free trade because the duty is taken off of wool, any more than it was when it made jute or tea or coffee or sugar free.

The growth of the wool manufacture has undoubtedly been great during the past thirty years, for the country, with its vast natural resources and enormous immigration, has increased vastly in population and wealth; but the growth of the manufacture would be much more prosperous and much greater with free wool, and its growth and prosperity mean larger use of domestic wools and higher prices abroad for all competing wools.

It is clear from the statements of the National Association of Wool Manufacturers and from undoubted facts, emphasized by the vast increase in the imports of wool since the passage of the act of 1890 and by the falling prices of Ohio wool, that this country produces practically no carpet wool to supply the demand for nearly 100,000,000 pounds needed by the carpet manufacturers, and only a part of the clothing and combing wools needed; and it is further to be considered that the use of wool for so-called "woolens" would be much larger if the restrictions of the wool duties did not greatly reduce the consumption of wool and largely increase the use of shoddy and cotton in so-called woolen goods.

And this is the case after a long series of years of high duties on wool. In the theory of the "new protection," it is laid down as a principle that "the necessities entering into the daily life of the mass of the people which we cannot economically produce should be made free."

On this principle wool should certainly be made free. It is a most important article for all the people. It is produced in this country in inadequate quantities. Some indispensable grades can be produced in this country only under conditions unfavorable as compared with those of other countries. High duties for a quarter of a century have failed to produce any carpet wool in this country, and have also failed to produce an adequate supply of the wools needed for the woolen and worsted manufacture. And, as wool can be made free with a large reduction in cost of goods and with very little disturbance of trade or of interference with sufficient protection, it is only reasonable that the changes suggested in schedule K of the act of 1890 should be made for the benefit of the whole people.

Decline in Iron Industry of Massachusetts.

The effects on the iron industry of New England of the high duties on iron ore, pig and scrap iron is well summarized by Mr. Horace P. Tobey, of the Lemont Nail Works, in the New England Almanac for 1892.

Through nearly two and a half centuries, with their wonderful changes, Massachusetts always held, down to 1880, noticeable prominence as an iron manufacturing State. Of her condition at about that time, Mr. Swank, author of "Iron in All Ages," says: "Nearly all the bloomary and refinery forges and old style furnaces of New England have long disappeared, and in their stead have grown reproductive iron industries of almost endless variety and vast extent, employing large numbers of skilled mechanics and adding greatly to the productive wealth of the country. The rolling mills, machine shops, hardware establishments, nail and tack factories, foundries and other iron enterprises of New England, together with a few steel works and modern blast furnaces (nearly all of the latter still using charcoal, however,) form to-day a striking contrast to the bog ore and other bloomaries, not much larger than a blacksmith's fire, and the small charcoal furnaces and chimney-corner nail factories of the last century."

But in 1880 the iron industries of Massachusetts, strong in the possession of the experience of two and a half centuries and of trained mechanics in whose families iron-working had become hereditary, began strangely enough to decline.

In 1880 there were forty-one rolling mills in New England, of which twenty-five were in Massachusetts. In 1891 there were but twenty-one active rolling mills in New England, of which ten were in Massachusetts.

In 1880 there were twelve cut nail factories in Massachusetts; in 1891 there were but two in operation.

In 1880 there were reported as produced in Massachusetts 116,846 tons of rolled iron; in 1887 only 45,853 tons; and several mills have retired since that date.

In 1880 the United States census reports ennumerated 217 puddling furnaces in New England, of which 191 were in Massachusetts. In 1890 and 1891 there was not, as the writer thinks, a ton of pig iron puddled in New England, and certainly very little if any.

In 1887 there were 30,683 tons of steel rails made in Massachusetts; in 1890 none.

Such has been the effect of maintaining the high duties on crude iron.

Tariff Shot.

Under the operation of high duties the price of domestic wool has always gone down. Under low tariffs, however, wool has risen in price. On this point we have the testimony of Mr. Thomas Dolan, who declared in a letter to the New York World on the fall in the price of wool as a result of the increased duties imposed by the McKinley tariff that it was distinctly promised by the protectionists who took part in the conferences of wool growers and manufacturers. And Senator Sherman said in the debate on the tariff of 1883: "In 1867 the price of wool was 51 cents; in 1880, 46 cents. This was the result of the policy of protecting the wool grower, as it is in all industries, to gradually reduce the price. Under the operation of the existing tariff (the tariff of 1867) the price of wool has gradually gone down."

All wools were free of duty down to 1824, when a duty of 15 to 30 per cent. was imposed. This duty was increased by the tariff of 1828 to 4 cents per pound and 50 per cent. Under the compromise tariff of 1833 the duty was gradually lowered, and in 1842 it stood at 4 cents per pound and 26 per cent. The tariff of 1842 raised it again to 3 cents per pound and 30 per cent. The act of 1846 made the duty on wool 30 per cent; that of 1857 put low grades on the free list and cut down the rate on all other wools to 24 per cent. The Morrill tariff of 1861 increased the duty to 9 cents per pound, and the special wool tariff of 1867 raised the duties to 10 cents per pound and 11 per cent. on clothing wools, and 12 cents per pound and 10 per cent. on combing wools. The tariff of 1882 took off the ad valorem duties, but left the pound duties as they were, and the McKinley tariff added another cent to the duty on clothing wools.

Graphically illustrated, the average price of medium Ohio wool in the seaboard markets has been as follows under each tariff.

The average prices given are compiled from Mawger & Curry's circular, as printed in the "Statistical Abstract of the United States."

1. Wool free of duty. Price the first half of 1824, 49½ cents per pound, or
2. High wool duties, 1825-1832. Average price of wool 42½ cents per pound, or
3. Lower wool duties, 1833-1842. Average price of wool, 48.9 cents per pound, or
4. Higher wool duties, 1843-1846. Average price of wool, 33½ cents per pound.
5. Lower wool duties, 1847-1856. Average price of wool 40 3-5 cents per pound, or
6. Still lower wool duties, 1857-1860. Average price of wool, 44¾ cents per pound, or
7. Wool duties raised, 1861-1866. Average price of wool 44¾ cents per pound, or
8. Wool duties raised still higher, 1867-1890. Average price of wool, 41½ cents per pound, or
9. McKinley tariff. Present price of XX Ohio wool, 29½@30 cents per pound, or

This confirms the statement made by Senator Sherman to the effect that high wool duties are accompanied by low prices of domestic wools, and that when the tariff on foreign wools is low domestic wools command higher prices.

BRASS manufacturers at Bridgeport, Conn., have cut down the wages in the screw department from $2 to $1.75 per day, and have increased the hours of work from nine hours to ten. Molders' wages have been cut from $2.50 to $1.90, and the wages of women reduced from $1.20 to 65 cents. The Clark Box Company, of Danbury, Conn., has reduced the wages of nailers 20 per cent. Both of these Connecticut concerns were ardent supporters of the McKinley tariff, and sought to convince their workingmen that high tariff and high wages were almost equivalent terms.

THE McKinley organs still cackle over the large increase of exports as the effect of the tariff, and especially of the reciprocity treaty. But the official returns of trade show that, with the exception of the exports of wheat and wheat flour, which have been enormously stimulated by reason of the famine in Russia and the partial failure of the crops in France and Germany, nearly all other staple exports of this country have declined under the operation of McKinleyism.

THE imports of tinplate within the last ten months amounted to 697,732,207 pounds, against an importation of 614,729,703 pounds in the same months of 1890—an increase of 83,000,000 pounds. These figures indicate that the domestic production of tinplate, of which we read so much about in the McKinley organs, has had little effect upon the foreign supply.

SARAH ALTHEA INSANE.

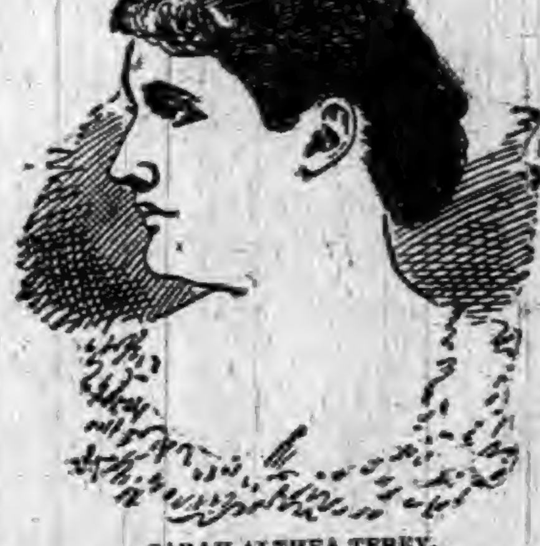
SAID TO BE DRIVEN CRAZY BY SPIRITUALISM.

The Noted Litigant Imagines She Hears Voices from the Other World Through a Handkerchief—Placed Under Gentle Restraint by Friends.

Now a Physical Wreck.

Sarah Althea Terry, who gained such notoriety by her divorce suit against ex-Senator Sharon and her subsequent marriage with Judge Terry, has become insane over spiritualism. She has been very eccentric ever since Terry was shot down by Officer Naegle at the Lathrop eating station the moment after he slapped Justice Field's face. The fact that the court held Naegle blameless drove her nearly insane, and this feeling was aggravated by troubles which she had with her attorney in Fresno. She claimed this attorney made love to her and she produced several amatory letters he had written. This enraged him, and when she called at his office to get her law papers he brutally ejected her. To the disgrace of the Fresno courts they held that his action was justifiable.

The doctor says it is a clear case of dementia due to worry over her affairs and dabbling in spiritualism. She sits for hours in one place with a pocket handkerchief rolled up and placed to her ear like the holder of a telephone. She says she gets all kinds of messages through this handkerchief from her friends in the spirit land, and she handed the handkerchief to a reporter who saw her and asked him if he didn't hear whispers coming through it. She looks very old and haggard, and her pale face is flushed with fever. Her pulse runs high, but she seems insensible to heat or cold.



SARAH ALTHEA TERRY.

At night Sarah becomes very violent and calls loudly for Judge Terry and for Porter Ashe, whom she says she loves dearly, as his father was a bosom friend of Terry in early days and was arrested and confined by a vigilance committee for opposing them. Porter Ashe married Amy Crocker, but she secured a divorce after much scandal. He is well known on the turf, as he is the owner of Geraldine and other fast horses. He befriended Mrs. Terry after the shooting of her husband and is about the only one of Terry's old friends who has been able to endure her caprices.

The poor woman is a physical and mental wreck, although she is not over 40 years old. She had only a remnant of property left, Judge Terry's estate having been heavily mortgaged and badly managed. When the Sharon divorce suit began in March, 1884, she was a remarkably handsome woman, and since then she has been almost constantly before the public.

Some months ago Mrs. Terry reported to the police that $7,000 worth of silks and laces had been stolen from her trunk. It was found that she never had any such goods.

Unless her brother, Morgan Hill, intervenes she will be sent to an asylum in a few days. No intervention is probable, as she was disowned by all her relatives long ago, and, besides, her mania is of too violent a type for her to be at large. Once handsome, in a dashing, brilliant way, Mrs. Terry is now a wreck in body as well as mind, and bears on her face lines that tell of fierce passions, a life of storm and violence, and of bitter defeat.

TO IMPROVE THE MISSISSIPPI.

A Bill Appropriating $15,000,000 Approved by a Senate Committee.

After hearing from engineers, officers of the government, and delegations appointed to lay the matter before Congress, the Senate Committee on Commerce has decided to recommend the adoption of a most liberal policy for the improvement of the great internal waterway furnished by the Mississippi River. It was decided that the bill recently introduced by Senator Gibson, of Louisiana, was better adapted to secure satisfactory results than any other. As it will be reported to the Senate, the bill makes an appropriation of $15,000,000 for the improvement of the Mississippi River, whereof $10,000,000 shall be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War, in accordance with such plan of the Mississippi River Commission as may be approved by the chief of engineers, to build, repair and extend the levees, dykes, and other works on the river from the passes to the mouth of the Ohio and for the payment of the salaries and expenses of the commission. There is a proviso that not more than $2,000,000 of this appropriation shall be expended in any one year; that it shall not be expended longer than the State and local authorities continue their present contributions for levee improvements; and that none of the money shall be used for the purchase of sites for levees or damages for their construction. The second section of the bill provides that $5,000,000 of the appropriation shall be expended by the Secretary of War on the same section of the river, in accordance with the plans of the chief of engineers, the yearly allotments not to exceed $1,000,000. The bill commits Congress to the levee system of river improvements. It was reported to the Senate by Senator Gibson, its author.

CHAPTER XXVI—Continued.

It was fully two hours before the bandit band reached the ravine. The rain was now falling in torrents; the situation was a most gloomy and uncomfortable one. Before them ran the river, broad and deep, and with a swift current.

"Ha! What is this?"

Danton's words announced that he had found a canoe. It was quite large, and evidently belonged to the Indians. Where it lay there were marks on the bank as if a second canoe had recently been there.

"The girl must have escaped by way of the river," remarked Despard.

"Yes, and she had help."

"How do you know that?"

"There are the footprints of two persons here."

"Ha!"

"Both small and apparently those of women."

"Then she had a companion?"

"Undoubtedly. One of them wore moccasins."

"An Indian?"

"The Modoc princess."

"Impossible!"

"It must be White Fawn."

Despard turned pale. He dreaded the vengeance of Shadow Snake and his daughter.

"Let us hasten," he said.

"And take the canoe?"

"Yes."

"It will not hold more than half of us."

"Then let the others cross over and get away from the Indians as best they can."

This plan was consummated. A portion of the band were rowed across the river. Despard, Danton and the others then directed the canoe to midstream and allowed it to proceed down the stream.

They passed the cliff and the ravine in safety and soon left it far behind. Apparently they were safe from pursuit, and would not be followed in time to be overtaken. The Modocs, in the ravine beyond their foe in the fort, had not witnessed their departure. Somewhere down the river, in advance of them, they theorized, was the canoe containing the Modoc princess and their escaped captive, Inez Tracey.

CHAPTER XXVII.

THE MODOCS.

The plots and movements of Dyke Despard, the bandit leader, were fast approaching a climax, as he was soon to learn in a tragic and unexpected manner.

The Indians whom his spy had discovered in the ravine were indeed members of Shadow Snake's tribe, and he had avoided a deadly conflict by his timely escape. The savages had located his recent camp, had trailed him to the ravine, and later explored the cliff, but found no trace of him.

Darrel Grey had remained faithfully at his post in the fort.

When the rain and mist obscured the outlaws he did not retreat from the intrenchment, but endeavored to watch the cliff as best he could. Thus hidden by the gloom, the outlaws escaped without his knowledge. He was amazed when at last the mists were dispersed and he saw no trace of his enemies in the vicinity.

Instead, a score of dusky warriors were ascending the winding mountain paths.

What did it mean?

He was perplexed and somewhat alarmed at the discovery. The savages seemed to be following a trail and were coming directly to the summit of the cliff. Sooner or later he must be discovered, and resistance against such superior numbers would be folly. Besides, by this time White Fawn and Inez must have effected their escape.

He could not explain the mysterious disappearance of the bandits, but he observed that there was a possibility of leaving the fort and retreating before the Indians reached the summit of the cliff.

Darrel began to creep behind the rocks in the direction the Modoc princess and Inez had gone. He saw, some distance away, a place where he might essay a descent to the valley, and hastened to reach it.

Suddenly he started in dismay.

As if by magic, two stalwart savages had darted across his path. Before he could retreat or advance they had seized him securely.

They gave utterance to a triumphant yell, and began to lead him toward the ravine where their chief was. Darrel faced his enemies boldly as they gathered around him.

Shadow Snake listened to the rapid words of Darrel's captors, in explanation of their researches. Then he turned to the prisoner.

"Ugh!" he ejaculated; "who is the pale-face?"

Shadow Snake did not evidently recognize Darrel as the man he had liberated at White Fawn's request at the outlaws' stronghold in Lone Canyon. In his new disguise, the Modoc chief did not suppose his present prisoner and his daughter's friend to be the same person.

"I am the friend of the White Fawn," he said, simply.

The chief started.

"Ugh! The pale-face knows the princess?"

"Yes."

"You have seen her of late?"

"A few hours since."

"Where?"

Briefly Darrel related how he had met the White Fawn. He told the Snake that he had once saved his daughter's life. He related how he had rescued Inez from Despard, and detailed the pursuit and the attack on the mountain hut. The old chief's eyes blazed fiercely as Darrel spoke Despard's name.

"Ugh!" he uttered savagely. "The Black Crow shall be trailed. Whither has he gone?"

"I do not know."

"And the Fawn?"

"Escaped by the ravine to the river."

Shadow Snake held a brief conference with his braves.

"The Eagle shall be the friend of the Snake," said the Modoc chief to Darrel. "Together we will find and punish the Crow."

Darrel showed the rattlesnake chain White Fawn had given him, and this cemented the confidence and friendship of the Modoc braves. Shadow Snake at once went around the cliff, and reached the ravine on the other side

"The canoes are gone!" he uttered angrily, as they came to the spot where Despard had reached the river.

Indian sagacity soon formed a theory as to their theft, which proved to be the correct one. The canoes they learned had evidently been taken at intervals.

"The Fawn went first with the pale-face maiden," explained Shadow Snake.

"Why do you think so?" Darrel ventured to inquire

"Because the boat was pushed into the water as an Indian would do it, and the paddles were used at the side to aid its progress. The Crow has gone in pursuit. Some of his men were taken across the river."

"Why?"

"Because there was not room enough for them in the canoe."

Shadow Snake gave rapid orders as he arrived at these conclusions. He divided his band, and sent half of them in pursuit of the outlaws who had crossed the river. With the others and Darrel Grey he started down the banks of the stream.

Meanwhile the objects of Darrel's solicitude, White Fawn and Inez, had met with some exciting adventures. The Indian maiden and her charge had managed to reach the ravine in safety after leaving Darrel Grey. They had observed the canoes, and White Fawn selected one of them. She knew that the river led to some settlements, and for the present her only thought was to place Inez in a position of safety.

The rain made their situation extremely uncomfortable, but White Fawn resolutely plied the paddles, and they made swift progress. It was not until after noon that any incident occurred that in any way tended to alarm them.

At a point where the river divided, as she looked back, the Fawn saw a canoe coming down the stream about a mile distant. This caused her to hasten the progress of their own boat. An hour later, in the distance, she heard the sound of shooting, and she determined to abandon the canoe

Then followed a weary tramp through the forests. At last, towards nightfall, they reached what looked like a mining settlement. Then a small village came into view, and on its outskirts they came across a rather pretentious inn, designated by a large sign-board as the Fair Play Tavern.

"We have reached a place of safety," said the Modoc princess, as she designated the tavern. "You are wearied and pale. See; yonder is a white squaw. Speak to her."

A woman, apparently the landlord's wife, was visible at the rear door of the inn. Inez approached and addressed her.

She told her briefly that she and her companion had lost their way, met with bandits, and wished to remain at the inn all night. The sight of money influenced the woman to agree to give them shelter.

A sigh of relief escaped the lips of Inez as she found herself with White Fawn in a comfortable room of the tavern. She, however, expressed a deep anxiety for her lover's safety. White Fawn stated that with the morning she would return to the scene of their recent adventures.

A meal was served in their room, and Inez sat at the window gazing out at the front of the tavern.

She started and uttered a cry of dread as the lights from the bar-room showed two new arrivals. At a glance she recognized them as Danton and Dyke Despard.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

AT THE TAVERN.

The two men who had just entered the Fair Play tavern were indeed Dyke Despard and his evil accomplice, Danton. At the sight of them new terror and apprehension seized the timid Inez, and even White Fawn looked anxious and concerned.

Had they, however, known the true condition of affairs with the outlaws they would have been less fearful of their power to injure them. For retribution, swift and terrible, seemed to have followed the bandits, and the arrival of their leaders at the tavern was in the nature of a flight from their enemies.

The canoe containing the outlaws had nearly overtaken the fugitives. The Modocs had pursued the bandits. Despard and his men had been attacked by the Indians at a bend in the river.

Shadow Snake was their leader and Darrel Grey was among them. Before the startled outlaws could prepare for a defense, a deadly hail of leaden bullets was poured into their midst.

Instantly the river became the scene of the greatest confusion and excitement. The canoe, penetrated by the bullets, sank in midstream, and those not killed or wounded tried to swim to the opposite shore.

Of their number only two escaped—Despard and Danton—and they were both slightly wounded. Of the others not one escaped the dread vengeance of the Modocs.

The bandit leaders gained the shore, evaded pursuit, and, as has been seen, reached the Fair Play Tavern shortly after the arrival of the fugitives.

They entered the bar-room, seeking to evade notice, and passed into the ante-room behind the bar. The landlord, who was the banker, merchant and magistrate of the place, followed them with no sign of recognition on his face.

"Well, gentlemen——" he began.

"What! you don't know us?" said Danton.

"Despard!" he finally ejaculated, after staring at them for some moments.

"Exactly, and in trouble. See here, Marvin, we're in a bad box, and we've got to leave the country."

"How is that?"

"Close the door and we will tell you."

The landlord did so, and Despard began speaking in a rapid, confidential tone. His words indicated that in the past the now presumably respectable landlord of the tavern had been a man as unprincipled and criminal as himself.

He narrated his recent adventures, and informed Marvin that he must shelter them for a day or two, and then provide them with horses to leave the country.

"It's lucky you were disguised when you came in here," said Marvin, "for the community are terribly aroused about your helping the Modocs in the attack on the wagon train."

Despard scowled and looked disturbed.

"Well, well," he said, impatiently; "can you stow us away in a place of safety?"

"Yes."

"Where?"

"There's a room yonder that no one can get to except through here."

"But if the vigilantes knew we were here and should search for us?"

"There's a trap in the floor leading to the cellar and thence to the stables. How are the vigilantes going to know it?"

"Because we have many enemies on our trail, and will undoubtedly be closely pursued. Bring us something to eat and drink, will you? We are nearly famished."

Despard and Danton retired to the room beyond the one they were in.

"We're safe enough here," remarked the latter with a complacent glance at their comfortable surroundings.

Despard surveyed the apartment critically.

"Not if Ranger Ralph and that young scout Grey trace us," replied Despard. "Where does this door lead to?"

"To the outside hall, I suppose. But it's bolted heavily on this side."

"I'm going to see"

Despard was some time operating the bolt, which apparently had not been used for years. He finally slid it back in its socket and opened it cautiously It led, as Danton had suggested, to a hall that ran from the upper to the rear portion of the house.

Despard seemed determined to understand his surroundings, and to be prepared for an escape under all contingencies. He stepped into the hall, which was in complete darkness, and closed the door after him He saw that to attempt to leave by the rear of the house would be folly if the place was surrounded. He cautiously ascended the stair a few steps.

"If it comes to the worst we can retreat," he muttered. "Ha! What was that?"

Distinctly from the hall above he caught the sound of voices. He thrilled wildly as he recognized them, for they were those of Inez and White Fawn.

"Return to the room," the latter was saying.

"But every moment we delay is fatal, with that man in the house."

"The Black Crow can not know that we are here," responded the Indian maiden.

"He will soon learn of it. Let us fly."

"And be pursued and overtaken by him? No, we are safer here. Return to the room, and I will find out our true peril."

"Then see the landlady," urged Inez. "If she will provide us with horses we will leave at once."

"Be it so. I will return soon."

The eyes of the outlaw chief gleamed triumphantly. The fugitives he had abandoned as effectually escaped were under the same roof. He must devise a plan to secure Inez and the diamonds at once.

The Modoc princess was about to descend the stairs. She must not discover him yet. Despard silently retreated and cautiously re-entered the room where Danton was. He started as he did so. Danton stood by a table pale and alarmed. Confronting him with drawn revolver were two men.

Their backs were to Despard, and they had not noticed his entrance. The outlaw stood spellbound as he recognized one of them as Darrel Grey. The other revealed himself by speaking at that moment.

"Jim Danton," he was saying, in a low, determined tone, "if you do not instantly tell us where Dyke Despard is I will kill you!"

It was the outlaw's bitterest enemy who spoke—Ranger Ralph.

CHAPTER XXIX.

A VILLAIN'S TRIUMPH.

The toils were fast closing in upon the heartless persecutors of the beautiful and innocent Inez Tracey, and in a flash Dyke Despard realized that a vital moment in all his plots had arrived.

He knew that a word to the rough but honest throng in the bar-room of the tavern would lead to his arrest, and a trial in which Judge Lynch would award him the fate of death by hanging.

How these two men happened to meet at the tavern—how they had managed to penetrate to this room—he could not surmise.

Even Danton, terrified at their sudden appearance, did not notice Despard's return to the apartment.

For a moment the outlaw chief seemed about to draw a weapon and spring upon his unsuspecting foes. Then his eye flashed fiercely, as a surer and more silent means of disposing of them came to his mind.

Marvin had told him of the trap-door leading to the cellar. As his eye fell upon the floor, he noted that both of the newcomers stood upon that portion of it which comprised the trap. Sunk in the floor at the extreme edge was a small bolt. To draw this back meant to release the trap-door, Despard doubted not.

He determined to boldly risk all on operating it, to the disaster of his foes. He stepped forward cautiously. His hand reached the bolt. There was a creaking sound. Ranger Ralph turned quickly, but too late to avert the disaster.

The door fell with a crash. Both men were precipitated into the gloom and darkness of the cellar. A low cry of malignant triumph escaped Despard's lips.

"Baffled!" he cried. "Quick, Danton, the lamp!"

His companion brought the light to the trap. Despard peered eagerly into the dark void. Fully fifteen feet below, upon a rocky, uneven floor, lay two forms. Apparently the fall had robbed their enemies of sensibility.

A ladder led from the trap downward. This Despard pulled up into the room. Then he closed and locked the trap-door just as the landlord entered the room.

The latter seemed somewhat excited. "I guess you were right about being pursued," he said.

"Why so?" asked Despard.

"Two men came into the bar-room a few minutes since who acted very suspiciously."

"Where are they now?"

"I don't know. They disappeared very mysteriously."

"They came here."

"What?" ejaculated Marvin, incredulously.

"Yes, they came here."

"You knew them?"

"As our deadliest foes."

"And they are gone?"

"Into yonder trap."

In graphic language Despard detailed what had occurred.

"Can they escape readily?" he asked as he concluded his recital.

"Not unless they know the way to a secret door to the stables."

"Then let us act. Marvin, do you wish to make a few thousand dollars."

"Of course I do."

"Very well. In this house now there are two girls."

Marvin started. "How did you know that?" he asked surprisedly.

"I do know it. One of them—the white one—I love. The other, an Indian girl, has her fortune in diamonds in her possession."

The landlord's eyes gleamed avariciously as Despard unfolded his plan. Marvin was to act in immediate collusion with them.

"The men in the cellar will be insensible till we are away," said Despard. "You get your wife to pretend to befriend the girls."

"I'll fix all that, only I must not appear as being in your plot. It would hurt me among my customers."

"We'll manage all that."

Thus it was when, half an hour later, Inez and White Fawn stole from the tavern. The landlady had pretended to aid them but was only acting under orders from her husband. She told them to go to an old hut a few rods from the house, where she would bring them horses a little latter.

She had left a lantern with them, and the two girls stood silent and alone, watching its flickering rays and anxiously awaiting the woman's return.

A wild cry of dismay arose from Inez Tracey's lips, as the doorway suddenly framed two forms. In a moment Despard and Danton came into view. The latter seized the Indian girl. Despite her struggles, her arms were quickly bound behind her.

"You have not escaped us yet," hissed Despard, as he grasped Inez' arm. "Make no outcry if you value your safety."

Paralyzed with terror, poor Inez stood pale and mute, shrinking in horror from the triumphant face of her enemy.

"Danton," spoke the outlaw chief, "you know your part. Search the Indian girl for the diamonds."

White Fawn did not speak, but her dark eyes flashed fiercely on the man who had so wronged her. Danton uttered a cry of delight as he drew from the dress of the Indian girl a small box, which he examined hastily.

"The jewels?" asked Despard, eagerly.

"Yes."

"Very well. Secure them safely and watch your captive."

There was a mocking smile on the face of White Fawn, despite her perilous situation.

"Now, then," spoke Despard quickly to the shrinking Inez, I have only a few words to speak to you."

"Miscreant! Will your evil plots and persecutions never cease?"

"Not until you are my wife."

"That will be never."

"We shall see. I have your fortune, in the jewels and the deeds to the lands your father left you."

"I care not."

"But I covet your love. If you wed me and go with me, yonder girl shall live. Your lover Darrel Grey and your friend Ranger Ralph are lying insensible in the rear of the tavern."

Inez uttered a frantic cry of grief.

"All shall die, unless you wed me. Outside the hut is a magistrate. Agree?"

Poor Inez sobbed bitterly.

"Danton, kill the Indian!"

Danton raised a gleaming knife.

"No, no!" shrieked Inez, frantically. "I agree!"

Almost at the same moment Marvin entered the hut.

It was a strange scene—a dread mockery—a delirium of emotion—in which Inez only knew that she heard the words that made her Dyke Despard's wife to save her friends.

Almost in a swoon, she was led from the hut and placed on a horse. Despard held the bridle and mounted another steed.

"You shall hear from us soon, Marvin," he said. "Come, Danton."

They had left the Indian girl bound in the hut. Ten minutes later utter silence reigned over the scene. And in the near distance, Dyke Despard was bearing away the beautiful Inez—his wife—successful, apparently, at last in securing the fortune for which he had so long and deftly plotted.

CHAPTER XXX.

CONCLUSION.

"Hold!"

Like a shock the word sounded upon the hearing of Danton. It was less than an hour after the departure from the hut, and he and his companion had gained a moonlit mountain path, and were rapidly making their way from the vicinity of the tavern.

Inez, weeping bitterly, allowed Despard to lead her horse as he would, and he did not annoy her by speaking to her, although he kept a close surveillance over her every movement.

Danton had lagged behind, his horse having loosened a shoe. He had dismounted and was about to hasten to rejoin his companion, when he became conscious that two men blocked his way.

One of them flashed quickly by him, and he thrilled as he seemed to recognize in him his dreaded enemy, Ranger Ralph. The other had gained his side so quickly that they were face to face.

"Draw a weapon and I fire," spoke the ominous voice of Darrel Grey.

He held a gleaming revolver in his hand, before which the craven Danton quailed in terror.

"Fling your weapons in the road—quick!"

There was no mistaking the stern menace in the young scout's voice. Danton sullenly complied with his demand.

"You are my prisoner," spoke Darrel. "In a few moments I shall take you back, a bound captive, to the settlement. We escaped from the cellar—we saw your victim, White Fawn. Return at once the box of jewels you took from her."

Danton drew the box from his coat. Then suddenly he flung it far over the edge of the cliff.

Darrel uttered a cry of dismay.

"Kill me if you will. I have robbed you of half your triumph," cried Danton. "Ha! I am not beaten yet!"

Taking advantage of Darrel's dismay at the loss of the jewels he had sprung towards him. It was a fatal movement, for it startled the horse, and Danton's foot became entangled in the drooping reins With a cry of terror, Darrel saw the horse drag him a few feet, and then send him crashing over the edge of the precipice.

Danton had met his doom in the rock-choked river below!

A series of shots some distance ahead warned Darrel that his friend, Ranger Ralph, had probably met Despard. A few minutes later he came upon them.

The ranger had indeed overtaken Despard, had torn his grasp from the bridle-rein of Inez's horse, and then a deadly conflict had ensued.

They had emptied their revolvers at short range. Neither had been seriously injured. Just as Darrel reached the spot, the outlaw had darted up a steep incline.

"We shall meet again!" he cried. "You have triumphed this time—help!"

The word gurgled in his throat. As he reached the summit of the eminence, a deafening detonation rang forth.

Pierced by a hundred bullets, Dyke Despard fell dead.

He had run directly into an ambush of the very Indians who had accompanied Darrel to the vicinity of Fair Play. A moment later Shadow Snake appeared. His vengeance was complete—his foe was dead, and the outlaw band of Despard was swept from the face of the earth.

Two hours later affairs had resumed a quiet aspect Inez, enraptured at again meeting Darrel, was conveyed by the Modocs to a settlement farther down the river.

Here White Fawn met her father, and here there was a tearful parting, for she started forth with her father's tribe to find some trace of the husband of whom she had been robbed by the villain Despard.

One month later her grateful friends were happy to know that she had found him—a prisoner in a hostile tribe. They were reunited, and returned with Shadow Snake to their old camping ground, peace being declared with the white inhabitants of the district.

Ranger Ralph related a long story of his search for Inez, and the next day a visit was made to the valley where Danton was killed, resulting in the finding of the box of jewels.

Marvin was not punished for his share in Despard's plot, as nothing definite could be proven against him.

Walford, the hermit, was found and a month later was present at the marriage of Inez and Darrel.

The happy pair removed to California, and both their old friends accompanied them.

Often they see the brave Indian girl who so befriended them.

Amid their happiness they never forgot these stanch friends of the past. And among them all, they reckon none more highly than the intrepid scout who followed all their reverse fortunes in the days when they sought to secure the treasures of Lone Canyon—the king of border detectives, Ranger Ralph.

THE application of the talc or French chalk to textile fabrics is a French invention. It is used in the proportion of about 6 per cent of the weight of the fabric, which it gives a beautiful luster and softness.

A VETERAN hunter says that there are twice as many large game animals in Maine now as there were ten years ago, and attributes this fact to the faithful enforcement of the game laws.

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN NERVINE TONIC —AND— Stomach AND Liver Cure

The Most Astonishing Medical Discovery of the Last One Hundred Years.

The Great South American Nervine Tonic

Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stomach. No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incalculable value who is affected by disease of the stomach, because the experience and testimony of many go to prove that this is the ONE and ONLY ONE great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.

HARRIET E. HALL, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to the Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration, and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors, with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly."

MRS. ELLA A. BRATTON, of New Ross, Indiana, says: "I cannot express how much I owe to the Nervine Tonic. My system was completely shattered, appetite gone, was coughing and spitting up blood; am sure I was in the first stages of consumption, an inheritance handed down through several generations. I began taking the Nervine Tonic, and continued its use for about six months, and am entirely cured. It is the grandest remedy for nerves, stomach and lungs I have ever seen."

No remedy compares with SOUTH AMERICAN NERVINE as a cure for the Nerves. No remedy compares with South American Nervine as a wonderful cure for the Stomach. No remedy will at all compare with South American Nervine as a cure for all forms of failing health. It never fails to cure Indigestion and Dyspepsia. It never fails to cure Chorea or St. Vitus' Dance. Its powers to renew the whole system are wonderful in the extreme. It cures the old, the young, and the middle aged. It is a great friend to the aged and infirm. Do not neglect to use this precious boon; if you do, you may neglect the only remedy which will restore you to health. South American Nervine is perfectly safe, and very pleasant to the taste. Delicate ladies, do not fail to use this great cure, because it will put the bloom of freshness and beauty upon your lips and cheeks and quickly drive away your disabilities and weaknesses.

PARTIES are talking up an aluminum factory at Anderson, Ind. They agree to make this metal at a cost of 25 cents a pound. A few years ago it was dearer than silver. We would now like to hear our republican exchanges say whether McKinley did this.

RECIPROCITY is pretty thin. Let us manage to open the markets of the whole world to our products of farm and factory. Then we can sell all we can make or raise, and prices will be better. Ask our older people who remember the prices before the war.

THE Press says it "can name more free traders now, than it could a few years ago." Quite likely. Republican war tariffs, that keep getting higher the farther away from the war we get, are enough to drive the most patient man into extremes of opinion.

GRAPE vines are being sent from this country to Italy, as it is proved they are more hardy than their own vines. Possibly, the beneficent McKinley bill is what makes them so hardy. We look to see republican papers claim this, anyway. It will be no sillier than their other claims.

THE possibility of passing a law against speculating in "futures" on the grain market caused a little flurry among dealers last week. Grain dealers generally object to the law, and whether its passage would do the good that is expected, no one can tell, we presume, until it is tried.

THE Press complains that we attack its tariff "article piecemeal." Not so. We attacked the whole of it, and the Press finds itself unable to answer even "piecemeal." And the COURIER don't have to secure "bureau articles." Only republican papers do that, and so are not able to answer criticisms.

STATE encampment of G. A. R. and state meeting of the W. R. C., are to be held in Ft. Wayne, April 6 and 7. This is the 30th anniversary of the battle of Shiloh, and the 26th organization of the G. A. R. Ft. Wayne will do herself credit by the liberal welcome she will give her visitors at that date.

JUDGE MCCLELLAN'S bill to tax all government bonds, stocks, etc., is meeting general favor among all classes. We believe the people have always favored this, but republican leaders have persistently fooled the people into voting the ticket that was opposed to it. How much longer will they deceive the people?

THE people's party asks for reduction of tariff, taxing national securities and and bonds, free silver, the election of U. S senators by the people, etc. All these things the democrats also favor. The two parties should unite and they can get all these things. If divided, their enemies, the republicans, may succeed, and the people get nothing.

HENDRYX, who murdered Calkins and was tried at Goshen a year or two ago, may get clear, as since the supreme court requires him to be tried again, it appears that Mrs. Calkins, the chief witness cannot be found. It will be remembered that Judge VanFleet would not allow Calkin an attorney at public expense, for he had a father who was able to pay for one. But the supreme court said he should have had an attorney to defend him.

MCKINLEY raised the tariff on barley from 10 under the old law, to 30 cents under the new in order to protect the barley raising farmers of York state. This high duty nearly ruined the beer making for a certain amount of the grain had to be obtained in Canada. Now, the farmers cannot sell to the breweries that have shut down, and their barley must be sold for feed, at a low price. The farmer cannot be benefited in the high tariff any way.

CEREALINE, the famous product of corn, invented and made, at Columbus, Ind., is not "protected," yet it sends its products all over the world. Our other "protected" infant industries could do the same, for we can beat the world on almost anything. Then what sense or justice is there in making laws compelling all the people to pay taxes in the form of protective tariffs to support these men, who are already making more than we do? Yet the republican party does this very thing.

THE meeting at Indianapolis, Feb. 4, of the State Democratic Editorial Association was well attended, a majority of all members being present. The discussions, were of vital importance and had in view the work of the coming campaign. The work to be done by the fraternity was discussed, and it was generally conceded that the members were never in better shape to take the offensive than now, and that the outlook for success is good. The democratic state central committee met at the same time and place—in the Hendricks Club rooms, and there was a friendly interchange of views between the two bodies. The summer meeting of the editors will be in July, and at South Bend, and from that city, an excursion will be had to St. Joe and Benton Harbor, and probably across the lake.

Primary Elections.

(Shelbyville Democrat, Feb. 11, 1892.)

To make this subject more practical and bring its actual working before the voters of DeKalb county, we copy at length, the plan adopted unanimosly by the democrats of Shelby county, this state and published in the Shelby Democrat of Feb. 11. The plan was fully discussed and voted on at the meeting of the Shelby central committee Feb. 6. It will be noted by the language used that the plan had been in use before, or in part at least. We quote the minutes of their meeting:

"The manner of holding said primary election was next considered. On motion and after discussion, the committee had read and by unanimous vote adopted a set of rules, numbered from 1 to 11, to govern the holding of the primary election.

RULES ADOPTED BY THE CENTRAL COMMITTEE TO GOVERN THE PRIMARY ELECTION IN 1892

No. 1. On Saturday, March 5th, 1892, the democratic voters of each township shall meet in mass conventions at the usual places in each township where primaries were held in 1890. Boards of election, composed of an inspector, two clerks and two judges, shall be selected by the mass convention, from the friends of the various candidates and in no case shall such board be selected wholly of the friends of any one candidate, when such candidate has opposition, and the democratic voters of the precinct shall then vote by ballot directly for the candidates of their choice for the offices to which they aspire, with tickets to be furnished by the County Central Committee, of a uniform size, of plain white paper, with the name of ALL candidates for the various district and county offices, printed thereon, and said clerks shall enroll the name and number of each elector on the poll books furnished by the county central committee, as such vote is cast, and such Board of Election before entering upon the discharge of their duties shall take an oath before some officer authorized by law to administer the same, to faithfully discharge their duty as such Board Provided that some officer authorized by law to administer such oath is present and will perform such duty.

2 Said Board of Election shall open the polls for the reception of votes for the purposes herein provided at 1:30 o'clock p. m., and shall close said polls at 6 o'clock p. m., except in Addison township, the Board shall keep the polls open for the reception of votes until 6:30 o'clock p. m., and provided further that no votes shall be counted until said polls are closed; and said Board shall not adjourn until the votes cast at said primary election are counted and tabulated, and the poll books and tally sheets duly signed by said Board of Election.

3. Any democrat of said precinct who will be a legal voter at the November election, 1892, shall be entitled to vote at said primary election.

NO ONE BUT DEMOCRATS TO VOTE and all questions arising as to the elector's qualification are to be settled by the board.

Candidates for the various offices are allowed the privilege of selecting one challenger for each precinct.

4. After casting the vote of the precinct for the candidates at the primary aforesaid, according to the fore going rules, the inspectors, judges and clerks shall proceed to canvass, count and string the ballots cast at such primary election, making a complete tally of the same on the tally sheets furnished by the county central committee. But before commencing the count of the ballots the friends of each candidate shall have the right to name one witness for each candidate for office, who shall be admitted into the room in which said Board shall make said count, but said witnesses shall not in any way interfere with said Board in the performance of their duties in making said count. When said count is completed the Inspector of said Board of Election of each precinct shall announce by public outcry at the door of said voting place the vote received by each candidate for office in such precinct, and said Board of Election shall so certify on said tally sheets.

5. If any elector shall cast a vote for two or more candidates for the same office it shall be deemed an illegal vote so far as it relates to such office, and shall not be counted for either candidate for such office, and the said Board of Election shall not count any double ticket which may have been cast by any elector at such election.

6. All candidates for the various county and district offices by themselves or their friends, are requested to present their names to the chairman of the central committee at least ten days before the holding of the primary election in the several precincts as provided in the rules and regulations heretofore adopted

ALAS!

How wretched is the man who has fallen a victim to Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, or diseased Liver, with all the horrible attendants. Look upon the picture. Poor man, being tired of dragging out a miserable existence, he is the picture of despondency; altogether, he is rather a forlorn specimen. Do we pity him? Of course; but at the same time feel assured that in a measure he is to blame for the bad state into which he has fallen. A sure, safe, speedy and easy cure can be found in Simmons Liver Regulator—Nature's own remedy. No mercury or deleterious drugs, not unpleasant to the taste, and always reliable—just such a remedy as you can pin your faith to without a shadow of disappointment. Read the testimonial, don't take our word for it:

"I have been subject to severe spells of Congestion of the Liver, and have been in the habit of taking from 15 to 20 grains of calomel, which generally laid me up for three or four days. Lately I have been taking Simmons Liver Regulator which gave me relief, without any interruption to business." J. HUGG, Middleport, Ohio.

The Garrett Clipper boasts that a man has sent 75 cents to them, to secure some back numbers. The fellow does well to apply to that disreputable sheet. It is always a "back number." Any paper that gets all the decent articles it has by re writing them from the other county papers, or clips them bodily without credit, is a "back number from Wayback." The man may not live long enough to get his 75 cents worth, but he has started in right.

The Garrett Jagomaniac is out with a long, rambling article about the two fairs. All the sense we can get out of it, is that they, themselves, have made "larger donations" to the Auburn fair, than any one else. The facts are, they have made no donations. The only thing they can construe in this light is the money they paid on stock. They subscribed several shares, with a great flare of trumpets, and then failed to pay when called on for cash. On a share or two they paid $2.50, on another, we believe they paid $5, and on another $20, and as they cannot have a certificate issued till it is paid in full, they so far have no share There is no donation about it. If they will pay up their stock as the rest have done, their shares will be issued. The Auburn fair knows how to keep on the safe side with such people.

Graveyard Poetry.

Nine-tenths of those who think they can write respectable poetry are mistaken, writes T. De Witt Talmage in the February Ladies' Home Journal. It is safe to say that most of the home made poetry of graveyards is an offense to God and man. One would have thought that the New Hampshire village would have risen in mob to prevent the inscription that was really placed on one of its tombstones descriptive of a man who had lost his life at the foot of a viscious mare on the way to the brook:

> "As this man was leading her to drink
> She kick'd and kil'd him quicker'n a wink."

One would have thought that even conservative New Jersey would have been in rebellion at a child's epitaph which reads thus:

> "She was not smart, she was not fair,
> But hearts with grief for her are swellin';
> All empty stands her little chair;
> She died of eatin' wate mellon."

Let not such desecrations be allowed in hallowed places. Let not poetizers practice on the tombstone. My uniform advice to all those who want acceptable and suggestive epitaph is: Take a passage of Scripture. That will never wear out. From generation to generation it will bring down upon all visitors a holy hush; and if before that stone has crumbled the day comes for waking up of all the graveyard sleepers, the very words chiseled on the marble may be the ones that shall ring from the trumpet of the archangel on that day when the secrets of all hearts shall be disclosed.

There was a sudden and loud call of "fire", on the electric alarm Saturday afternoon, and every body rushed down the street. Marshal Pfefferl was coming home with a load of wood, and at once put his team on a run. He got to the engine house, hitched up, and the two big teams with the engine, and the hose cart etc., went tearing down to the south end, reaching the scene of trouble in double quick time. It proved to be a fire in a dwelling next to Wm. Ensley's on the south of the Wabash track on the west side of Van Buren, now occupied by Joe. Robbins. But Mr. Trentman had come over from his factory, with the new patent fire apparatus shown here not long ago, and got the fire under control. So the engine came back. Everybody speaks highly of the fire boys, for the quick time they made.

The commissioners were here Tuesday to meet the commissioners of Defiance county in regard to the joint ditch on the state line, but for some reason, the Defiance folks did not come. People are beginning to pay their taxes for this year. It is rather earlier than they began last year, and many are paying the full tax instead of the first installment. Some find their taxes higher under the new law, but more find them lower. We believe that when the new law gets fairly to work it will be found a vast improvement on the old one. It secures greater equality in the taxes paid by all.

Stephen Masters writes from his home at Charleston, Ark., that they have been afflicted with the grip this winter. Sorry to hear it, but we have nothing to boast of up this way in that matter. Crops, he says, have been good, but cotton has been so low in price, that it has caused hard times. As duties on cotton fabrics have been increased, this proves that farmers are not benefited by a tariff. The $1 50 for the COURIER came safe. Thanks.

Amandus E. Ashley, son of Joseph Ashley, died at Avilla Feb. 11, 1892. He was born in Auburn, Nov. 27, 1865, but in Feb. 1884, he moved with his parents to Avilla. Since then, he has been a part of the time in Chicago, and in towns farther west, and more recently in Ft. Wayne, where he had a situation with the electric light works. He was always a steady, industrious young man, and leaves many friends to mourn for him His remains were brought here for burial Saturday, though the funeral was at Avilla.

The "Northern lights" Saturday evening were very brilliant, both in extent and color. They reminded one of the great display many years ago, when the "merry dancers" extended over nearly the entire heavens—a very unusual occurrence in this latitude.

There is a rumor that one of our most desirable factories, the Auburn Foundry and Machine Works will go to Ft Wayne, where they are offered ground, buildings and $10,000 in money. If this is true it is a matter of the deepest regret here, as they are a valuable institution.

Sammy Wasson, son of Lewis Wasson of Concord township, was here Monday. He had his face still tied up, his jaw being not yet healed. It will be remembered that he was "knocking plugs" out of a stump on Christmas and a plug mashed his jaw. He reports his grandfather, Uncle Sammy Wasson, as a little better.

Lincoln's ancestors have now been fully traced for a period reaching back to the landing of the Pilgrims, although he, himself, did not know of any farther back than his grandfather. It is fully given in the Harper's Weekly of Feb. 13, as well as his earliest picture, and pictures of his birthplace and various early residences. It forms a very interesting and valuable article.

Geo. S. Shaffer sold his Gastown residence Saturday to Sylvestor Imhoff, and moves to Waterloo, where he will stay with his wife's father, Joseph Miser. Mr. Miser is improving in health, but his wife is poorly. Mr. Shaffer and his wife have been good citizens and we hate to see them go. But it will be convenient for them, and her parents both, to arrange so they can take care of the old folks.

The Old Folks' Hop last Friday evening was a very pleasant affair, though not so well attended as some others we have had. This was owing partly to the severe weather, and to the prevailing sickness, as well as to the fact that many had been at the Opera House for two nights before to attend the lectures. But everything passed off nicely, and no better company ever assembled for a social evening anywhere. The Old Folks always have a pleasant time.

Quite a number of Auburn people mostly masons attended the funeral of the late S. M. Knott of Butler township, last Saturday. The masons here were under charge of D. Y. Husselman, the present Master, and there were delegations from Auburn and Garrett. There was an extra car, and at St. Johns, the family and other friends took the train with the remains of the deceased, and all went to the "Cemetery Church" on the Fisher farm near Huntertown. Here were gathered the people of the neighborhood, and an able sermon was delivered by a minister from Roan. There was excellent singing by the local choir, and at the close of the services, an eloquent obituary was read by J. J. Van Auken, which we publish in full to-day. Then the last sad rites of the order were bestowed on the departed brother, and he was laid to his final earthly rest in the beautiful cemetery.

A LIBERAL patrimony is a decided help to matrimony.

THE death of the Khedive, who will be succeeded by a minor, will furnish England with a fresh pretense for retaining her hold upon Egypt.

THERE is no denying that it takes a heap of responsibility off a man's shoulders to take some other fellow's advice. It gives him a handy place to put the blame if he fails.

MOST people think they would be happy if they were located anywhere else, forgetting that wherever they go they have to take the cause of their unhappiness with them.

WHEN Patti visited Niagara the other day she must have noticed with a thrill of delight that the passing of the years has not affected the voice of the great cataract a particle.

THERE are many people in the West who never tasted really good roast beef. Thousands of cooks do not know how to cook it, and thousands of butchers do not know how to cut it.

WE never had an ache or a pain when we were little that the grown people did not tell us to go to sleep and forget it. We have often wondered since that they did not take their own advice.

PHYSICIANS say that swinging Indian clubs and the use of dumb-bells is the best thing in the world to develop the muscles of a young woman's arms and shoulders. What is the matter with sweeping and scrubbing?

NOT merely to know, but according to his knowledge to do, is the destiny of man. Your action alone determines your worth; and Carlyle says, "The end of man is an action, and not a thought, though it were of the noblest."

IF a boy wants to do something that he shouldn't, give him your full consent to do it. Though he was crazy to do it on the sly, your permission will take away all his desire. The same rule, it is said, will work with the men.

A GREAT many items are brought to this office, and the most vicious are invariably sent in by women. They are usually slaps at other women, and generally speak respectfully of the men. Women should "stand together" more.

THERE are more old people in the world now than there were thirty years ago. The cause is said to be due to the fact that more people have their decayed teeth extracted and are wearing store teeth. Their digestion is made better, and they live longer.

THE frequency of the word "suddenly" in the many death notices of the day is startling and shocking, even when one is not acquainted with any of those who are taken away. The winter has been one which has brought unexpected grief to many homes.

CHILI withdrew and apologized for Matta's famous note and heaped upon Matta himself all the social and political honors imaginable. An apology made at the muzzle of a gun is about as sincere as an expression of religious faith extorted, as was once the pleasing custom, on the rack.

THE only conclusive evidence of a man's sincerity is that he gives himself for a principle. Words, money, all things else are comparatively easy to give away; but when a man makes a gift of his daily life and practice it is plain that the truth, whatever it may be, has taken possession of him.

THE Legislature of Michigan has sat down hard on the cigarette demon by making it a misdemeanor punishable by fine to manufacture, sell, or give away cigarettes or paper for making them. About a year from now it will be interesting to have a report on the efficiency of this piece of repressive legislation.

THE war scare is over now, but at one time the situation was exceedingly grave. Some idea of this may be afforded by recalling the fact that the pressure on the columns of the New York Herald was so great one morning as to necessitate the leaving out of that ringing editorial beginning "Never print a paid advertisement," etc.

EUROPE is now sending to the United States for her ash, oak, and pine lumber. Where will the United States send when the supply is exhausted? The best ash, thought to be almost inexhaustible, is now said to be scarce and oak is being utilized in its place. The nation of timber killers are not looking out for the interests of the millions to follow to any large extent.

EVERY man in the world has a secret, and his mind hovers around it as constantly as a dog hovers around the spot where he has hidden a bone. He shows it in his face, and usually it is of the kind that leaves lines in his countenance. Live with him long enough, and he will tell you, without knowing that he is telling you, all about it. Sometimes it is an ambition; oftener it is a disappointment, but in almost every case it is something that is concealed because it would be to the man's discredit if known. This is so generally the case that the only happy people are those who have no secrets.

THE old Romans were level-headed and knew some things which a great many people of to-day haven't found out. Cato, the censor, said: "Our ancestors regarded it as a grand point in husbandry not to have too much land in one farm; for they considered that more profit came from holding little and tilling it well." You see that was in old Cato's day, as he says, "Our ancestors regarded it," etc.; but it is new now.

THERE are many kinds of pride—the pride of wealth, of name, of birth, of social standing, or popular esteem—but none is quite so offensive as that of an imagined mental superiority. It looks down upon others with a supercilious compassion which awakens all the resentments of human nature. Deeper and truer thought banishes this delusion, and makes a man modest as nothing else can; for it is always discovering mistakes that he has made and must correct, mental work done that must be undone, hasty conclusions that must be repudiated, erroneous judgments that must be revised.

COUNT TOLSTOI has written a long letter to a New York paper, giving his personal observations and experiences in the famine districts of Russia. It may correct some impressions in America to know that this celebrated philanthropist and author acquits the general government and the local functionaries of either indifference or procrastination in relief for the sufferers from famine, but he finds that, with all that has been done, and with all that Russia can do, more than half the suffering must remain unless people more fortunately situated contribute to their relief. There has been so much misinformation in this country regarding the famine and the attitude of the Russian Government toward the starving peasants, that this appeal of Count Tolstoi's ought to set matters right and open the purses of those who are able to help these poor people.

MR. WILLIAM L. GARRISON has written a letter complaining of the treatment of his son, a student in Harvard College, by his fellow-students. It appears that young Mr. Mr. Garrison sought admission to the society of the D. K. E., which is accounted the toniest society in the college. His offer was accepted and he was put through the initiation performance, among which was the burning of one of his arms by a lighted cigar, and in consequence he was made sick, and there was apprehension for a time among the family of blood poisoning. The rule of initiation, we believe, to be that the candidate must do some silly act or submit to some silly act being done to him; not always the same act, but invariably a silly act; and this he understands when he offers himself for admission. The thing is mutual. If there is no sense in it there is a want of sense on both sides. It is the price of distinction. The scar is his badge of membership. Shortly after the war between France and Germany in 1870, when the war passion was high, the proudest and most popular young men of Germany were those who had their faces mutilated by sword cuts.

TO CAPT. W. T. HARDENBROOK, of Company C, of the Second Regiment, I. N. G., belongs the doubtful honor of an attempt to conduct society on military principles. Company C was to give its first annual reception and ball. It came in uniform, as ordered by Captain Hardenbrook, and, with its fair ladies, disposed itself about the armory hall. Suddenly, however, it was discovered that the hall was not Company C's, but Captain Hardenbrook's. The Captain informed the guards that he had only ordered them to come to the ball to show off a little, and that, as several army officers were expected who would object to association with privates, they could not be allowed to dance. The guards protested that they had paid $2 each, and had been invited to dance. The Captain drew up like a drum-major. What was $2, he asked, to discipline? They could go home if they wished, but they could not dance. So most of the guards took their disappointed ladies and left the hall. The real soldiers, the army officers, interviewed afterward, declared that the insult to the guards was purely gratuitous, and that they had not thought of objecting to a participation with them in the dance. Captain Hardenbrook's imitation of the cad is so perfect as to defy detection.

Divorce Statistics.

The most unhappy period of marriage, according to French divorce statistics, is for the period extending from the fifth to the tenth year. After that the figures drop rapidly. Only 28 per cent. of couples seek divorce between the tenth and twentieth years of unions. Only one pair in 100 seeks to cut the knot after the period of over thirty and under forty years.

A Funny Fish.

A curious fish has been caught at Atlantic City, N. J., struggling in the surf close to the shore. It is about five feet long with big fins, more like flippers, fore and aft, and an immense mouth armed with four rows of teeth. The body is flat, after the order of the flounder, and its skin is brown and as coarse as sandpaper. It weighs 150 pounds.

A Swift Swimmer.

The dolphin is the fastest swimmer in the sea. It can with ease swim around and about a vessel going at the highest rate of speed, and can go faster than twenty-two miles an hour.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

INTERESTING INCIDENTS OF HIS LIFE.

Washington and the Spy—How He Subdued a Whole Band of Rioters—The Great Man's Mother—Remembering His Two Pretty Sisters—Portrait of Washington, Etc.

Our Country's Sire.

It has now been ninety-three years since the death of George Washington. During that long period many brilliant reputations have shone upon us for awhile, only to fade away and lapse into oblivion. His name retains all its interest for us, and probably more people have been particularly occupied of late with his career, its relics and its records, than ever before.

At the great sale of Washington mementos, held in Philadelphia, the prices paid even for trifling objects once possessed by the great man and his family were extraordinary.

A legal document relating to the execution of his will, which his hand had never touched, brought fifty dollars, and an autograph letter eighty-five.

A list of his slaves, written and signed by his own hand, brought four hundred and fifty dollars. Two of his memorandum books closely written brought eight hundred dollars. His family Bible was sold for seven hundred and sixty dollars, and books from his library, containing his signature or that of his wife, commanded prices varying from sixty dollars to one hundred and fifty dollars each.

Pieces of piano music which had been played by Miss Custis brought considerable sums, and a dinner invitation was sold for eighteen dollars.

The sale attracted universal attention, and every one lamented that the whole collection had not been bought by Congress and deposited at Mount Vernon, where it could have been seen by every pilgrim to that sacred shrine.

There is a special reason for this vivid survival of his celebrity, apart from his services to his country and his singularly varied and interesting career.

From his boyhood to the last week of his life he was a profuse writer. As soon as he could write well enough, he kept a book into which he copied anything that pleased or impressed him in his reading, and carefully entered his early cipherings and surveys in a book that is preserved to the present day.

During his first journey in the wilderness of Virginia, when he was but 16, he kept a pretty full journal of its events, though the task could not have been easy on such a tramp.

In a similar way, but in greater detail, he recorded his early marches and campaigns, one of which was published both in England and America.

From the day when he took command of the revolutionary army at Cambridge, his own letters and orders, his reports to Congress and other official documents are the imperishable record of his public actions, as well as the most correct exhibition of his character.

His own writings must ever remain the truest record of his life. Nothing can refute or supersede them. His confidential letters to his brother, to his secretary, to his steward and to his servants, as well as the more formal epistles addressed to the President of Congress, all tell the same story and exhibit the same man, one who was intent on discharging every trust, and fulfilling every duty with punctuality and completeness.

Presents for Patty and Polly.

When Washington returned to Philadelphia after his trip to the East, in 1789, he stopped at Uxbridge, Mass., and was entertained at the home of Samuel Taft. The old homestead, with the great oak before the door, remains yet in possession of the family, preserved in commemoration of the distinguished visitor.

Washington was so well pleased with his reception and entertainment at Uxbridge that he wrote the following letter to Mr. Taft, which is carefully preserved in the family:

HARTFORD, Nov. 8, 1789.

SIR—Being informed that you have given my name to one of your sons, and called another after Mrs. Washington's family (Dandridge); and being moreover very much pleased with the modest and innocent looks of your two daughters, Patty and Polly, I do for these reasons send each of these girls a piece of chintz; and to Patty, who bears the name of Mrs. Washington, and who waited more upon us than Polly did, I send five guineas, with which she may buy herself any little ornaments she may want, or she may dispose of them in any manner more agreeable to herself.

As I do not give these things with a view to have it talked of, or even to its being known, the less there is said about the matter the better it will please me; but that I may be sure the chintz and money have got safe to hand, let Patty, who, I dare say, is equal to it, write me a line informing me thereof, directed "To the President of the United States, at New York." I wish you and your family well, and am your humble servant,

G. WASHINGTON.

Washington and the Spy.

It is painful to find that the father of his country practiced deceit down in Jersey. Elias Boudinot, whose papers are getting printed, reveals this side of Washington's character. He actually played a trick on Sir William Howe, and made him believe he had 12,000 men in his army about Morristown, when he had but 3,000.

It seems that Howe had sent one of his innumerable spies, who were Tories in New York and patriots in Philadelphia, to see what was going on about Morristown. The adjutant general found out the rogue and asked Gen. Washington if he would not have him arrested.

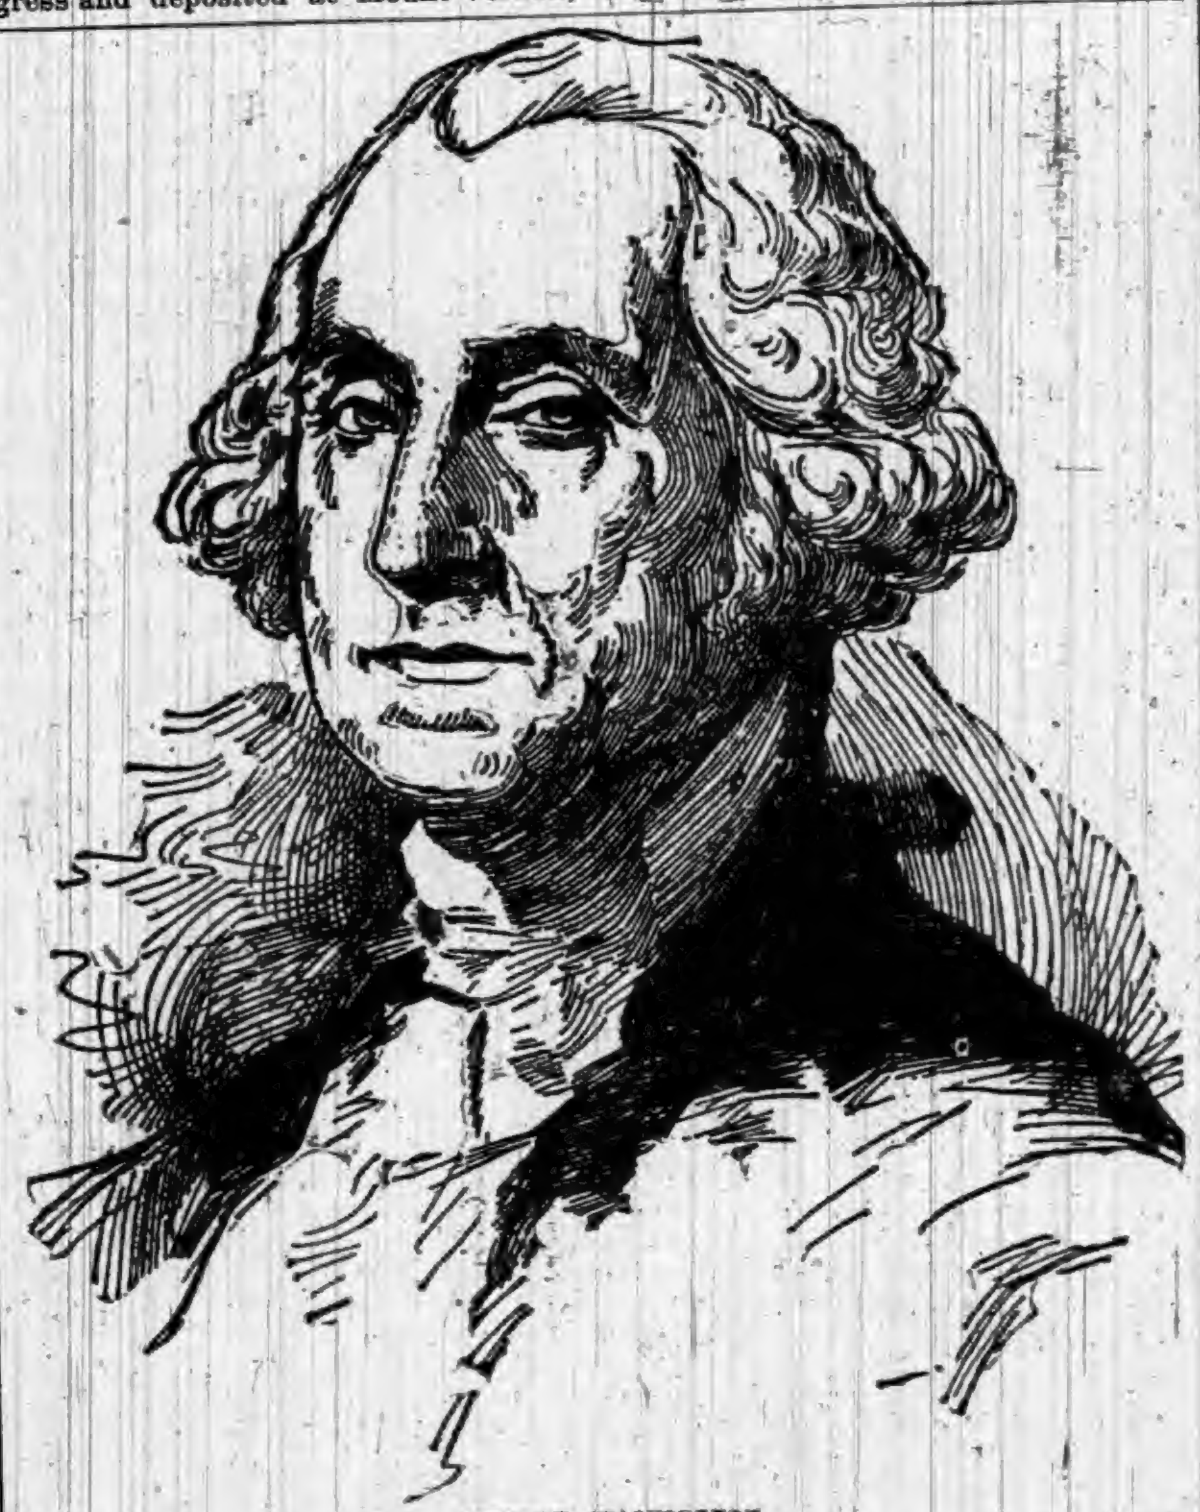
No, said the crafty Virginian—and here I quote from Boudinot—"but ordered him to go home and immediately to draw returns from every brigadier in the army of the number of their brigades, making the army to consist of about 12,000 effective men, etc.; to place these in the pigeon-holes on his desk, and then get introduced to the spy and to invite him to lodge with him—to endeavor to get him to sup with him alone. About 9 o'clock in the evening to have an orderly sergeant to call on him with positive orders that the adjutant should attend the general in haste. That then he should make an excuse to the gentleman suspected as a sy and leave him alone about half an hour. This was done, and in this interval, as was suspected, the spy took a copy of the returns and next morning went off with them to New York. This convinced Gen. Howe that we were too strong to be attacked, and saved us through the winter."

Prof. Hosmer, who has written so well about Sir Henry Vane and Samuel Adams, thinks that Adams and Franklin did not behave quite right in the matter of Gov. Hutchinson's letters, which put Massachusetts in the hands of the patriots. But here is George Washington, who "could not tell a lie," making his brigadiers all tell one.—Boston Advertiser.

The Testimony of Time.

The people of these United States this year celebrate the one hundred and sixtieth anniversary of George Washington's birth. Every intelligent and patriotic citizen will recall with pride the influence of his triumphs in war, his accomplishments as the first President of the Republic, his superb character as a man.

The visible results of the policy inaugurated under his executive approval are marvelous. Thirteen States formed his confederacy, all of them purely agricultural. Since the Continental regime they have become the foremost region of the world in the variety and volume of their manufactures through the unexampled fertility of inventive genius.



GEORGE WASHINGTON.

He stands the noblest leader who was ever intrusted with his country's life. His patience under provocation; his calmness in danger, and lofty courage when all others despaired; his prudent delays when the Continental Congress was imperative and the staff almost insubordinate, and his quick resistless blows when action was possible; his magnanimity to his defamers and generosity to his foes; his ambition for his country and unselfishness for himself; his sole desire the freedom and independence of America, and his only wish to return after victory to private life and the peaceful pursuits and pleasures of home, have all combined to make him, by the unanimous judgment of the world, the foremost figure of history. Not so abnormally developed in any direction as to be called a genius, yet he was the strongest, because the best balanced, the fullest rounded, the most even, and most self-masterful of men—the incarnation of common sense and moral purity, of action and repose.

The Republic will live so long as it reveres the memory and emulates the virtues of George Washington.

To G. Washington.

All hail to you, George Washington,
On this your natal day!
The man who could not tell a lie!
All honor let us pay!

Our fathers recognized your worth,
They liked your cut so well,
They ran you twice for President,
For the lie you could not tell.

But if you were alive to-day,
And had your way to carve,
And really could not tell a lie,
Why, George, you'd simply starve.

A Portrait of Washington.

The original portrait of Washington (right side of the face) by Gilbert Stuart, long thought to have been destroyed by the artist, seems to have been recognized in the hands of Dr. W. F. Channing, of California, who inherited it from his distinguished father, Rev. William Ellery Channing, who obtained it from his uncle, Colonel Gibbs.—Science.

A LIBERAL patrimony is a decided help to matrimony.

THE death of the Khedive, who will be succeeded by a minor, will furnish England with a fresh pretense for retaining her hold upon Egypt.

THERE is no denying that it takes a heap of responsibility off a man's shoulders to take some other fellow's advice. It gives him a handy place to put the blame if he fails.

MOST people think they would be happy if they were located anywhere else, forgetting that wherever they go they have to take the cause of their unhappiness with them.

WHEN Patti visited Niagara the other day she must have noticed with a thrill of delight that the passing of the years has not affected the voice of the great cataract a particle.

THERE are many people in the West who never tasted really good roast beef. Thousands of cooks do not know how to cook it, and thousands of butchers do not know how to cut it.

WE never had an ache or a pain when we were little that the grown people did not tell us to go to sleep and forget it. We have often wondered since that they did not take their own advice.

PHYSICIANS say that swinging Indian clubs and the use of dumb-bells is the best thing in the world to develop the muscles of a young woman's arms and shoulders. What is the matter with sweeping and scrubbing?

NOT merely to know, but according to his knowledge to do, is the destiny of man. Your action alone determines your worth; and Carlyle says, "The end of man is an action, and not a thought, though it were of the noblest."

IF a boy wants to do something that he shouldn't, give him your full consent to do it. Though he was crazy to do it on the sly, your permission will take away all his desire. The same rule, it is said, will work with the men.

A GREAT many items are brought to this office, and the most vicious are invariably sent in by women. They are usually slaps at other women, and generally speak respectfully of the men. Women should "stand together" more.

THERE are more old people in the world now than there were thirty years ago. The cause is said to be due to the fact that more people have their decayed teeth extracted and are wearing store teeth. Their digestion is made better, and they live longer.

THE frequency of the word "suddenly" in the many death notices of the day is startling and shocking, even when one is not acquainted with any of those who are taken away. The winter has been one which has brought unexpected grief to many homes.

CHILI withdrew and apologized for Matta's famous note and heaped upon Matta himself all the social and political honors imaginable. An apology made at the muzzle of a gun is about as sincere as an expression of religious faith extorted, as was once the pleasing custom, on the rack.

THE only conclusive evidence of a man's sincerity is that he gives himself for a principle. Words, money, all things else are comparatively easy to give away; but when a man makes a gift of his daily life and practice it is plain that the truth, whatever it may be, has taken possession of him.

THE Legislature of Michigan has sat down hard on the cigarette demon by making it a misdemeanor punishable by fine to manufacture, sell, or give away cigarettes or paper for making them. About a year from now it will be interesting to have a report on the efficiency of this piece of repressive legislation.

THE war scare is over now, but at one time the situation was exceedingly grave. Some idea of this may be afforded by recalling the fact that the pressure on the columns of the New York Herald was so great one morning as to necessitate the leaving out of that ringing editorial beginning "Never print a paid advertisement," etc.

EUROPE is now sending to the United States for her ash, oak, and pine lumber. Where will the United States send when the supply is exhausted? The best ash, thought to be almost inexhaustible, is now said to be scarce and oak is being utilized in its place. The nation of timber killers are not looking out for the interests of the millions to follow to any large extent.

EVERY man in the world has a secret, and his mind hovers around it as constantly as a dog hovers around the spot where he has hidden a bone. He shows it in his face, and usually it is of the kind that leaves lines in his countenance. Live with him long enough, and he will tell you, without knowing that he is telling you, all about it. Sometimes it is an ambition; oftener it is a disappointment, but in almost every case it is something that is concealed because it would be to the man's discredit if known. This is so generally the case that the only happy people are those who have no secrets.

THE old Romans were level-headed and knew some things which a great many people of to-day haven't found out. Cato, the censor, said: "Our ancestors regarded it as a grand point in husbandry not to have too much land in one farm; for they considered that more profit came from holding little and tilling it well." You see that was in old Cato's day, as he says, "Our ancestors regarded it," etc.; but it is new now.

THERE are many kinds of pride—the pride of wealth, of name, of birth, of social standing, or popular esteem—but none is quite so offensive as that of an imagined mental superiority. It looks down upon others with a supercilious compassion which awakens all the resentments of human nature. Deeper and truer thought banishes this delusion, and makes a man modest as nothing else can; for it is always discovering mistakes that he has made and must correct, mental work done that must be undone, hasty conclusions that must he repudiated, erroneous judgments that must be revised.

COUNT TOLSTOI has written a long letter to a New York paper, giving his personal observations and experiences in the famine districts of Russia. It may correct some impressions in America to know that this celebrated philanthropist and author acquits the general government and the local functionaries of either indifference or procrastination in relief for the sufferers from famine, but he finds that, with all that has been done, and with all that Russia can do, more than half the suffering must remain unless people more fortunately situated contribute to their relief. There has been so much misinformation in this country regarding the famine and the attitude of the Russian Government toward the starving peasants, that this appeal of Count Tolstoi's ought to set matters right and open the purses of those who are able to help these poor people.

MR. WILLIAM L. GARRISON has written a letter complaining of the treatment of his son, a student in Harvard College, by his fellow-students. It appears that young Mr. Mr. Garrison sought admission to the society of the D. K. E., which is accounted the toniest society in the college. His offer was accepted and he was put through the initiation performance, among which was the burning of one of his arms by a lighted cigar, and in consequence he was made sick, and there was apprehension for a time among the family of blood poisoning. The rule of initiation, we believe, to be that the candidate must do some silly act or submit to some silly act being done to him; not always the same act, but invariably a silly act; and this he understands when he offers himself for admission. The thing is mutual. If there is no sense in it there is a want of sense on both sides. It is the price of distinction. The scar is his badge of membership. Shortly after the war between France and Germany in 1870, when the war passion was high, the proudest and most popular young men of Germany were those who had their faces mutilated by sword cuts.

TO CAPT. W. T. HARDENBROOK, of Company C, of the Second Regiment, I. N. G., belongs the doubtful honor of an attempt to conduct society on military principles. Company C was to give its first annual reception and ball. It came in uniform, as ordered by Captain Hardenbrook, and, with its fair ladies, disposed itself about the armory hall. Suddenly, however, it was discovered that the hall was not Company C's, but Captain Hardenbrook's. The Captain informed the guards that he had only ordered them to come to the ball to show off a little, and that, as several army officers were expected who would object to association with privates, they could not be allowed to dance. The guards protested that they had paid $2 each, and had been invited to dance. The Captain drew up like a drum-major. What was $2, he asked, to discipline? They could go home if they wished, but they could not dance. So most of the guards took their disappointed ladies and left the hall. The real soldiers, the army officers, interviewed afterward, declared that the insult to the guards was purely gratuitous, and that they had not thought of objecting to a participation with them in the dance. Captain Hardenbrook's imitation of the cad is so perfect as to defy detection.

Divorce Statistics.

The most unhappy period of marriage, according to French divorce statistics, is for the period extending from the fifth to the tenth year. After that the figures drop rapidly. Only 28 per cent. of couples seek divorce between the tenth and twentieth years of unions. Only one pair in 100 seeks to cut the knot after the period of over thirty and under forty years.

A Funny Fish.

A curious fish has been caught at Atlantic City, N. J., struggling in the surf close to the shore. It is about five feet long with big fins, more like flippers, fore and aft, and an immense mouth armed with four rows of teeth. The body is flat, after the order of the flounder, and its skin is brown and as coarse as sandpaper. It weighs 150 pounds.

A Swift Swimmer.

The dolphin is the fastest swimmer in the sea. It can with ease swim around and about a vessel going at the highest rate of speed, and can go faster than twenty-two miles an hour.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

INTERESTING INCIDENTS OF HIS LIFE.

Washington and the Spy—How He Subdued a Whole Band of Rioters—The Great Man's Mother—Remembering His Two Pretty Sisters—Portrait of Washington, Etc.

Our Country's Sire.

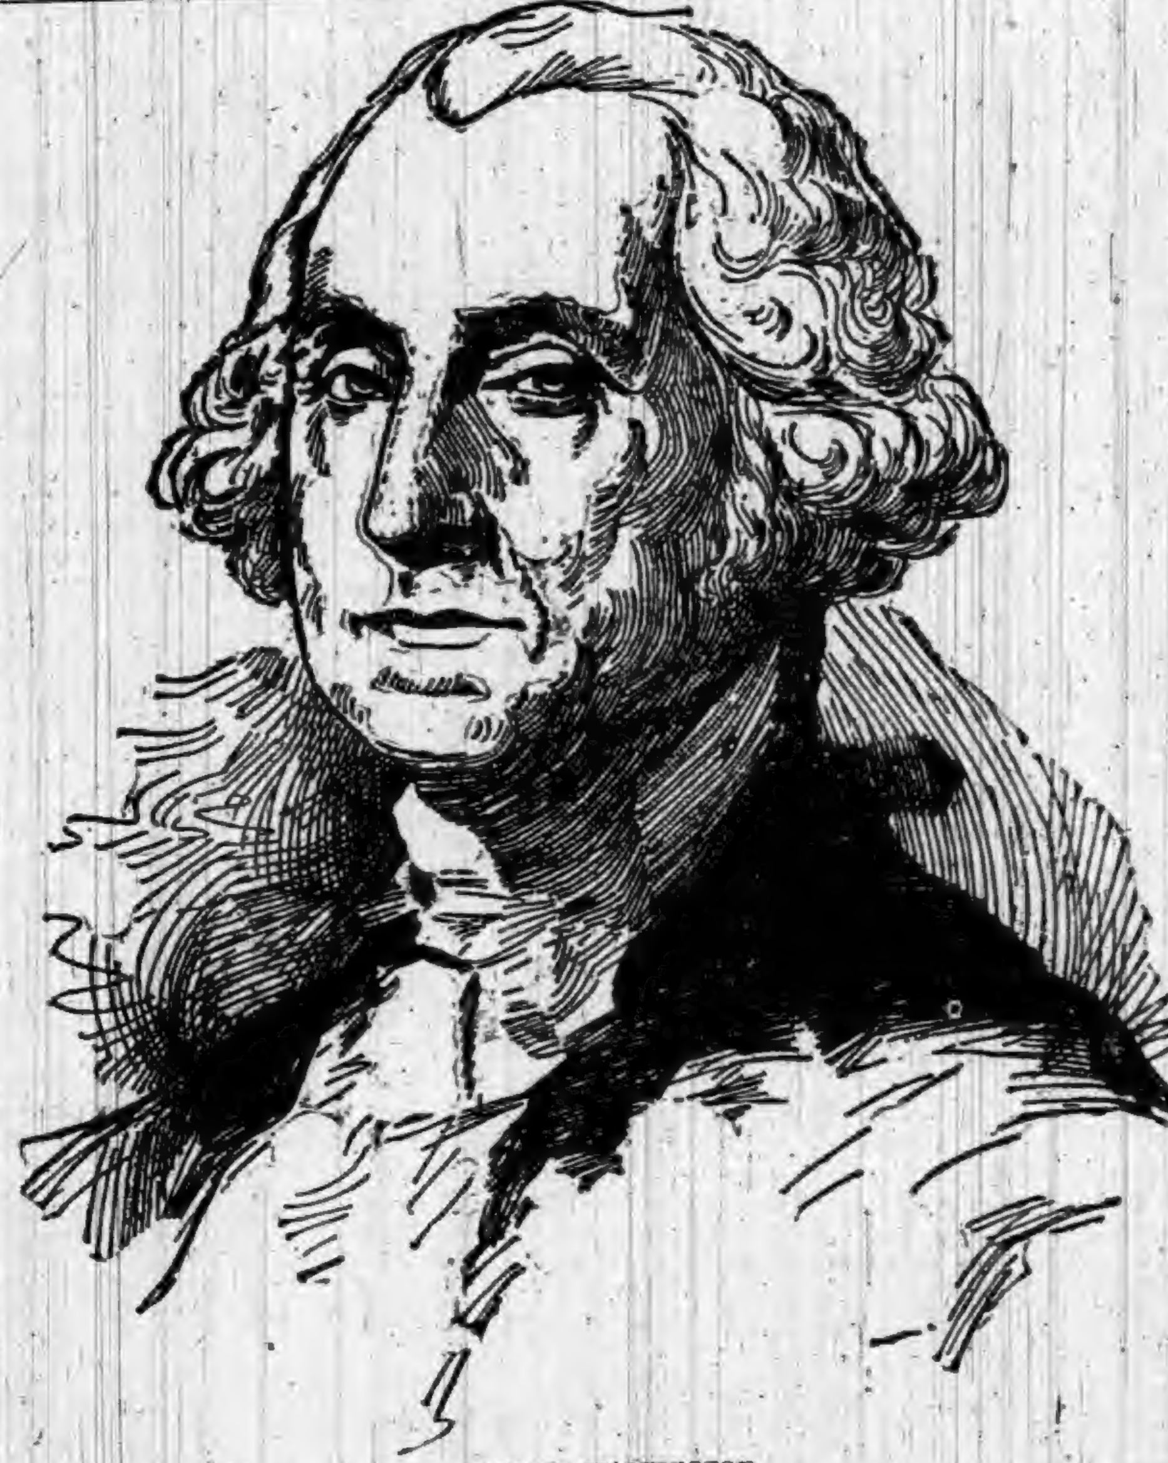
It has now been ninety-three years since the death of George Washington. During that long period many brilliant reputations have shone upon us for awhile, only to fade away and lapse into oblivion. His name retains all its interest for us, and probably more people have been particularly occupied of late with his career, its relics and its records, than ever before.

At the great sale of Washington mementos, held in Philadelphia, the prices paid even for trifling objects once possessed by the great man and his family were extraordinary.

A legal document relating to the execution of his will, which his hand had never touched, brought fifty dollars, and an autograph letter eighty-five.

A list of his slaves, written and signed by his own hand, brought four hundred and fifty dollars. Two of his memorandum books closely written brought eight hundred dollars. His family Bible was sold for seven hundred and sixty dollars, and books from his library, containing his signature or that of his wife, commanded prices varying from sixty dollars to one hundred and fifty dollars each.

Pieces of piano music which had been played by Miss Custis brought considerable sums, and a dinner invitation was sold for eighteen dollars.



GEORGE WASHINGTON.

The sale attracted universal attention, and every one lamented that the whole collection had not been bought by Congress and deposited at Mount Vernon, where it could have been seen by every pilgrim to that sacred shrine.

There is a special reason for this vivid survival of his celebrity, apart from his services to his country and his singularly varied and interesting career.

From his boyhood to the last week of his life he was a profuse writer. As soon as he could write well enough, he kept a book into which he copied anything that pleased or impressed him in his reading, and carefully entered his early cipherings and surveys in a book that is preserved to the present day.

During his first journey in the wilderness of Virginia, when he was but 16, he kept a pretty full journal of its events, though the task could not have been easy on such a tramp.

In a similar way, but in greater detail, he recorded his early marches and campaigns, one of which was published both in England and America.

From the day when he took command of the revolutionary army at Cambridge, his own letters and orders, his reports to Congress and other official documents are the imperishable record of his public actions, as well as the most correct exhibition of his character.

His own writings must ever remain the truest record of his life. Nothing can refute or supersede them. His confidential letters to his brother, to his secretary, to his steward and to his servants, as woll as the more formal epistles addressed to the President of Congress, all tell the same story and exhibit the same man, one who was intent on discharging every trust, and fulfilling every duty with punctuality and completeness.

Presents for Patty and Polly.

When Washington returned to Philadelphia after his trip to the East, in 1789, he stopped at Uxbridge, Mass., and was entertained at the home of Samuel Taft. The old homestead, with the great oak before the door, remains yet in possession of the family, preserved in commemoration of the distinguished visitor.

Washington was so well pleased with his reception and entertainment at Uxbridge that he wrote the following letter to Mr. Taft, which is carefully preserved in the family:

HARTFORD, Nov. 8, 1789.

SIR—Being informed that you have given my name to one of your sons, and called another after Mrs. Washington's family (Dandridge); and being moreover very much pleased with the modest and innocent looks of your two daughters, Patty and Polly, I do for these reasons send each of these girls a piece of chintz; and to Patty, who bears the name of Mrs. Washington, and who waited more upon us than Polly did, I send five guineas, with which she may buy herself any little ornaments she may want, or she may dispose of them in any manner more agreeable to herself.

As I do not give these things with a view to have it talked of, or even to its being known, the less there is said about the matter the better it will please me; but that I may be sure the chintz and money have got safe to hand, let Patty, who, I dare say, is equal to it, write me a line informing me thereof, directed "To the President of the United States, at New York." I wish you and your family well, and am your humble servant,

G. WASHINGTON.

Washington and the Spy.

It is painful to find that the father of his country practiced deceit down in Jersey. Elias Boudinot, whose papers are getting printed, reveals this side of Washington's character. He actually played a trick on Sir William Howe, and made him believe he had 12,000 men in his army about Morristown, when he had but 3,000.

It seems that Howe had sent one of his innumerable spies, who were Tories in New York and patriots in Philadelphia, to see what was going on about Morristown. The adjutant general found out the rogue and asked Gen. Washington if he would not have him arrested.

No, said the crafty Virginian—and here I quote from Boudinot—"but ordered him to go home and immediately to draw returns from every brigadier in the army of the number of their brigades, making the army to consist of about 12,000 effective men, etc.; to place these in the pigeon-holes on his desk, and then get introduced to the spy and to invite him to lodge with him—to endeavor to get him to sup with him alone. About 9 o'clock in the evening to have an orderly sergeant to call on him with positive orders that the adjutant should attend the general in haste. That then he should make an excuse to the gentleman suspected as a sy and leave him alone about half an hour. This was done, and in this interval, as was suspected, the spy took a copy of the returns and next morning went off with them to New York. This convinced Gen. Howe that we were too strong to be attacked, and saved us through the winter."

Prof. Hosmer, who has written so well about Sir Henry Vane and Samuel Adams, thinks that Adams and Franklin did not behave quite right in the matter of Gov. Hutchinson's letters, which put Massachusetts in the hands of the patriots. But here is George Washington, who "could not tell a lie," making his brigadiers all tell one.—Boston Advertiser.

The Testimony of Time.

The people of these United States this year celebrate the one hundred and sixtieth anniversary of George Washington's birth. Every intelligent and patriotic citizen will recall with pride the influence of his triumphs in war, his accomplishments as the first President of the Republic, his superb character as a man.

The visible results of the policy inaugurated under his executive approval are marvelous. Thirteen States formed his confederacy, all of them purely agricultural. Since the Continental regime they have become the foremost region of the world in the variety and volume of their manufactures through the unexampled fertility of inventive genius.

He stands the noblest leader who was ever intrusted with his country's life. His patience under provocation; his calmness in danger, and lofty courage when all others despaired; his prudent delays when the Continental Congress was imperative and the staff almost insubordinate, and his quick resistless blows when action was possible; his magnanimity to his defamers and generosity to his foes; his ambition for his country and unselfishness for himself; his sole desire the freedom and independence of America, and his only wish to return after victory to private life and the peaceful pursuits and pleasures of home, have all combined to make him, by the unanimous judgment of the world, the foremost figure of history. Not so abnormally developed in any direction as to be called a genius, yet he was the strongest, because the best balanced, the fullest rounded, the most even, and most self-masterful of men—the incarnation of common sense and moral purity, of action and repose.

The Republic will live so long as it reveres the memory and emulates the virtues of George Washington.

To G. Washington.

All hail to you, George Washington,
On this your natal day!
The man who could not tell a lie!
All honor let us pay!

Our fathers recognized your worth,
They liked your cut so well,
They ran you twice for President,
For the lie you could not tell.

But if you were alive to-day,
And had your way to carve,
And really could not tell a lie,
Why, George, you'd simply starve.

A Portrait of Washington.

The original portrait of Washington (right side of the face) by Gilbert Stuart, long thought to have been destroyed by the artist, seems to have been recognized in the hands of Dr. W. F. Channing, of California, who inherited it from his distinguished father, Rev. William Ellery Channing, who obtained it from his uncle, Colonel Gibbs.—Science.

When the train arrived at this place it stopped only a few seconds, and when she reached the car-door it started up. She, thinking that probably the depot platform had not been reached, stepped out upon the car platform and down a step or two. THE SENATE AND HOUSE.

WORK OF OUR NATIONAL LAWMAKERS.

Proceedings of the Senate and House of Representatives — Important Measures Discussed and Acted Upon—Gist of the Business.

The National Solons.

On the 9th the House entered actively upon the legislative work of the session and in the brief space of five hours more practical business was transacted than in any previous day of the Congress. The President's message with its various suggestions and recommendations for legislation was referred to the various appropriate committees without even a single contest over the question of jurisdiction and material progress was made in the consideration of the Military Academy appropriation bill. Several measures were the subjects of discussion, but no definite settlement of any was made. In the Senate Finance Committee, the free-coinage bill was not discussed at great length, and when it came to a vote in reporting the bill to the Senate adversely it was at once apparent that there had been some change in the views of certain Senators since the last Congress. The vote stood 7 to 4 in favor of the adverse report. Although adversely reported, the bill was placed on the calendar of the Senate, where it can be reached, in deference to its friends, and it is understood that Senator Stewart will insist on calling it up in the Senate at an early day. The Peffer bill, proposing to loan Government funds to the farmers of Indiana, did not receive a single favorable vote.

In the Senate, on the 10th, Mr. Squire, from the Committee on Public Buildings, reported a bill appropriating $500,000 for a public building at Seattle, Wash. Calendar. The joint resolution as to the payment to the State of West Virginia of her proportion of the direct tax was again taken up in the morning hour, and after debate went over without action. The bill providing for the public printing and binding and the distribution of public documents went over without action. Mr. Gorman presented the credentials of his colleague, Mr. Gibson. Oath of office was administered to him by the Vice President. After a brief executive session the Senate adjourned. The event in the House was the report of the Bland free-coinage bill by the Committe on Coinage, Weights, and Measures. The action was not one that involved debate, as the bill merely went on the calendar to be taken up in the order of its consideration. The House also ordered an investigation of the Pension Bureau, as managed by Commissioner Raum. A bill concerning control of national banks occupied the balance of the session.

In the Senate, on the 11th, the bill to amend the law as to the coasting trade on the great lakes was passed, Mr. Vilas giving the following explanation of its object and effect: The change which it makes in the existing law consists simply in requiring the owner, agent, or master of a vessel touching at any intermediate port, in the course of its journey on the lakes, to make a statement of the quantity and nature of goods delivered or shipped at that port. Its object is simply to preserve among the various lake ports statistical information of the business done at these ports. The bill appropriating $200,000 for a public building at Cheyenne, Wyo., was passed. The printing bill went over without action. Adjourned till the 15th. In the House, the old parties came in for a scoring by Jerry Simpson. The principal question was the appointment of messengers. Mr. Simpson's speech was interrupted by frequent cries of "Put him on the roll." "Amend the resolution," and "He saved the Union," but the speech of the gentleman of Kansas had the effect of overwhelmingly defeating the resolution. The military academy appropriation bill was taken up and consumed the remainder of the day.

Death to the Octopus!

There is every reason to believe that the existence of the Louisiana lottery will cease with the expiration of its present charter in 1894. The published statement of John A. Morris, who has long controlled the operations of that gigantic concern, enjoying also most of its ill-gotten revenues, seems to be conclusive that the directors of the company would not accept the constitutional amendment pending before the voters of the State for the renewal of the lottery franchise, even though it should be adopted. The decision of the United States Supreme Court, upholding the validity of the anti-lottery postal law, was a death-blow to the Louisiana company. The extent of its scheme compelled it to depend for its receipts on more than local patronage, and its success was impossible without the use of the postal facilities of the country. The statutes of the several States imposing punishments for the traffic in lottery tickets might be avoided or rendered ineffective. But the exclusion of the lottery's business from the mails is fatal to its hopes for further lease of life, without regard to the action of the people of Louisiana. Morris, who is a shrewd man, has been quick to appreciate the sweeping effect of the court's decision. He gives further evidence of his perspicacity by wisely abandoning a battle in which victory, if achieved, would be barren of profitable result. With the death of the New Orleans octopus there is almost positive assurance that another giant lottery enterprise will never again flourish in the United States. The destruction of this system of robbery is good for the morals of the people. Admitting that here and there a small investment of money in a lottery may once in a great while bring large returns does not lessen the evil. There was a great deal of truth in the observation of Horace Greeley: "A sad day in any man's life is that on which he comes into possession of a dollar which he has not honestly earned."

Figgered All Around Him.

"Simon," said the Judge, "I suppose you know why you are drawn up here?"

"Yes, sah, I has a puffeck un'erstanding ob de fack."

"This gentleman accuses you of entering his grocery store and stealing a side of bacon?"

"I reckon the gen'leman figger it up about right, sah."

"Then you have no defense to make?"

"No, sah, I'se gwine to let jestice take her course, but 'fore yer gits through wid dese proceedings I wish yer'd let me know, 'case I wants ter make a few suggestions."

"Well, make your suggestions, and if you have any plea to offer why you should not be punished, be quick about it, for there are several other colored gentlemen in court who are anxiously awaiting sentence."

"I acknowledge, Jedge, dat I went inter de man's house, and dat when I went out I took de side ob meat."

"Well, then, you plead guilty?"

"No, sah, I don't. Lemme gin yer a few pints, an' ef yer is a man of affairs, yer can't agree wid no law in de book dat would want to punish me. I has been tradin' at dis gen'leman's store for some time, an' always at de end ob de munf he'd figger on one piece ob paper and den figger on anuder. Den he'd pick anuder s'rap an' figger a while, and den he'd figger on a piece of brown paper, an' den he'd figger on de counter, an' den on top ob a paper box. I'se sold too much cotton not to know what all dat figgerin' means. It means dat de man is figgerin' all aroun' yer, and der fust thing yer know he's got yer. Arter dis gen'leman had figgered all aroun' me, ter sorter make de thing ekil, I tuck up de side of bacon. Dar ain't no law what yer can turn to when a man beats yer figgerin' yer know."

"I am very well acquainted with grocerymen," the Judge replied, "and they have often figured around me. Take the side of meat, Simon, and go home. I'll fine the figuring gentleman $5."—Arkansaw Traveler.

The Grip a Good Thing.

Jimson—This grip is a mighty good thing when you come to think of it.

Jamson—Don't see how.

"That's because you are not practical. I've saved a heap of money by it."

"Saved money?"

"Lots. The first time I had it I went to a doctor and got a prescription. Instead of taking that prescription to a drug store I made a copy of it and took the copy to the druggist. Since then every time I've caught the grip I've just used that same old prescription, and it hasn't cost me a cent for doctor's fees. I just tell you it's a sight cheaper than having half a dozen different diseases, no two alike."—New York Weekly.

A Legend of Love.

Kissing under the mistletoe is a remnant of Scandinavian mythology. It is related that Loki, the god of mischief and ruler of the earth, hated Balder, the Northern Apollo, and, as all else could not hurt the favorite of the gods, the evil one made an arrow of mistletoe, which he gave to Hoder, who was blind, to try. Hoder shot the arrow, and Balder was killed. Afterwards, on Balder being restored to life, the mistletoe, at the request of the celestial deities, was given to Friga, the goddess of love, every one who passed under it receiving a kiss, to testify that the branch was the emblem of love, and not of death.

Right or Wrong.

Which will yo have? It does seem as if some folks prefer to have the last condition of the liver rather than the first. They perpetually dose themselves with purgatives totally without virtue as alterative of liver trouble. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the successful candidate for the people's choice, and yet, popular and well known as it is, there are unfortunates who keep on trying the drastic remedies of former days. It is to the intelligent portion of the public that the well known and long tried properties of the Bitters appeal. Reason should be guided by experience in the matter of medication. "The best guide to our feet is the lamp of experience," said a great patriot of the early revolutionary period, and the exclamation is pregnant with truth. For over a third of a century the Bitters daily has met with the indorsement of people suffering from liver complaint, malaria, constipation, rheumatism, debility and troubles accompanied by dyspepsia. Latterly it has declared itself and been thoroughly approved as a remedy for "la grippe."

Mother (quietly)—She came up about half an hour ago and asked for two pairs of scissors.

"Huh! What in creation did she want them for?"

"She said she was going to help him clip coupons."

"Whew! I'll go right down and lock the doors so he can't get away."—Street & Smith's Good News.

A FRIEND who at one time enjoyed the intimate acquaintance of William Ross Wallace, the author of that very popular song, "The Sword of Bunker Hill," writes that Mr. Wallace once told him that he was paid just $10 for that piece of composition. He said, further, that Mr. Wallace encountered upon the platform of the Cooper Institute, at a later day, Lowell Mason, who wrote the music for this song, and had the curiosity to ask Mr. Mason what he was paid for his share of the production. The latter answered that he received $10 also. Thus author and composer were placed on terms of strict equality. The piece netted many thousands of dollars to its publishers.

DR. LEO PRIBYL says that the Germans and Swedes are utilizing their peat bogs in the manufacture of naphtha, tar, solar oil, paraffine, acetic acid and gas, and the peat yields an elastic fiber which, freed from dust, is employed for weaving into carpets. Good peat also furnishes a cellulose which is valuable to papermakers. Besides serving as a wholesome litter for live stock, it is also used to preserve perishable goods. Meat and fish are now packed in peat litter for transport between Trieste and Copenhagan.

An Important Difference.

Beauty often depends on plumpness; so does comfort; so does health. If you get thin, there is something wrong, though you may feel no sign of it.

Thinness itself is a sign; sometimes the first sign; sometimes not.

The way to get back plumpness is by CAREFUL LIVING, which sometimes includes the use of Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil.

Let us send you—free—a little book which throws much light on all these subjects.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Strongest, Purest, Most Economical.

Certain baking powder makers are publishing falsified extracts from the Government reports, with pretended analyses and certificates, wherein an attempt is made to compare their baking powders with the "Royal," or making bogus tests from house to house, their obvious purpose being to counteract the recent exposures of the inferiority of their own goods arising from their impurity, low strength, and lack of keeping qualities as shown by the Government chemists and others.

ROYAL
5
BAKING POWDER

As to whether any of these baking powders are equal to the "Royal," the official tests clearly determine. When samples of various baking powders were purchased from the grocers, and analyzed by the United States Government Chemists and the Chemists of State and City Boards of Health, the reports revealed the fact that the "Royal" contained from 28 per cent. to 60 per cent. more leavening strength than any other cream of tartar baking powder, and also that it was more perfectly made, of purer ingredients, and altogether wholesome.

As these powders are sold to consumers at the same price, by the use of the Royal Baking Powder there is an average saving of over one third, besides the advantage of assured purity and wholesomeness of food, and of bread, biscuit, and cake made perfectly light, sweet, and palatable—advantages not to be had in the use of the low-grade, cheaply made baking powders that contain lime, alum, and other impurities.

Did they make the coffee and cook the supper?

Sylvia Daniels has, we believe, been a believer in spiritualism for many years. She now claims to be, not only a medium herself, but gifted with the power to make mediums of others. She gives audience to visitors every day and holds seances every evening. Many persons visit her, some hoping to have communication with departed friends, and numbers no doubt out of curiosity. Whatever the the motive prompting attendance may be the "almighty dollar" must be left.

ST. JOE.

Henry Saylor and wife, who have been sick for some time are convalescing

David Andrews, of Coburn Town, has been very sick, but at last account was some better.

Frank Barney has been laboring with an attack of la grippe but says he now feels a thousand per cent. better.

Henry Maxwell has been having a hard time with a cold, being so hoarse for a few days that he could not speak, but his voice finally returned, and now he is making up for all lost time.

The St. Joe creamery is still doing a good business for this time of year We are told that the quantity of milk is gradually increasing, although some of that same quantity tests very low, owing to the butter fat being scarce.

The state veterinary was called here last week to look after two horses that were supposed to have the glanders. He pronounced the disease glanders and ordered them killed One of the animals was appraised at sixty dollars. The other was not paid for and of course was a dead loss to the owner. They were the property of A. M. Dermott.

Dr. H. W. Bowman has had, for the last six weeks, an uncommonly good harvest, not of wheat, corn or rye, but of la grippe. Doc has been on the road so much that all of his own teams and a good share of the livery horses are laid up for repairs. The professor ought to be a free silver man. Dr. B. S Sheffer, our other physician, is also having a big ride.

A joint institute, of Newville and Concord townships, was held at the school house, in St. Joe, last Saturday. There was a good attendance of teachers from both townships and the institute was declared by all a complete success. The morning hour was taken up by Supt Merica in a lengthy talk on the different methods of teaching grammar. He was listened to in a manner which showed that his remarks were timely and appreciated by all. After him came the regular order of business which occupied the rest of the forenoon. In the afternoon the time until recess was occupied by Prof. Fairfield, of Angola. Topic.—"Problems to Solve and How to Solve Them" His analysis of his problems showed that he had made these "problems" the study of a life-time. At half past three a recess of ten minutes was taken, after which came two songs by the pupils of the primary department, assisted by their teacher Mrs. Audrey Woodcox; two more songs by a part of the pupils of Miss Emma Curie's department, and then another talk from Prof. Fairfield on different topics, one of which was directed more especially to the parents of the pupils. And right here let us say that if the parents would visit the school more and talk less, there would certainly be less complaints found. Another thing.—If the patrons would be a little more charitable, (Charity covers a multitude of sins.) and not fly clear off until they investigate, there would be less fault found. Among the visitors at the institute we noticed Rev. S. S Stanton, O. H. Widney, Alex Filley, Solomon Shilling, H. Gee, S. F. Widney, C. Curie, M. Headley, Fred Johnson, Frank Scholes, Frank Coughanour, Mrs. Emma Hart, Mrs. Emma Woodcox, Mrs Bert Patterson, Mrs. W. C. Patterson, Mrs. M. E Olds, Mrs. B. S. Sheffer, Mrs. H. Gee, Mrs. Chas. Tustison, Mrs. Fred Johnson and Mrs. D. Baker. To hear our old friends, C. M. Merica and Frank Coughanour, (the latter, of Hicksville,) open up on one another, it would hardly be supposed that C. M. had lost the use of his tongue, even for a few brief moments. But yet, he says he did.

This is sad indeed, as he was very young and promised such a long life of usefulness. We are to blind to see God's wisdom, but He doeth all things well.

Protracted meeting has been in progress at the M. E church for some time and will continue. There has been som success but not as much as there ought to be Rev. Farley of Elkhart preached the first week and drew large audiences He is a fine orator and will no doubt make a success lecturing on the platform.

IN MEMORIAM.

"To the Past go more dear faces.
Every year.
As the loved leave vacant places,
Every year.
Everywhere the sad eyes meet us,
In the evening's dusk they greet us,
And to come to them, entreat us,
Every year"

Samuel M. Knott, son of Robert and Elizabeth (Gill) Knott, was born in Crawford county, Ohio, Nov. 19th, 1841; and came with his parents to their new home in Butler township, DeKalb county, Indiana, in the autumn of 1845.

Of the joys and sorrows, of the pleasures and privations incident to pioneer life,—for their new home was then an unbroken forest,—we can not speak at length today. Suffice it to say that every opportunity afforded him by the common schools of the neighborhood, and later on by the high schools of the adjoining towns were earnestly improved by him in order that he might fit himself for the duties and responsibilities of American citizenship.

In the autumn of 1865, he sought and received admission into the time honored institution of Free and Accepted Masons. He was then "Initiated an Entered Apprentice," "Passed to the degree of Fellow Craft," and "Raised to the Sublime degree of Master Mason," in DeKalb Lodge, No. 214, at Auburn, Indiana.

In the early spring of 1881 we again find him knocking at the door of our Masonic edifice. He was then "Advanced to the honorary degree of Mark Master," "Duly elected to preside in the chair," "Received and acknowledged a Most Excellent Master," and "Exalted to the august degree of the Royal Arch," in William Hacker Chapter, No. 63, at Waterloo, Indiana.

In the month of December, 1885, he again sought and received further light in Masonry in DeKalb Council, No. 57, at Auburn, Indiana. It was then he penetrated the "Ninth Arch", and was honored with the degree of Royal and select Master.

His life was one of toil varied only by teaching a few terms in the common schools. To him and his class of toilers the present owe a debt of gratitude. With nothing to aid them but the "magic wand of toil," these sturdy pioneers have changed the frowning forest into fruitful fields and happy homes. With thrifty hand they sowed the seeds of plenty, that those loved ones who follow them

"Might gather as their own
The harvest which the dead had sown."

He was twice elected trustee of Butler township and served his constituents with honor, ability and fidelity.

In 1872 he united in marriage with Miss Roxanna Parker, of Huntertown, Allen county, Indiana. This happy union, strengthened and cemented with the "trowel of love," for twenty years, has been broken at last by death.

To them were born five children; Robert D., Fred W., Flint D., Lena M. and Sammie. These, with a grief-stricken mother and many relatives and acquaintances are left to mourn the loss of a true friend, an indulgent father, a devoted husband.

On the 11th day of February 1892, at the age of 50 years, 2 months and 22 days, surrounded by those he loved, he passed within the silent tent of death, "whose curtain never outward swings.

Many a summons came to him,

"As it must come to us all,
When each shall hear the Warden's Call.
When each with Ashlar rough or true,
Must pass Death's solemn portals through.
Be it ours, brethren, then, to hear,
From the Master's lips these words of cheer,
'Your work is found both true and square,
Pass on.'"

And now Friend, Brother, Companion, Father and Husband, we bid you a last,—

"No. We will not bid you a last farewell;
For that would fill our hearts with mourning.
But in some bright clime we will meet you again
And will greet you then—'Good morning.'"

Mrs. Birtha Timmerman was born in Stark Co., Ohio, March 24, 1867, and died Feb. 10, 1892, aged 24 years, 10 months and 16 days. She was united in marriage with B[illegible] Timmerman Aug 8, 1889. Eleven years of age she gave her heart to the Lord and united with the Methodist Protestant church. She She was a faithful member and a devoted christian, She maintained that faith unto death which was once delivered unto the saints. She expressed her readiness to depart this life, to a friend a short time ago, but said she "I should like to live to raise my child, yet God's will be done." It pleased the Lord to call her to rest, but why so early in life is not ours to know. Now we know in part. She leaves a precious child 21 months old, a loving husband and a host of friends to mourn her departure. The funeral was conducted from the Lutheran church, Rev. J. D. Brosy officiating. The interment was in Woodlawn cemetery.

AUBURN AND VICINITY.

Some Reminiscences of its Early Days and Pioneer Citizens.

1859—Continued.

The lease was for a term of eight years and was made in consideration, that the society should within sixty days build a good and substantial board fence seven feet high along the north and east sides of the grounds and the residue within one year There was, also, the further consideration that the annual fair should be held on the premises and that pens, sheds and a hall be built. Shade trees were to have been planted but were not and a track was to be laid out on which to train stock.

At the expiration of the lease, the ground and fence were to be given up, the society reserving lumber, sheds and such fixtures. At this time, J. N. Chamberlain was president and M. F. Pierce was secretary. It seems that Wyllys Griswold was elected president to succeed Mr. Chamberlain and held the office continuously until the expiration of the lease and dissolution of the society.

Messrs. A. B. Park and Frank Willis were secretaries among others, and S. B. Ward succeeding T. R. Dickinson, who was treasurer in 1858, held that office several years.

The fair was good for the time, but stands no comparison with the great expense attending the fairs of 1891 at Auburn and at Waterloo.

It is interesting to note as the foundation of the present strong healthy interest in fairs in DeKalb county, the primitive and practical character of that early two days' fair held during the last days of October.

Probably not a herd of cows, a flock of sheep or a sty of swine now owned in this county, but can trace the better part of their value to this and successive fairs. A quiet, strong, emulative and educative influence was exerted in all directions and the fruition has been remarkable.

The receipts show the initial character of the fair. From all sources, but $410,-77 were realized and there was paid out $371.16, leaving a balance of $39.71; of which $8.00 was uncurrent funds, good $31.70. About forty persons were in receipt of premiums ranging in value from 50cts to $6.50. James Barclay and J. M. Brumbeck drew $4 each and A. M. Brumbeck $6.50, James R. Cosper was awarded first premium on best yoke of three year old cattle, an agricultural auxiliary that in these days of mechanical farming appliances has ceased to exist. A yoke of oxen hauling sawlogs, a load of wood or plowing a field would attract curious attention.

Premiums were paid, partly in muslin, part in books and a part in lumber and amounted to $20.86. Muslin was sold later, to various parties at five cents per yard, Alexander Provines being purchasers of upward of 100 yards, and W. Wigent and K. Baker 255 yards.

A novel expenditure of resources was a subscription on time for 95 Ohio cultivators at 60c each per annum. The first fruits of the fair were evidently a desire for knowledge of improved methods in farming.

The membership in 1860 was 126, the fee $1.00. There were two days' fair, October 18 and 19. Tickets sold the first day brought in $17.24, and the second day $209.71 and S. Harris, of the cultivator received a remittance of $41.88.

Pacing, trotting and running races are prominent features of fairs of to-day and surprising speed is shown at these contests. The nature of exercises, the attractions presented, the owners of choice stock in 1859 are unrecorded but as said, the seed then sown has produced a valuable crop in stimulus to agriculture.

One great drawback to profitable farming was the large areas of swamp land and the lack of drainage. To remedy this difficulty, hundreds of ditches have been laid and many thousand of dollars expended by land owners.

In 1859, under an act of legislation, abortive attempts were in progress looking to the drainage of these lands,

In accordance with that act, the wet lands in DeKalb county were advertised and sold by the county auditor. The purchase money was paid into the county treasury and the treasurer sent this money to the Treasurer of State in whose hands it constituted a fund to pay for reclaiming swamp lands.

A commissioner was appointed by the governor to locate ditches, to let the job of digging them and to certify to the state auditor when any money was due to contractor, commissioner, or his assistants.

The state auditor then drew orders on the state treasury for the amount of such certificates and the treasurer paid the orders out of the swamp land fund. The system was theoretically sound but in practice, results varied with the integrity and executive ability of the commissioners.

Joseph Nodine, county surveyor received the appointment as the first swamp land commissioner in this county and under his management which was deemed by public opinion, extravagant, a very large portion of the funds derived from sale of swamp lands was expended.

Mr. Nodine was succeeded by W. W. Griswold, of whose stewardship we have no information.

In the light of recent controversy respecting the duties and fees of surveyor and deputies, it is opportune to note the analogy of the old system and the new.

The surveyor has superseded the commissioner; the county auditor and county treasurers, the state officers; and the county fund has hitherto borne the heavy burden of defraying a great part of the enormous, just and unjust, expense of drainage.

The village newpaper is in general a true exponent of the sentiments of the community which gives it support. It voices business enterprise by the variety, size and numbers of its advertisements and measures party political zeal by the tone and quality of its editorials. Where the paper succeeds, judged by this standard, the publisher is in touch with his patrons and stability with prosperity is assured.

The newspapers of 1859 in DeKalb county were yet in all respects in an embryotic state and their editors bravely contended with many difficulties and met with much to discourage them.

(To be continued next week.)

A Visit to Bald Head.

The day was one of the brightest and balmiest of last September. We were on an "outing" for a few days, on the shore of Lake Michigan, one of the gems of our inland seas. Upon a number of previous occasions we had been reminded of the romantic beauty of this natural curosity, and urged to visit it, but always being pressed for time and considering its description as a possible exaggeration, we allowed the opportunities to pass. Upon this occasion we concluded to spend one day to satisfy ourselves whether it was worth looking at or not. The day was bright and warm and at an early hour we had horse and carriage ready, and a substantial lunch provided by kind friends, and were on our way to this noted place. Our route lay along a deep sandy road, that followed near the meandering shore of Lake Michigan. The deep heavy roar of the waves, asthey broke upon the bold bluffs, filled our ears like the roar of Niagara. The route also passed through the richest part of Michigan's fruit belt, and the peach orchards that lined the road on both sides, in almost one continuous orchard. The trees were heavily laden with red and yellow peaches, many of the trees breaking down under their load of rich fruit, while the ground beneath them lay covered with fruit that made the mouth water. No fences interposed between us and these tempting feasts, yet their very abundance soon sated the appetite and made one almost wish he had never seen a peach. After going up a long steep sandy hill, a high white object some five miles away could be seen, and we concluded this must be our objective point. We descended the hill and the white object apparent disappeared. Continuing our journey, we soon came in sight of the little town of Saugatuck, and the Kalamazoo river, and we were soon wading white sand about six inches deep, and following the Kalamazoo, in its tortuous passage among the sand hills to Lake Michigan we came to small amphitheater surrounded with a grove walnut, maple and other forrest trees. Here we halted and found many others camped, and gathered in groups, or walking about, while to our left rose a very steep hill covered with a dense growth of pine trees, its top completely hidden from view by their dense foliage. We looked about us, and soon saw a stairway almost hidden from view among the trees. We approached it, and looking upward were surprised to see its ascending steps lost among the tree tops. We started to ascend. The grade is about 60 degrees, and at short intervals of about twenty-five feet there is a landing, with comfortable seats with railing on all sides, where the weary may sit down and rest, and then try again. The day was very hot, but the thick foliage of the odorous pines shut out the sun, and also hid the top and bottom of the ascending stairway. We hurried upward, thinking the top would soon appear, and in our eagerness were soon almost completely out of breath. As we neared the top the stairs were obliterated by great drifts of sand that had blown from the top, almost choking the passage, and burying the stairway, all but the railing. Panting and puffing we finally reached the top, a white sandy waste about one acre in extent. Upon the top an observatory about twenty-five feet high has been erected, making an entire elevation of two hundred and fifty feet. With our our limbs almost refusing our will, we ascended the observatory and enjoyed a panoramic view of the surrounding country. Looking westward, a waste of white sand stretched to the brink of the lake about one mile away, and from our elevation the coast line was in plain view for at least fifteen miles, and the white sails of schooners looked like great swans upon the bosom of the lake. Black smoke here and there indicated the place of steamers plowing the deep green waters. Turning toward the road we had traveled, we saw a narrow thread of white, fading out of view at a distance of six or eight miles among the peach orchards. Turning our faces inland, the scene was beautiful in the extreme. The Kalamazoo river wound its way across an apparently level plain, its bright waters faiding from view among the green meadows in the distance, and the novel sight of a steamboat on dry land was presented. The trees along the land soon hid the waters of the river, but the great white steamboats seemed to thread their way over a vast prairie. Trains of cars, six or eight miles away, seemed to be creeping along at a snail's-pace, while at our feet the neat little village of Saugatuck nestled along the banks of the river. This mound which is known far and near as "Bald Head", from its white sandy top seems to have been built by old Boreas himself. The base is perhaps not more than ten acres in extent, and its top about one acre. The sides, except the lakeside are covered with a dense growth of pines, which continue to the top, the level of the top, only being bare and treeless. With tired limbs we descended the long stairway, and after an excellent lunch, made the more so by our exertion, and a stroll about the streets of the village, and a ride upon the river, we returned, feeling a hundred times repaid for our trip to "Bald Head."

Pronounced Hopeless, Yet Saved.

From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hurd, of Groton, S. D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold, which settled on my lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in consumption. Four doctors gave me up, saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Savior, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds. I gave it a trial, took in all, eight bottles; it has cured me, and thank God I am now a well and hearty woman." Trial bottle free at Robbins & McCords' drugstore, regular size, 50c. and $1.00. 4

Don't Need Protection.

In a recent interview, Hon. C. G. Conn, proprietor of the well-known musical instrument factory at Elkhart, Ind., the product of which may be found in all parts of the civilized world, had this to say about the tariff and wages:

"The way to get the best results is not to oppress the working people. I pay the largest wages of any brass horn factory in the world, yet I compete with the cheapest labor of Europe, and sell my instruments right along at prices as low as they can make them. What about the tariff? Nothing. It doesn't do one thing for me, and there should be no tariff. I don't require any 'protection' and am absolutely opposed to it. It fosters trusts, combines, monopolies of all sorts. My success lies in the fact that I employ the most skillful artisans—not only employ their hands but their heads—and they make such fine instruments so superior in finish and tone that their product finds a ready sale. Here's Signor Liberati, the greatest cornet virtuoso in the world—you can't get him to play on any cornet but mine, because he says its the best in the world. No sir; protection doesn't do anything for me and no honest manufacturer needs it. With the illimitable resources of this country, a protective tariff is an absurdity, a monstrous injustice."

Sell Cheaper to Foreigners.

We have often stated that manufacturers in general do not need "protection," as their profits are big enough without. In proof of this, it has been often asserted by democatic papers, but denied by republicans, that many manufacturers in this country sell their goods cheaper to foreigners than they do to their own people at home. Lately the "Home Market Club," a high tariff club, wrote to A. B. Farquhar, an agricultural implement maker of York, Pa., asking about this. He replied.

"We do sell goods cheaper to customers in foreign countries directly and to jobbers for export than we do to the domestic trade. This I could not truthfully deny or candidly conceal. You would like to learn the process by which the manufacturer can afford to sell the foreign buyer goods for less than he can the home customer. The reply is simplicity itself. We receive the prices current on the market on which we sell. We can not get more and can not be expected to take less."

In view of this admission by protected manufacturers, the democrats in congress have got up a bill to place all agricultural implements on the free list, Good plan.

TROPHIES OF A CHASE

AFTER THE FLEETING ITEMS OF NEWS.

Heroic Efforts of a Fireman to Save His Two Children from the Flames—Sad Fate of a Dancing Party—Panic in a Chicago Hotel—Michigan's Electors.

DESTITUTION IN AUSTRIA.

Vienna Thronged with Starving Country People Clamoring for Food.

Vienna special: The condition of the unemployed is becoming desperate and the authorities are making serious preparations for trouble. Charitable provision has been made for many of them and large apartments with fires to keep the unfortunates warm have been opened, as well as places where food is freely given to the destitute. But these remedies are not sufficient to deal with the evil, which is growing every day, as the people without work pour in from the provinces. Groups of wretched people can be seen tramping into Vienna, their shoes worn out, and women holding children to their breast half covered with rags. They all come with the idea that the Emperor will provide for them, and most of them hold the Government responsible for being deprived of their work. But for help from residents along the route many of them would perish of starvation.

The other day they turned out to the number of several thousand and paraded the principal streets, shouting: "Give us work!" As the parade threatened to become disorderly, especially in the neighborhood of breadshops and other places where food was sold, a large body of police attacked the parade and dispersed them, making a number of arrests. A painful feature of the affair was the readiness with which the famished people submitted to arrest, because they would get something to eat.

The Crew of the Clara.

San Francisco special: The British ship California has brought to this port Capt. Kuhlman and twelve of the crew of the general ship Clara, coal laden from Liverpool for this port, which was burned in mid-ocean. The crew was forced to take to the boats. There were twenty-six men in the crew. The captain and twelve men entered one boat, and the mate with the others manned the remaining boats. Six days later the captain's boat was picked up by the California. The day following the rescue a strong gale commenced and the other boat is believed to have gone to the bottom.

Heroic Effort to Save His Two Children from the Flames.

When Fireman Lynch of McKeesport, Pa., responded with his company to an alarm he found that it was his own house that was burning. He knew that his two small children were alone in the building and he rushed in to save them. A cry for help soon after he entered brought his comrades to his assistance when he was found prostrate on the floor with his children clasped in his arms. All three were carried out and then it was found that both of the children were dead, while Lynch himself was unconscious and can hardly live.

Sad Fate of a Dancing Party.

A party of young people, who had been attending a dance at Braddock, Pa., were run down by a train on the Pennsylvania road. One was killed and two others fatally injured. The party had missed the last train and were walking home. At Hawkins Station the train suddenly appeared around the curve and ran them down before they could step from the track. Alice Gaskill was instantly killed. William Deware, aged 22, sustained injuries from which he died a few hours later, and Milton Sigler was so badly injured that the physicians have no hopes for his recovery.

Michigan's Electors.

The Michigan Republican State Committee has decided to ignore the Minor electoral law in the choice of presidential electors this year, the Minor law being the plan providing for the choice of elector by districts instead of on a State ticket as heretofore. Their convention will choose delegates to be voted for at large, and it is hoped by this plan to make a test of the law's constitutionality.

The Louisiana Lottery.

A cablegram from Panama says the Government of Nicaragua has granted the Louisiana Lottery a perpetual charter. At the expiration of the Louisiana charter John A. Morris and his associates will move the headquarters of the concern to Nicaragua and carry on business as usual. The lottery company will pay the Nicaraguan Government $100,000 a year and will have a monopoly.

Cleveland in Michigan.

Ann Arbor (Mich.) special: Grover Cleveland had a great reception on his arrival here, and met with ovations on the way to Detroit. His visit was in response to the invitation of the students of the law department to deliver the annual address in commemoration of Washington's birthday. The city was handsomely decorated in honor of the event. University Hall was packed to overflowing. Mr. Cleveland was presented as the orator of the occasion, and his reception amounted to an ovation, surpassing anything in the history of the University. Mr. Cleveland devoted his entire address to the life, character and work of Washington, and the influence of his memory on the people. Mr. Cleveland sat down amid a storm of applause and was followed by Gov. Winans, Gov. Campbell, Gov. Felch, Gov. Boyle, Gov. Jerome, Don M. Dickinson, and Chief Justice Morse.

COLD LEAD!

For a Gay Parisian Deceiver.

Paris special: Great excitement was caused at Cannes by the shooting of M. Abeille, a well-known Parisian, by an American banker named Deacon. It is asserted that Deacon came home unexpectedly and suspecting that all was not right burst open the door of his wife's apartments at the Hotel Splendide and discovered his wife in a compromising position with M. Abeille, whom he shot and mortally wounded. Mr. Deacon returned home from Paris unexpectedly and knocked angrily at the door of his wife's room, upon arriving at the hotel, and when the latter admitted him, it was clear from the appearance of both Mrs. Deacon and M. Abeille who was in her company, that the husband had good grounds to conclude that his wife had been unfaithful to him. She is said to have fallen upon her knees and to have implored Mr. Deacon to have mercy upon her, and the latter seems to have been content to turn his pistol upon the guilty friend, who is now reported to have died from the effects of the shot he received at Mr. Deacon's hands. The affair has caused the wildest kind of excitement in Cannes, and it finds startling echo here, where all the parties concerned are well known. Both Mr. and Mrs. Deacon are connected with some of the best families in the United States. Mr. Deacon, after shooting Mr. Abeille, is reported to have sent several cable messages to the United States and to Paris and to have quietly submitted to arrest.

New York Democrats.

The New York Democratic State Convention met in Albany, and selected delegates to the National Convention and Electors to be voted for at the November election. Gen. Sickles acted as Chairman. After reviewing the record of the Democratic party in New York the resolutions strongly urge Gov. Hill as the next Democratic Presidential candidate, expressing confidence in his ability to lead the party to victory. Gov. Flower also comes in for a share of commendation. The reading of the resolution instructing delegates to the next convention for Hill was greeted with applause. At the close of the reading the resolutions were unanimously adopted.

The Cleveland bolters to the number of 150 met in Union Hall as per program. Ex-Secretary Charles S. Fairchild called them to order, and F. D. Locke, of Buffalo, was made Chairman.

Resolutions were adopted calling a State Convention at Syracuse May 31, by which seventy-two delegates and seventy-two alternates shall be elected and sent to the Chicago Convention to represent them. Primaries for this new State Convention are to be called in May.

A $600,000 Fire.

One of the most disastrous fires that ever visited the business portion of Cleveland occurred the other night. The dry goods emporium of the E. M. McGillin company was totally destroyed, involving a loss of at least $600,000. The building was a five-story brick block on the corner of Superior and Seneca streets, and extending back to Long street. Shortly before midnight flames were discovered in the rear portion of the building, and so quickly did they spread that before the arrival of the fire department, the flames had shot up through the elevator shafts and were leaping 100 feet into the air from the roof. In a remarkably short time the whole building was a roaring furnace from basement to roof, and the inflamable character of the stock rendered the establishment a veritable tinder box. The fire was confined to the building in which it started, but at one time it seemed certain that the building across Seneca street could not be saved, it being on fire several times. Good work of the fire department only prevented a more disastrous conflagration.

Deserved What He Got.

The shooting of M. Emile Abeille, formerly an attache of the French legation in Washington, by Edward P. Deacon, the well-known banker, formerly of Boston, who found the Frenchman in a compromising position in Mrs. Deacon's bed-room at the Hotel Splendide at Cannes, France, is the one great subject of conversation in fashionable circles in Europe. All the parties in the case are so well-known that it is almost impossible to enter a social circle without meeting some of their friends. Mr. Deacon is upheld on all sides, particularly among Americans, for killing his wife's lover, and very little if any sympathy is left for Mrs. Deacon.

Dime-Novel Boys.

At the Townsend Street School, Lansing, Mich., one of the teachers had occasion to punish a 10-year-old pupil named Guy Cottington. She had struck him twice when he pulled out a revolver. Pointing the weapon at the teacher, he said if she struck him again he would shoot her. After a slight struggle the teacher succeeded in taking the revolver from the boy before it was discharged. A canvass of the school was made and thirteen boys of tender age were found who own revolvers, and who are accustomed to carry them at different times. Three of the boys continually go armed.

An Inhuman Father.

Parkersburg (W. Va.) special: Jeff Wadkins, who lives near Kenawha Station, was arrested and brought here and sent to jail for a brutal attempt to murder the 4-year-old child of Wadkins' wife by a former husband. Wadkins struck the little fellow with some hard instrument, knocking out one eye and all of its front teeth. He then kicked or threw it into the fire, where the child was found by neighbors who went to the house. Its toe-nails were burned off, and its toes and feet were horribly burned, and will have to be amputated. Wadkins' wife will also be arrested.

Stephen B. Elkins for Governor.

Wheeling (W. Va.) special: Ex-Congressman Geo. W. Atkinson and National Committeeman N. B. Scott, leading Republicans, say that Secretary of War Elkins is to be nominated for Governor and will accept. The formal announcement of his candidacy was made at the convention of Republican clubs in Parkersburg. The Ohio Valley Trade and Labor Assembly, composed of all the organized trades in this section, and the State Farmer's Alliance are preparing to unite on an independent State ticket and they may also have nominees in all the legislative districts.

Fatal Gas Explosion.

London special: There was an explosion in the Craig coal pit, near Aberdare, four miles from Merthyr-Tydvil, South Wales. One miner was killed and ten seriously injured. It is feared that some of the injured men will die. The accident was due to the use of lamps with naked flames by the men at their work. They had been cautioned to use the safety lamp, but paid no attention to the warning. The result was that when a sufficient quantity of gas had accumulated in the mine it was exploded by the fire from the lamps.

Sunday at the World's Fair.

Chicago special: Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, while in the city recently said, regarding the Sunday closing of the World's Fair. "The proper solution is to have every workshop, factory and store closed promptly every Saturday noon during the exposition. Besides giving wage-earners a half-holiday every week, let the great preachers, who will be here from all parts of the world, hold Sunday services in all the World's Fair buildings which will admit of it. That is the way to settle the matter."

A Kentucky Outlaw Hanged.

Middlesboro (Ky.) special: It's reported here that the noted outlaw, Berry Turner, has been killed. It is said that the people in the vicinity of "South America," who are bitter against the Turner faction, planned the capture of the desperado. When they came upon Turner he showed fight and was mortally wounded. His captors then took him a short distance from the scene of the shooting and hanged him to a tree. Further particulars are not yet known.

Dynamiters at Work.

A special from Messina, Sicily, says: A loaded bomb was discovered outside the Spanish Consulate in this city. The fuse attached to it was burning but was quickly extinguished with remarkable presence of mind by the finders. The police were alarmed and immediately began a search for the dynamiters, but no arrests have as yet been made. The men are supposed to be members of an anarchist society acting in sympathy with the anarchists in Spain.

Has He Resigned?

Paris special: The Gaulois states that Whitelaw Reid, the American Minister to France, has resigned and will leave Paris for the United States on February 27. The report lacks confirmation, but is generally credited in official circles. Mr. Reid's retirement will be generally regretted not only by Americans here, but in diplomatic and social circles. The American Minister has been very popular among all classes.

It Was Loaded.

J. M. Carter, a 14-year-old boy, while attending a masquerade party at Fort Wayne, Ind., and acting the character of an Indian, pointed a pistol, which he did not know was loaded, at Albert Roth. Carter snapped the trigger as he held the muzzle of the gun against the forehead of young Roth. There was an instantaneous flash, followed by a deafening report and Roth fell to the floor in a helpless mass.

Crazed with Fright.

The building No. 435 Fulton street, Brooklyn, N. Y., caught fire and was damaged to the extent of $5,000. All the tenants escaped, but Mrs. John Goodman became panic-stricken and, wrapping her child in the bed clothing, threw it out of the window. The little one was was caught by a fireman, but is mortally hurt. John Michaelson received severe burns about the hands and face and was taken to the Long Island Hospital.

The party from whom the furniture was purchased was apprised of the fact and claimed that she had entirely forgotten having left it there.

An Elevator Accident.

R. W. Louter, a book keeper for the Continental Insurance Company on the top floor of the Rialto Building, Chicago, met a horrible death in one of the elevators of that building. He was about to step off at the Enterson floor when the elevator shot up and he was caught between the the top of the door and the elevator frame and crushed to death. The clothing indicated that the wearer had been a professional out for a hunt. He had evidently been robbed, bound to the boat, and murdered, after which the skiff was set adrift. There is no clew to his identity.

Noted Robber Identified.

The man who tried to rob the American Express car on the New York Central, Sunday night, has been identified by R. B. Prentiss, agent of the express company at Rochester, as Perry, who committed the robbery on an express car several months ago. McInery, the messenger, is suffering severely from his bullet wound and is kept under the influence of anesthetics.

"Died from Fright."

The verdict of the Coroner's jury in the investigation of the fire in the surgical institution at Indianapolis, which occurred some weeks ago, exonerates the management and employes from all responsibility. The report further says that the patients died from fright and that none were burned to death, but met their fate by suffocation.

Albany (N. Y.) special: Mr. Cantor's Senate bill appropriating $300,000 for this State's exhibit at the World's Fair came up on second reading in the Assembly. An amendment proposed by M. CONGRESS IN CHICAGO.

LEGISLATORS INDULGE IN A WESTERN JUNKET.

A Rousing Welcome Given to the Distinguished Guests—Chicago Extends the Invitation in Hope of Securing an Appropriation for the Fair.

Congress Comes West.

The Congress of the United States arrived in Chicago the other day for the first time, and, according to the way Chicagoans tell it, held a special session in the future national capital. Congress often delegates committees to visit other cities on the public business. This time it has delegated itself and the marble halls of Washington were lonesome for two or three days, while Chicago donned her best bib and tucker and did her best to show off, so to speak, in the presence of her distinguished guests.

The business which has called Congress together in Chicago, says a leading paper published in the Windy City, will not occupy much time, but it is of the highest importance. First and foremost will be the visit of inspection at the World's Fair grounds. It goes without saying that as the invitation came from the citizens of Chicago there will be no attempt on the part of the Fair officials to usurp the time or to prejudice the session. They will be on hand to explain when asked and to furnish desired information, leaving the colossal panorama at Jackson park to tell its own story. Congress itself will take the lead, as is proper, and there will be no attempt on the part of any one to influence its judgment as to what it shall do in the premises. Chicago is confident that seeing will be believing in this case, and that when members have used their eyes in seeing and their tongues in asking questions they will go back to Washington thoroughly qualified to talk, act, and vote intelligently. They will have the opportunity to discover how money has been spent, how the great undertaking has grown and how much more will be needed to make the great National Fair worthy of the States which have contributed so generously for their own representation, and of the whole country, which has made its appeal to the nations of all the world, through its President and Secretary of State, to come and send their exhibits. Whatever may be the result of this visit Chicago will be contented. It has no fears, however, as to the future official action of Congress after its members have had the opportunity of seeing for themselves what has been done and what remains to do. One hour of personal inspection will be more convincing than weeks of talk or months of argument would be.

BROUGHT THE WHOLE OUTFIT.

If the time allows, there is another national matter which should engage the ettention of the session. There is a euge building at the corner Dearborn and Jackson streets, in which the Fedhral Government transacts its postal, austom-house, law court, and other business, which is slowly but surely tumbling down by piecemeal. It is important that the Congressmen should see this disintegrating pile for themselves, and if they will risk the visit they may even have a chance to see some of it fall while they are there. They should then make a flying trip to the lake-front and inspect the opportunities there for the erection of a government building. This done it will be in order to move for an adjournment of the Chicago session.

TO BE A THIRD TICKET.

The People's Party to Have a Candidate of Its Own.

There will be a people's, or a third party, or an industrial Presidential ticket in the field in the coming campaign. This much may be set down as a fact. The nominating convention will be held prior to the first week in June, when the representatives of the Republican party will assemble in national convention in Minneapolis. The location of the gathering will be either St. Louis, Birmingham, Ala., or Atlanta, Ga.

The Presidential timber will be confined to L. L. Polk of North Carolina, Congressman Tom Watson of Georgia, ex-Congressman Featherson of Arkansas, Colonel R. M. Humphreys of Texas, and H. G. Taubeneck of Illinois. The choice for Vice President will rest between George F. Washburne of Massachusetts, Congressman John Davis of Kansas, and Marion Cannon of California. Present indications favor the somewhat euphonious ticket of "Tommy and George."

Politics is mighty "onsartin," but this is the barometer of the delegates to the confederated industrial conference which assembled in formal session in the Exposition Building, says a dispatch from St. Louis. Fifteen hundred have arrived—enough to crowd the Hotel Richelieu and all the boarding houses for a quarter of a mile around—and five times that number are expected, according to the advance credentials that have been received.

Delegate Washburne, of Boston, who was Secretary of the People's Party Convention held in Cincinnati last February, says that the assemblage is the biggest industrial conference ever held on earth; that the delegates represent organizations with an actual membership of 7,000,000, and that a majority of the actual voters of the South are represented.

Appearances favor the claim. Certain it is, moreover, that all the political isms that have ever been given birth in the home of the free and the land of the brave will have voice and utterance. The spokesmen of the single tax theorists, of the Grangers, of the Prohibitionists, the Greenbackers, the bimetalists, the sub-treasuryites, the antis, the Knights of Labor, the anti-monopolists and the woman suffragists are here in force. Frances Willard, accompanied by Lady Henry Somerset, who simply looks on with British eyes, was first on the field. Following in her wake came A. J. Streeter, of Illinois, the People's party candidate for the presidency four years ago; Jesse Harper, of the same State, who boasts of the honor of having placed Abraham Lincoln in nomination; Ignatius Donnelly, of Minnesota; Gen. James B. Weaver, Iowa; Col. B. M. Humphreys, of Houston, Texas, Superintendent of the Colored Alliance of the South; Representative Taubeneck, Illinois; Robert Schilling, Milwaukee; L. L. Polk, of North Carolina; and Congressmen Otis and Davis, of Kansas; General Master Workman Powderly and Secretary Hayes, of the Knights of Labor; Senator Peffer, Congressman Simpson and others.

Leaving Colorado Springs the delegates go by special train to Santa Fe, San Diego, Los Angeles, and Riverside, remaining a day at each place, also other points of interest, arriving at San Francisco on Saturday, the 21st. The other night, as the family of Henry Rodman, a weathy citizen of Harristown, near Salem, was about to retire, a noise at the door attracted attention, and, upon opening it, a man was seen running away from the house. On the panel of the door was found a note, purporting to be from a friend, warning Mr. Rodman that enemies had plotted to murder him and burn his house.

"Chub" Carroll will petition Gov. Chase to be transferred to the Northern Penitentiary, which is at Michigan City. He dislikes to return to Jeffersonville for four years, because he was so unfortunate as to kill one of the guards. The only case where a transfer has been made in many years was that of William Baggott, the book-keeper for the Jeffersonville Boot and Shoe Company, who forged their check and obtained $1,200 from the First National Bank, which he used in fleeing with Georgie Twoomey, a 16-year-old school-girl to Mexico. Upon his arrest and sentence to serve two years he was transferred to Michigan City.

Russiaville is again at the height of the capon shipping season. This year shows the most rapid strides of improvement of any heretofore given. There is a larger per cent. of money paid out to farmers who raise capons here, when the money invested in the business is considered, than in any other line. The number was formerly considered large if hundreds were shipped, but now the number reaches into the tens of thousands. Days are appointed by the dealers upon which they receive the fattened fowls, and the town, on those days is generally crowded with capon-raisers and their coops. There is a number of men who practice caponizing surgery successfully, and the business has become very remunerative. The price paid for the product this year has not been as large as in former years, but the farmers are satisfied. Even at 10 cents per pound there is much profit in the business.

An 8-year old son of J. A. Weisham, of Lebanon, it is claimed, has been cured of a mad-dog bite by a madstone, the property of Moses Neeses, near Whitestown.

John Perry, a miner aged 30, committed suicide at Rockville. The local freight train was clearing for the regular passenger train, when Perry lay down and placed his neck on the rail in front of the moving cars. The hind trucks of the caboose passed over and he was instantly killed. Two weeks ago he was adjudged insane, but his papers were rejected at Indianapolis. He was a single man.

Correspondence from Springville, Lawrence County, conveys the news of the discovery of a ledge of rare lithographic stone 1,200 yards in length, and ten feet thick. It forms a part of the wall of a large cave near Springville.

Late in the fall of 1890 Miner A. Sliney, son of Joseph Sliney, of Lagro Township, Wabash County, got drunk on liquor purchased in Andrews, Huntington County. On his way home the boy fell into the Wabash River and was drowned. His father brought suit for damages against Gauss and others where the liquor was bought, for $5,000. CHAPTER I.
INTRODUCTORY.

I believe that I am not what could actually be called superstitious, yet since my earliest recollection I have had opinions that differ from the accepted religious doctrines; and such opinions (or beliefs) are often looked upon as superstitious, if not wholly ridiculous and not to be considered. But no one deliberately manufactures his own belief—that is something over which he ordinarily has little more control than he has over the original form of his body or the color of his complexion, for, like these, it is a part of his corporate self. He can distort his body or paint his face, but left alone, they will resume their normal shape and color—the same with his belief. However, one's settled opinions are sometimes completely changed by some impressive accident, circumstance or teaching; but this change, you will see, is not wrought by his own will, but by influences that are brought to bear upon him. The influences by which we are surrounded in the main form our opinions, and our character and religion are mapped out in our intellects as by the hand of an unseen, incomprehensible destiny, and we have little thought but to follow the directions or promptings thereof. As the poet says:

"'Tis education forms the common mind;
Just as the twig is bent the tree's inclined."

In other words, the impressions of childhood bear upon one's whole life. I know that with me—Hal Mala—the impressions of childhood have hung like a prevailing vapor over the whole period of my existence; and in every tragedy, comedy or romance, in which I have been fortunate or unfortunate enough to participate, I have been referred back to the dawning of my personal history.

Orphaned in infancy, and left homeless, my childhood was spent among strange faces, and amid perpetually shifting scenes.

As there was no one to worry over my whereabouts, I went forth when I listed and came back when I willed.

I much frequented wild and out-of-the way places, and was often infatuated by gloomy objects that would have been far from fascinating to other children. The roar of the cataract as it tumbled and plunged through jagged gorges and the howling of the wind as it swept among the cliffs and crags, were my music.

I loved to wander amid the hush and the loneliness of woodland scenes. The sighing of the trees, the rippling of the brooks, the quaint sounds articulated by the small wild animals, by the beasts of the field and the birds of the air, were to me well known and welcome sounds. The wilderness was my kindergarten, and the object-lessons it presented were earnestly studied.

I had no steady place of habitation, but was taken in and taken care of, after a manner, by this person and by that, for awhile—for I was continually estray, and no one took the pains to hunt me up.

Thus my infancy and childhood passed into youth, when childhood's dreamy life ended, and then my living came by an arduous strife with adversity.

What information I possess was picked up of my own accord, regardless of schools or the pedagogue's art.

I had an early liking for letters, and explored enterprisingly the realm of knowledge, although nothing like system or order ever accompanied my efforts.

I was drilled to no particular trade, so my occupation was necessarily various, and, aside from the fact that it maintained me reasonably well, was of a sort that bore as its fruit more experience than wealth.

The course of my career finally settled in the channel of itinerant journalism, and later into that of literature, as best becoming a person of haphazard accomplishments and roving disposition.

All these circumstances, being of an exceedingly miscellaneous and uncommon character, may have combined to divert my thoughts out of any of the approved groves of religious theory, and to cause the opinions now dominant within my mind to fasten themselves upon me; but I credit my belief to other causes.

When I was a little child I held communion with shadowy forms that told me by myriad signs that they were relatives of mine; souls of my people who had shaken off the toils of material life and assumed immortal existence in the spiritual world. Long before I knew that they were ghosts I followed them about in the gloom of night and felt perfectly at home in their company.

I often followed these specters to the graveyards to witness hosts of dim forms march and stalk about among the white tombs; this, too, at times when other children were coddled up in their trundle beds at home, dreaming things not half so wild as I was looking at with open eyes and the full possession of my waking senses.

Besides the aforesaid, often in my later life has it been fully proven to me that there is but the vail of a breath between the material and the spiritual life, that some of us are granted the privilege of communing with the people of the phantasmal world.

I mention these few details of my past life, not for the purpose of expounding a theory, nor of proselyting for a new faith, but because I wish to introduce myself, my views and the circumstances by which I have been surrounded, in such a manner as to prepare you to understand the full meaning and purport of the story I am about to relate. This story is the veritable history of a certain experience in my life—no dream, no hallucination.

CHAPTER II.
ON THE BAYOU.

It was in the somber dead of night, and the red moon, wrapped in filmy mantles of light, fleeting cloud, floated low down behind the tall cottonwoods on the right, ever and anon casting a few slight beams across the black deck of a small steamboat that was headed up one of those numerous murky bayous which flooded the southern portion of the State of Louisiana.

The boat, which was a sort of "cotton lugger," contained but two passengers—my companion and myself—who were looked upon by the officers and deck hands of the craft as mysterious personages. We had come on board after dark, and were well bundled up in great coats, so undoubtedly looked quite austere and grim in the dim lights of the smoky lanterns hung about. Besides, we were going to the haunted villa on the old Spanish plantation up the country, which, as rumor had it, had for years been inhabited by none but ghostly apparitions, and which was supposed to be resting under the ban of a terrible and inexorable curse.

Our journey by boat was some twenty miles, and on our way up we had stood on the top deck, leaning against the pilot house, absorbed in thought and speaking but seldom.

Once the captain came along and touched my arm and that of my companion, and by the aid of his lantern looked earnestly into our faces. Upon being asked why he did this, he replied:

"Beg your pardon, misters, but some o' the men doubt as how ye are flesh an' blood, ye look so glum and ghostly like. They hearn whar ye're goin', an' are jest a little skeery. No live man has dared to tackle that 'ar habitation at midnight afore fur up'ards o' ten year. Don't mean to offend ye, misters, but ef 'twas me I'd wait till sun-up afore I tuk partikeler pains t' git acquainted wi' the folks at the haunted house."

This said, he walked on.

Flesh and blood! Did I know then whether it was flesh and blood I had for a companion that night, or the shade of one long dead?

Was I flesh and blood that night, or that month, or was I the ghost of myself accompanying a weird fancy along the bayous and over the fields of Southern Louisiana?

When I was a little child, untutored in letters or the ways of the world, I saw and held mystic communion with the spirits of the dead. Was I again, at the beginning of manhood, as at the beginning of life, to commune with zephyry companions?

And Burton Arold! Why had I taken him as a boon companion—a man who was as the dead come to life, so unnatural were his ways and so supernatural were his thoughts and words?

It came about in this way: I had been in the swamps of Florida on a hunt for curious insects for a Northern entomologist; and had contracted the "break-bone fever," a terrible combination of typhoid fever and inflammatory rheumatism—a disease that is very common in the swampy regions of the South. During the delirium which followed I was taken to Mobile and taken care of in a hospital. I was delirious for some weeks, and when I "came to" I was surprised at my surroundings. I inquired of the first person I saw as to where I was and why I was there. This person was Burton Arold, and he told me how it all came about. How he came to find out I do not know, for none of the hospital people had ever seen him until he was found at my bedside, and none had troubled themselves to learn his name or to give him any information concerning me. He seemed to take a great interest in me, and attended me during my whole illness with the constancy and tenderness of a firm and devoted friend.

His solicitous care had the effect upon my recovering faculties of winning my unconditional gratitude, for I found out that the hospital attendants were like a set of machinery, moving here and there in nice order, managed by master heads, but having little more sympathy for a sick person than one would commonly have for a plaster manikin, so accustomed were they to scenes of sickbed and deathbed sufferings.

His conversation also charmed me, so ineffably eccentric, buoyant, and beautiful it was. When we were alone in the dark, weary watches of the night, hour after hour, never seeming sleepy, never tired, did he hold me in trances of delight by the ecstasy of his discourse; and the wild flights of fancy, the weird imaginings with which he would occasionally burst forth when in conversation with me, wrought an agreeable accompaniment to the drowsy fervor and dreamy ideality that settled down upon me after the delirium of the fever.

I was naturally disposed to be abstruse and speculative, and the day-dreams, the ever changing phantasmagoria of imaginative objects that floated through my mind continually during my convalescence, without system or order, were from day to day made brighter, the more delightful, the more pleasantly infatuating by his fervid, passionate but almost divine genius of eloquence and poetical fancy. I began to love him as a brother and to feel a considerable admiration for him, and he seemed to reciprocate the attachment.

When I became well again, he proposed that I should accompany him into Louisiana on a visit to the house that had been the home of his sweetheart, who had died some years before. It was a haunted house, he said, but from what he had heard me say when I was ill he guessed that I was not afraid of having a friendly visit with spirits that were kindly disposed. I asked no questions, but promised to go; and thus I eventually found myself on board the small steamboat with Burton Arold at my elbow, both of us listening to the sounds that came out of the darkness, and waiting for the boat to carry us to the landing opposite the haunted villa; and as we came around a bend in the bayou and the moon went down below the horizon, leaving all in sullen darkness, the boat swung against the bank. The pilot did not dare to blow the whistle or ring the bell. The reason: It was midnight and the dreadful haunted house was just over the brow of a small hill.

We stepped on shore and parted from the boat's wondering crew. That gloomy craft swung out into the bayou and plied its way onward. We turned up the hill and walked briskly toward our destination, he leading the way.

Low but unearthly sweet music came in soft, feeling strains, from the direction of the villa, which, upon gaining the summit of the hill, I was surprised to see brilliantly illuminated. "The dance is on," exclaimed Burton, [illegible] answer to my exclamation of inquiry. "See, we are expected," and the double front doors opened and a kind-looking elderly matron of the Spanish type came forward to greet us.

CHAPTER III.
THE SPIRITUAL REVELRY.

The haunted house was deluged in a flood of golden light. Melodious music swelled and sank and echoed among its halls and chambers as if all harmonious and pleasing sounds were assembled there, wrestling in ecstasies of unrestrained delight. In the dining hall a princely banquet was laid ready for the night's refreshment. Fair maids and gallant cavaliers, gentle matrons and noble elder gallants, lent the charm of their bright smiles and delightful presence to every nook, and in the great north room sylphlike figures and fairy forms glided through the dreamy movements of quaint old Spanish reels, or galloped with pretty grace and happy attitude through the lively changes of more gay and modern fandango; indeed it was a night of revelry and joy.

The motherly lady who had met us on the threshold ushered us into a small reception-room and left us in the presence of the host, an aged gentleman with silvery locks and a stately military bearing, who was sitting in a large oak armchair, speaking in bland, pleasant manner, to a group of friends gathered round. Upon our entering he arose and welcomed us warmly. Burton, after shaking hands with several present, passed into another apartment and left me alone with the strangers, whereupon the host turned to me and suavely said: "Senor, after your night's ride you must feel, to a certain extent, the inroads of hunger. The cloth is laid and ready for the feast." Then stepping to the door of the north room he beckoned to some one within and was immediately joined by a queenly young lady of prepossessing beauty and charming manner whom he presented to me as as his daughter, the Senorita Montinni, who was doing the honors of the house as hostess. He gave me the pleasant information that as I was the only stranger among the guests, the honor of leading the senorita in to supper fell to me. Noticing that the prevailing tendency of the guests, by this time was toward the dining hall, and feeling the fair senorita's hand already on my arm, I gave her my attention and fell in line on the general march toward the table, which, when arrived at, presented a most gratifying abundance.

The viands and delicacies of the meal had a remarkable significance. None of the edibles were of the kind or quality common to earth. A mild fragrance welled from every dish, and the palatable properties of every sample were the result of a culinary art different from any that I was acquainted with or had ever heard or read of. Flowers of unknown varieties and unprecedented loveliness poured out their dainty perfume upon the air, decorated the room, the table, adorned the ladies' corsages and bloomed upon the lapels of the gentlemen's coats. Laughter, gay conversation and genteel enthusiasm went round the board and the whole company was in gay spirits. The feast, the feasting, and the feasters were a dream of aliment, radiance and pleasure.

Supper over, the company again repaired to the north room and the dancing and the music were resumed.

It fell to me to lead out in the after supper reel with the fair Montinni, but we had only got well to dancing when I discovered that I was honored with another partner altogether. This senorita was just as beautiful as the Montinni. She noticed my surprise and said: "Senor must dance with us all, so his partners must change often." She introduced herself as a daughter of Senor El Muza, who had been a partner with Montinni. She was a fascinating conversationalist, but of a mysterious strain, mostly, and alluded several times in a vague way to a mission in connection with the villa and its mystic people which she said Fate had appointed me to work out.

A dozen times within the next hour and a half were my partners relieved by new ones. Each was as beautiful as the rest, and as charming and as pleasant. They all bade me welcome to the house, and alluded to the same mysterious mission spoken of by the Senorita El Muza.

The mystery of the mission perplexed me not a little, but the infatuating revelry of the dance, and the wild, sweet music that accompanied it, did not suffer me to think seriously on the matter; so on we whirled beneath the radiant lights, guided by the wild notes of the harp, the guitar and the violoncello—the company fading and reappearing like people in a dream as they glided through the quaint figures of fandangos, waltzes and reels.

Two hours after supper my last partner said to me: "The dance is done; I must bid you good-night." I led her to the door of the ladies' room, where I left her, and upon turning around met our gray-haired host, who greeted me and said: "You will see no more of us till to-morrow night; make yourself perfectly easy and at home."

With these words he glided out, and upon his disappearance the music stopped, the revelry ceased, the lights went out, the company faded from view, and, speechless with amazement, I found myself alone in the haunted house, in the chill air and gray dawn of morning, wondering if I was asleep or awake, in my right senses or stark mad.

Spare the Spider.

Is it not enough that every bird that flies ruthlessly robs her nursery, devours her babies, and even snatches her own soft body from the very sanctum of home; that gauzy flies steal their greedy young into her nursery to fatten upon her infants; that to monkeys, squirrels and lizards her plump body is a sweet morsel they never resist; that frogs and toads snap her up without ceremony; that centipedes seize her in relentless grasp; that wasps paralyze and bury her alive? writes Oliver Thorne Miller in Popular Science Monthly. Are not these enough, without man joining the host of exterminators? Man, too, in whose service she lives! Consider for a moment her usefulness. Count, if you can the thousands of flies and mosquitoes eaten by one common house or garden spider in a summer, then remember her harmlessness. Other servants we must pay. Birds eat our cut-worms, our caterpillars, and our potato-beetles, but we have to pay a tax—small, it is true, in fruits, in berries, in green peas, in corn; owls and hawks, while they destroy moles and mice, indulge now and then in chickens. But the daughter of Arachne asks no reward, neither fruit nor vegetable suffers from her touch, no humming or buzzing attends her movements. Steadily, faithfully she goes on her way, doing her appointed work; and we, so wise, so far above her in the scale of being, we—murder her!

Biggest Game Ever Killed with Rifles.

John R. Davis, whose reputation for truth and veracity has hitherto been beyond question, writes the following from Shelton:

"I awoke this morning about 5 o'clock, and, looking out on the Big Skookum Bay, I saw five large whales swimming up the bay toward Shelton. I ran into the house and got my rifle, which is a 45-Winchester. I fired on the head whale. I saw the water splash, and knew I had missed him. Then I ran to a stump near the beach. I fired again, and this time the leviathan splashed the water with his tail, and I knew I had hit him. Then the whole school dived. I then ran down to the beach and jumped into my boat and started after them. I think they were badly frightened and lost their course, for they ran ashore on the beach opposite Shelton. When they ran ashore I fired again. They all got off the beach but one. This, I think, is the one I first shot at. Mr. Munson came out, and we shot him several times with our big guns and killed him. He is fifty feet long and eight feet high. Mr. Johnson says he is a finback."—Seattle Post-Intelligence.

A Lasting Odor.

In Constantinople the Mohammedan Mosque of Sofia is pervaded always by a strong smell of musk. In order to supply this perfume, which was freely mixed with the mortar and cement which bound together the stones, thousands and thousands of the musk antelope were slaughtered. Thus, while one stone is left upon another of this ancient and interesting building, the odor of musk must remain to refresh or annoy its visitors, according as the sense is affected.

THE GREAT SOUTH AMERICAN NERVINE TONIC
—AND—
Stomach AND Liver Cure

The Most Astonishing Medical Discovery of the Last One Hundred Years.

The Great South American Nervine Tonic

Which we now offer you, is the only absolutely unfailing remedy ever discovered for the cure of Indigestion, Dyspepsia, and the vast train of symptoms and horrors which are the result of disease and debility of the human stomach. No person can afford to pass by this jewel of incalculable value who is affected by disease of the stomach, because the experience and testimony of many go to prove that this is the ONE and ONLY ONE great cure in the world for this universal destroyer. There is no case of unmalignant disease of the stomach which can resist the wonderful curative powers of the South American Nervine Tonic.

HARRIET E. HALL, of Waynetown, Ind., says: "I owe my life to the Great South American Nervine. I had been in bed for five months from the effects of an exhausted stomach, Indigestion, Nervous Prostration, and a general shattered condition of my whole system. Had given up all hopes of getting well. Had tried three doctors, with no relief. The first bottle of the Nervine Tonic improved me so much that I was able to walk about, and a few bottles cured me entirely. I believe it is the best medicine in the world. I can not recommend it too highly."

MRS. ELLA A. BRATTON, of New Ross, Indiana, says: "I cannot express how much I owe to the Nervine Tonic. My system was completely shattered, appetite gone, was coughing and spitting up blood; am sure I was in the first stages of consumption, an inheritance handed down through several generations. I began taking the Nervine Tonic, and continued its use for about six months, and am entirely cured. It is the grandest remedy for nerves, stomach and lungs I have ever seen."

No remedy compares with SOUTH AMERICAN NERVINE as a cure for the Nerves. No remedy compares with South American Nervine as a wondrous cure for the Stomach. No remedy will at all compare with South American Nervine as a cure for all forms of failing health. It never fails to cure Indigestion and Dyspepsia. It never fails to cure Chorea or St. Vitus' Dance. Its powers to build up the whole system are wonderful in the extreme. It cures the old, the young, and the middle aged. It is a great friend to the aged and infirm. Do not neglect to use this precious boon; if you do, you may neglect the only remedy which will restore you to health. South American Nervine is perfectly safe, and very pleasant to the taste. Delicate ladies, do not fail to use this great cure, because it will put the bloom of freshness and beauty upon your lips and in your cheeks, and quickly drive away your disabilities and weaknesses.

MEXICO is having more trouble. Revolutionists and soldiers have had two or three fights in Chihuahua.

LEVI P. MORTON says he won't run for vice-president again. Like Blaine, he evidently don't see any victory this time

INDIANA may have silver mines, A vein near Brazil, shows $104 per ton in silver, and about same value in bismuth, with a small showing for gold.

FRACTIONAL paper currency is again talked of. It would be very handy, and would save buying small drafts or small postal note and money order, and avoid the trouble of getting them cashed.

WHEN speaking last week of Judge Lowry's candidacy for the Appellate Judgeship, we carelessly called it "this" district The nearness of Ft. Wayne led us into this error. Their district is the Fourth, and our district is the Fifth However, the Judge should have the place anyway, as no fitter man lives in his district.

PARTIES in Chicago received Feb. 11, at the custom house there, 1,349,000 pounds of tin plate for use in that city. It came from Wales and they paid two and two-tenths cents a pound duty. Did it come cheaper or not on account of this duty? Some republican paper might answer this very easy question we should think.

THE Butler Record has an article (copied of course) from the Toledo Blade complaining because the democratic congress failed to save a nice sum by reforming the methods of public printing. As these "methods" are those used by the republicans for the past four years, we would like to ask what is wrong about them? And why didn't they reform them and save the money?

THE Dispatch again comes to the defense of Boodler Dudley, and of Judge Woods, who did so much to save him from the penitentiary. As Dudley has never denied the corruption he is charged with, and as Woods' corrupt course in the business is a matter of record, will the Dispatch please explain the ground on which it defends both of these eminent republicans?

REPUBLICANS papers are running an article comparing the price of farm produce in the manufacturing districts, with prices in the farming districts, and then they add that farmers "can clearly see that the farm needs the factory in order to secure best prices." Do they advise farmers to move their farms into the factory districts, or the factory men to move their establishments into the farming districts? If not, what do they mean?

THE name of Dr. W. H. Nusbaum is being favorably mentioned over this congressional district as delegate to the democratic national convention. Letters from every county have shown their preference for him, and will, we have no doubt, give him their support. The doctor is an earnest, wideawake democrat, has no hobbies and no favorites, but will work for the best interests of the party. Should the choice fall on him, we believe he would do his utmost to represent the choice of the people of this district.

THE Dispatch clips an opinion with a big head "Another Republican Triumph" and then names the French invasion of Mexico, the Alabama treaty, and the recent trouble with Chile. As all of these were matters easily settled, and about which there could be no struggle it looks as if republicans had to scrape the ground pretty close to get credit for even small matters. If democrats should scrape as closely, the matters, little and big credited to their administrations would make a volume like an unabridged dictionary. But the Dispatch is not to blame for what it don't know. We blame it only for not clipping more sensible articles.

THE Dispatch is very foolish in trying to make capital out of the vote in congress giving but "50 cents a day to printers." If they were printers, and desired better wages, why did they enlist in the regular army? And as they are in the army, why are they not satisfied with their pay as soldiers, for a recruiting officer tells them what their wages will be before he even takes their names. And as they already have a good job, or at least a job they have chosen, why should they try to get a double job and so take the bread out of the mouths of regular printers—men who prefer to stick to their trade, but who will be kept out of work by men already getting pay for other services. The government should not use its soldiers take work away from its citizens. Give workingmen a chance.

THE Kendallville Standard of the 12th, and the Lagrange Democrat of the 18th. have the same COURIER article, that the Ligonier Banner had in its issue of Feb. 11. And all three papers credit the article to the "Auburn Dispatch." We are a little curious to know how all this happened. As Dr Denny of Ligonier, used to say it is a "curious concatenation of fortuitous circumstances." Will the boys please rise and explain? The COURIER has for nearly a year and a half by the assistance of W. H. McIntosh of this place, been publishing some very readable and interesting "Pioneer Sketches." The Dispatch has had nothing of the kind. So we can't see how this queer continuation of mistakes occurred.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

Cleveland at Detroit.

Ex-President Cleveland delivered the annual oration before the law students at Ann Arbor, on Monday, and from there went to Detroit, and staid over night with Don M. Dickinson, his former postmaster-general. On Tuesday, he went to Toledo, took dinner with his sister, Mrs. Bacon, and then came back to Detroit, to spend the afternoon with Mr. Dickinson. Great crowds greeted him at the depot, including a number of distinguished men of Detroit, and other parts of the state, as well as the deputy mayor of the city. The Fourth regiment of state troops, headed by a large band, escorted him to Dickinson's residence on west Jefferson street, and later, he was driven over the city, wildly cheered wherever he appeared. That evening there was a public reception at the great Hotel Cadillac, at which about 20,000 people struggled to gain admittance, though many got tired and went away. With the wonderful endurance for which he is noted, he shook hands, using first one hand and then the other, with all who came, and usually had a pleasant word for each. The "Indiana delegation, viz; A. J. Baxter, and C. S. Stoy, of Butler, Mel Coder, now at Montpelier, and the editor of this paper and wife, thanks to the efforts of Mr. Baxter, were made an exception to the general rule and invited to a private reception at Mr. Dickinson's residence soon after the arrival. As Mr. Cleveland now has no patronage to bestow, it is plain that he is loved and honored for his real worth. We do not believe there is is another man in the country to-day, who enjoys so fully the confidence and admiration of the people.

Shot the Stove.

Every body has heard of "shooting" gas wells and the like, though few we suppose ever heard of "shooting" a stove. Yet this is done now and then it seems. Again, everybody hereabouts knows Mr. Burns, the jolly little man, who has been in the railway office at the Junction so long. Anyone who had seen him Saturday forenoon, would never have thought of him as the neat, well cared for friend they had known so long. He looked more like the heavy villian in the play who has blacked up his face, and got out his tin dagger, and just as he is going to carry the good maiden off bodily is knocked over by the good young man, and as the latter and the girl go off in triumph, the aforesaid villian turns his dirty face heavenward, brandishes his dagger and shouts "Tr-r-a-i-tor. I will be r-r-r-evenged." So Burns looked. And yet he managed now and then to smile—the same calm smile he had always known. This is the explanation of the trouble. The little dumpy coal stove, in the office had been like a bad cigar or a lazy horse for some time, it would not draw. Burns said he'd make it draw. That meant business. He got a quarter of a pound of powder and swore by all the railroad gods, he'd "shoot" that stove and clear the blamed ashes out of the pipe. So he "shot 'er." She went off The stove door went off. Burns went off and so did the other boys in the office. And all waited for the "clouds to roll away." The hinges of the stove door were broken Burns' face was only the wreck of its former beauty, for on its wide landscape lay a heavy coat of ashes, dirt, powder and coals—about same as old Herculaneum. And the floor! Well it was a sight. But the stove pipe was cleared, at least, Burns insists it is, and will insist to his dying day, that the most successful way to clear a stove pipe and the room in which the stove is, is to give it allopathic doses of gunpowder.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly. For March.

The brilliant panorama of "Metropolitan Life in Winter, from Thanksgiving to Easter," is unfolded in the attractively illustrated article which heads Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for March. Caroline Washburn Rockwood writes a picturesque description of that quaint semi tropical Florida town, Key West. The University of the City of New York is vivaciously described by an undergraduate of that venerable institution. "Geo. Sand," by Evelyn Jerrold, is a biographical sketch that reads like a romance; while Alvan S. Southworth's elaborately illustrated paper on "The practical Side of Sculpture" is equally entertaining and instructive. Contributions by E. B. Southwick, Nicolas Pike, Dr. T. B. Sayre, David Ker, Walter Edgar McCann, Wilf P Pond, J. Carter Beard, Ernest Ingersoll, George C. Hurlbut, Churchill Johnstone, Minna Irving, and others, with a profusion of pictures, make up a model number of the great popular magazine.

Primary Elections.

7. To avoid any mistakes or omissions there shall be sufficient space left on the tickets when printed to write the names of any candidates thereon that may be desired by the voters for the several offices on the day of the election.

The Inspectors and judges of said Board of Election shall meet the democratic county central committee at the headquarters of said committee in Shelbyville, on Monday, following the said primary election at one o'clock p. m., and shall file the poll books, tally sheets and ballots with the central committee after which said central committee together with the inspectors and judges of the Boards of Election shall proceed to canvass and compile the returns from each precinct, and shall declare the result by officially announcing the names of the nominees for the various offices, and the candidate for each office receiving the highest number of votes shall be declared the nominee of the democratic party for such county office to be voted for at the November election, 1892. The candidate for any district office receiving the highest number of votes cast at said primary election may within ten days after said primary election nominate to the chairman of the central committee the names of the delegates from Shelby county, properly apportioned among the various townships, to attend the district convention, before which he will be a candidate; and the vote at said primary election shall be regarded as an instruction from the voters of Shelby county as a unit for such candidate. Upon such candidate reporting the names of said delegates to said central committee, the chairman and the secretary of the committee shall execute to said delegates proper credentials authorizing them to act.

It is hereby further provided, as part of these rules, that any county that will not permit the name of a Shelby county candidate to be placed on their primary ticket and voted for, wherein joint districts exist between them and Shelby county, shall not be allowed to have any candidates from such county voted for in Shelby county, and their names shall not be placed upon the primary ticket of this county.

In all district conventions where Shelby county shall not have a candidate before the convention, a majority of the delegates shall cast the vote of the county as a unit.

8. The voters of each township shall, by the same ballot, select their delegates to the state convention, except in mass convention, it may be otherwise ordered by the voters in said mass meeting, and whenever Shelby county shall have a candidate before the state convention for any position a majority of the delegates to such a convention shall cast the vote of Shelby county, as a unit, and when Shelby county shall have a candidate for any position before the state convention, the name of such candidate may be placed on the ballots as before provided, and upon receiving a majority of the votes in the county, the delegates to said state convention shall be thereby instructed to cast the vote of Shelby county as a unit for such candidate.

9. On the first Saturday following the said primary election the chairman of the county central committee and all local candidates elected at said primary shall meet together at some place designated by the chairman, and shall select an executive committee of five for the county; and on said day said executive committee and all candidates shall select a chairman for the county committee for the ensuing two years, which chairman and said executive committee shall then select a committeeman from each precinct in the county to serve on the county central committee for the ensuing two years.

10. The democratic county central committee to serve for the ensuing two years will convene at the central committee room, in this city, for the purpose of organization on the first Saturday following their selection as provided in rule number nine.

11. The chairman of the county central committee shall notify the chairman of the county central committee of each county included in the various districts, of which Shelby county forms a part, of the adoption of these rules by this committee, and send him a marked printed copy of the same, within five days after their adoption.

Mr. E. T. Carson then moved that the primary election, manner of voting, arrangement of voting places, etc., be held strictly according to the Australian system, which motion, after various amendments offered and considerable discussion, was carried by a decided majority. It was then moved and seconded that Chairman W. J. Buxton, Judge L. J. Hackney and John R. Sedgwick be appointed as election commissioners to prepare and distribute the ballots for the primary election to the committeemen of the various precincts of the county. On motion the committee then adjourned.

WM. J. BUXTON, Chairman.
ALBERT F. WRAY, Secretary.

The B. & O. is Hustling.

The B. & O. keeps making big strides to get to the front and keep there. Not long ago, they arranged to deliver free uptown all freight coming in over their lines. Then, they fixed up so they gave free bus fare to the Junction, to all who buy tickets over their line. And now they come up smiling with a new wrinkle They have put a telephone into the Hollister House, and all inquiries or business belonging to the B. & O., interests from this point, is free Anyone can inquire how the trains are, or ask any question of the agent at the Junction just as well as if he were down there. Night trains westward are often late, and a man up town can have a perfect knowledge of its location and the time it will get here. This often enables him to do a good deal of business here instead of going down to the Junction and waiting hours in idleness. It is quite a scheme, and surely a great accommodation.

The Sentinel Almanac.

The Indianapolis Sentinel has published an "Almanac and Register" one of the best we have seen. It contains a world of valuable matter besides what is generally in an almanac. There is information on a variety of subjects, and a full list of articles and rates in the McKinley tariff law, and a comparison with the old rates. There is the population of cities, the congressional and other districts of Indiana, and of the various other officers, and in fact more than we can name. It can be had for 25 cents. For sale at all book stores.

The NATIONAL HYMN AS REARRANGED FOR THE WORLD'S FAIR.
SANTA CLAUS SOAP

My Country: 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of liberty,
Of thee I sing;
Land where our fathers died;
Land where our Mothers cried,
Over the wash-tub tied
Let freedom ring.
My native country thee—
Land of the noble, free—
Thy name I love;
I love thy tucks and frills
But oh: what laundry bills;
My soul with horror thrills;
When I think of thee.
Let music swell the breeze,
And flow through all the trees
Hail SANTA CLAUS:
Let tired mortals wake
And gladly try a cake,
Let all for cleanness sake,
Join the applause.

Our exchanges are still passing around the old item to the effect that the slang phrase, "not in it" originated with an editor who looked into heaven to find a delinquent subscriber. This is a joke of course. The phrase, however was first used in the Bible, at a date before editors or delinquent subscribers were known in the world. See Revelations, the last chapter and third verse.

G. Paul Smith's lecture was well attended and gave excellent satisfaction. His help meet, Mr. Gorton, was also an excellent assistance, and between the two, it was very fine. The next on the course, is Julia F Lee, on Friday March 4. Then, the next will be Jay K. Applebee on March 25, and later will be the last and best. Lieut. Baker, the man who captured J. Wilkes Booth.

The Garrett Jaw-jaw, claims that its two typesetters corrected their proofs for Feb. 11, in half an hour. With proof readers utterly ignorant of the simplest rules of spelling, punctuation, grammar, composition, or of any other "printermatical" business, it is a wonder the boys did not "correct" in two minutes. A proof reader that knew anything would have marked them up about 10 000 more, and "killed" nine-tenths of the entire matter.

American Notes and Queries, 619 Walnut St. Philadelphia, is the name of an interesting and instructive publication. As its name denotes, it is devoted to questions and answers, some of these being of a very unusual character. As an example, we give the "March Question," which is: "Which is the longest word in the English language?" A same copy of the magazine may be had by sending 10 cents. The yearly subscription is $3. Prizes for answer, are given each month the total amounting to $100.

Several of the little urchins about town seem to think it manly and even smart to strut about on the street as dignified as the chief of barnyard fowls, sucking at a cheap cigar or a nasty pipe. The parents of the most of these boys, if they knew it, would no doubt reprimand them severely. But the parents are kept in ignorance while the young hopefuls are sneaking through back alleys tampering with a habit, which, when it once becomes fixed, holds its victim enthralled beneath the imprisoning shackels of a mental and phyical slavery, which only the of the strongest will can subdue. Could boys but see the terrible regrets awaiting misplaced confidence, and the young novitiate realize this habit is one of the firebrands that burn the human soul down to the level of inebriacy, they no doubt would shun the evil and guard their appetites with more care.

The Congresional excursion trains that went through on the B. & B., last Saturday made quite a fine display as they went through the Junction. There were for long trains and should have run ten minutes apart but the last one had got about half an hour behind. On the first section Judge McClellan and wife were on the rear platform and greeted their acquaintance as the train went whirling through.

Congress at Last Takes Action.

A bill has been introduced at Washington requiring all baking powders containing alum and ammonia to be so labeled. This is a step in the right direction, and has been long foreshadowed by the action of the state legislatures, boards of health, food commissioners, etc., in this matter. This bill affords needed protection to the public, for the evidence as to the injurious effects of alum and ammonia are very heavy; but it will nevertheless be fought bitterly by the manufacturers whom it affects who are accustomed to sell their goods as "pure Cream of Tartar," "absolutely pure," etc.

The bill is something needed. If a maker uses a drug in his powder, the name of which he does not want to have printed on his label, it is prima facie evidence that there is something wrong. We hope the subject will be vigorously prosecuted all over the country, not only as regards baking powders but also all other food adulterations.

This bill may incidentally benefit the makers of pure articles, but if it should, this is only an additional point in its favor.

7-8 Campbell & Myers,

The wife of Robert Provines of Troy township, died last week. It will be remembered that she fell down stairs Jan 31, and her injuries were so serious that she never recovered, but gradually failed until she died. Drs Casebeer & Matheny were up to see her a time or two, as they had been her physicians when they resided near here, but nothing could be done to save her.

Mr. Meese has been preaching to the congregation at Cedar Chapel, near New Era, for a couple of weeks, and the good people down there in order to "get even," got together and made the minister and his wife a large donation in cash, goods and provisions amounting to over $30. The pastor and his good wife wish to thank them heartily through the columns of the COURIER.

The citizens on West Seventh street, near the Lake Shore depot, have come to the conclusion that an electric light ought to shed its beauteously brilliant rays o'er the landscape in that vicinity. and in consequence have donated a large pole, which will stand fifty feet from the ground without a splice. There's nothing small about Seventh street, and when its citizens make up their minds to do a thing, it is done without any fuss or useless delay.

Joe. Pfefferl, our efficient marshal, don't propose to let anyone defy the town authorities, even though drunk. The young man he captured last week, would have been permitted to depart in peace, but after some sensible advice, he started off, and when as he thought was out of reach he called back and gave the marshal all sorts of foul names. This was more than Joe had to stand, and he gave chase, and got the chap into jail, and had him fined. It is safer for them to behave.

They are Still Here.

It is with pleasure that we call public attention to the manufacturing firm of Lockwood & Marxer, who are located on West Seventh street. These gentlemen have been established in business about six months, and, in that time, have by persistent effort and genuine tact, built up a permanent and profitable trade in their line, the manufacture and sale of two of the best brands of cigars on the market, namely, the Union and L. & M. This factory in a very prosperous condition, and the demand for their goods is steadily increasing.

Harter's store celebrated Washington's birthday in grand style, or rather his big front window did. Mr. Helbauer, we believe, designed it, and the scheme when carried out showed Washington crossing the Delaware, in great shape. There were the two shores of snow—made of white batting, and then the river, and the boats, with G. W's men, the British being seen on the farther shore. It drew crowds to see it.

MAX O'RELL declares that he never saw an American man with a stupid face. This is equivalent to a confession that his lectures in New York were not attended by people from the fashionable circles.

BERGEN COUNTY, New Jersey, is terrorized by a bear as the reigning sensation. The corps of imaginative gentlemen who write bear stories for the Gotham press should take advantage of the situation to ride down into that neighborhood and see for the first time in their lives a sample of their adoration at liberty.

THE Boston Post declares that the Louisiana lottery is reaping a harvest from the sale of tickets in that city. The authorities wink at the iniquity and do nothing to suppress it. The Louisiana concern is an octopus and has more lives than the cat. A business that brings in millions every year to its projectors with no chance to lose is not going to give up its struggle easily.

ONE of the more recent devices for producing spontaneity and life in a literary club is not to have the subject announced until the evening when it is to be talked about. The chief trouble about the scheme seems to be that the person who selects the subject is likely to be the only one who knows anything about it, and therefore the entertainment becomes a monologue instead of a discussion.

THE determination of one of the Hanlon brothers to forsake the stage for the pulpit recalls the fact that while many actors have become effective and successful clergymen — Dr. Lorimer being an example—no clergyman has ever become a great actor, although several of them have tried. The conclusion seems to be inevitable that while acting seems highly useful in the pulpit preaching does not go well on the stage.

THERE is yet hope for humanity A new star has arisen upon the dramatic firmament of Europe who has introduced a novel order of drama which lasts fifteen minutes! This is adapting things to the rapidity of the age with a vengeance. Signor Montanaro, the deviser of this thing, is an Italian, who has got his inspiration in Cuba, and, of course, as he is the latest he is said to be a genius. If he has the power of telling dramatically an effective and significant story on the stage in fifteen minutes he must be a genius indeed.

MR. YERKES holds that a crowded city street, with cable-cars plowing through it, gongs clanging, wheels clattering, and people shouting, is a symbol of metropolitanism. "If I want to impress a stranger in Chicago all I have to do is to make an appointment to meet him at LaSalle and Randolph streets at 5:30 in the afternoon. It makes him open his eyes." And well it may. There is no more murderous spot in the United States than that corner at that hour. It deserves the title the soldiers gave to that gory salient at Spottsylvania, "the bloody angle."

NEARLY every one is afraid of a girl of fifteen or sixteen. She has been petted until she will say almost anything, and lacks the delicacy of feeling that distinguishes people who have been kicked and slapped for impudence until they are afraid of it. But if girls of fifteen and sixteen enjoy their pertness, let them enjoy it in peace. A time will come when they will not be so gay. For instance, after they have had five or six children, and had all their teeth pulled out at one sitting, and been compelled to become accustomed to a new set, they will begin to realize why older people are so quiet and modest, as compared to girls of fifteen or sixteen.

THE great want to-day is not more opportunities, but the power to grapple with hindrances to obtain the desired objects. The men who are filling leading places in the various callings and pursuits of life are usually those who in their youth had to battle with adversity and meager opportunities, and who, by the force thus developed, have risen to their high stations. It is interesting to note that on this principle the sons of the royal family of Germany are required to learn a trade, some manual industry, that they may learn self-mastery and be able to endure hardship. A self-indulged, easy-going boy, who never knew one act of self-denial, promises little in the years of mature manhood. The boy is father to the man in that sense.

CHARLES H. SPURGEON was one of the world's greatest preachers. He was conspicuous for his rigid adherence to his earliest teachings and to his first interpretation of the sacred writings. He preached the gospel, holding in one hand the promises vouchsafed to those who "come up through much tribulation," while the other grasped a flaming sword, emblematic of that lake of fire and brimstone which he believed to be the destiny of those who forget God and "fail to keep his commandments." The positive words of the Master, "My yoke is easy and my burden is light," brought to him no confident assurance, for he took upon himself a heavy yoke and grievous burdens. He was never an orator in the best sense of that word. But he was unique among pulpit speakers, because without seeking notoriety, which is usually attained by eccentric utterances or innovation, he achieved it without departing from the grooves of his creed. His private life was as remarkable for its purity as was his public career for its earnestness.

EVER since the time of the Alabama award the American and English orators have proclaimed at every possible banquet and on all international occasions that blood is thicker than water, that hands must be clasped across the sea, and that the two great English-speaking nations of the world must never disagree so radically as to quarrel. Yet for the last quarter of a century, since the time when Blackwood admitted that the success of the Union monitors had rendered the intervention of England between North and South impossible, the voice of England has been against the policy of this nation. It has been lifted in scornful criticism of everything which tended to consolidate, strengthen and affirm a distinctly American policy with regard to foreign affairs. If we have ventured to resent impertinence from a South Pacific potentate or a South American bravo, the bark of the London press and the yelps of all the English provincial papers have been heard in discordant chorus, sneering, menacing, deriding. So it has been in this late Chilian business. What does it mean, Cousin John? Is blood really thicker than water? Can we clasp hands across the sea on which our navies and our merchant ships are henceforth to ride on widely different interests bound?

THERE was some very sensible talk at the recent meeting of the Prison Association in New York in regard to the treatment of fallen women. Mrs. Lowell, who has had long experience in the treatment of this class, urged strongly the value of the work in reformatories where the individuality of the inmates is respected, but where the moral influences are as stringent as they are gentle. She urged that there was little prospect of reformation without a training of the prisoners to work, and impressing upon them the fact that although they were women they were not, therefore, outside the pale of the legal responsibility. Mrs. "Jennie June" Croly sentimentally pleaded that the womanhood of fallen sisters be not outraged by difference of dress, or by reformatory restrictions and enforced work which kept before them the fact that they are different from the pure. To this nonsense Mrs. Lowell answered with profound good sense that there was no reason that they should not be reminded of their condition. Ignoring the facts did not alter them. She did not believe in the false sentimentality which had given woman ground to suppose that she could shield herself behind her sex when she had violated the laws of God or man. She felt that any ornamental system of apparent condonement only ended in hypocrisy and in nothing which was to be considered reform. It is refreshing to see now and then a woman who can take a broad and common-sense view of a question of this sort, and Mrs. Lowell is to be commended for the stand which she took in this matter.

WAS A GREAT ORATION.

GENERAL PALMER MAKES HIS FIRST SET SPEECH.

The Illinois Senator Claims the Attention of His Colleagues While Arguing in Favor of Popular Elections—Warmly Congratulated on Both Sides.

Popular Vote for Senators.

Senator Palmer's was one of the greatest speeches ever heard in the Senate chamber. A large crowd assembled in the galleries to witness the debut in the Senatorial arena of "the grand old man" from Illinois. There was a full attendance of Senators, and no man was ever paid a higher compliment by his colleagues. None left the chamber during the delivery of his address, and that all were charmed with the simple oratory of the Illinois Senator was evidenced not only by their attentiveness but by their congratulations at the conclusion of the notable effort. Senator Palmer said:

SENATOR JOHN M. PALMER.

MR. PRESIDENT: In calling the attention of the Senate and country to the subject of an alteration of the constitution of the United States, which shall provide for the election of Senators in Congress by a direct vote of the people of the several States, I only obey the instructions given me in the most impressive manner by the people of the State of Illinois. The people of Illinois are loyal to her constitution, and are devoted to the principles of orderly, constitutional, free government, but they believe that the election of Senators by their State Legislature under existing conditions has failed of satisfactory results, and that the reform proposed by the joint resolution now before the Senate is demanded alike by correct principles and the highest considerations of public policy. Influenced by a knowledge of this state of public opinion, the State committee of the Democratic party of Illinois in 1890, in connection with a call for a State convention, submitted to the electors attached to that party two propositions to be considered and determined by them in their primary conventions. These propositions were in substance:

"First, the propriety of a nomination by the proposed State convention of a candidate for Senator, to be voted for by the people at the next election and directly, as is possible under the provisions of the Constitution.

"Secondly, the selection of a candidate for Senator if it should be determined that a candidate be nominated.

The election of a Senator by a popular vote, which by common consent should control members of the Legislature, was not novel to the people of Illinois, for they were familiar with the history of the great contest of 1858, when Douglas and Lincoln were spontaneously chosen to represent opposing opinions upon subjects which, by their gravity and importance, interested and excited every intelligent voter in the State.

Senator Palmer then briefly described the manner in which he was elected by the Illinois Legislature, and continued:

I am here to-day the Senator thus elected by the free people of the State of Illinois, and my duty to them and my own sincere and well-matured convictions alike require me to urge upon the Senate the submission to the legislatures of the several States an amendment to the Constitution of the United States which will provide that Senators shall be elected by the direct vote of the people of the States. The constitutional method of electing Senators by the legislatures of States is no longer satisfactory to the American people. I do not mean to make myself responsible for the charges of bribery and undue influence which attend nearly every senatorial election by indorsing or repeating any of them, and in referring even in this slight manner to them I do so only to emphasize the statement I have heretofore made, that the people no longer confide in, but are profoundly distrustful of, the methods of electing Senators by the State legislatures.

It is not a sufficient answer to the popular dissatisfaction with the present mode of electing Senators to say that it is the method provided by the Constitution. The Constitution at the time of its adoption was regarded by many of the most distinguished members of the convention as an experiment of extremely doubtful success. The provision in the Constitution for its own amendment by peaceable, orderly methods was one of the happiest conceptions of profound statesmanship. To remedy the obvious omission to provide adequate security for the protection of important rights, the first Congress which assembled under the Constitution proposed ten amendments to the Legislatures of the States for their approval. These amendments were adopted and became a part of the Constitution. The Constitution we reverence is not the fragment prepared by the convention, but the complete instrument, perfected by the amendments. Five additional amendments to the Constitution have since been adopted. Of these the thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth grew out of conditions which could not have been foreseen or provided for by the most sagacious statesman, but the eleventh and twelfth amendments are organic and were devised to cure original defects in the framework of the Government.

Experience long ago demonstrated the uselessness of the electors as agents for the selection of President and Vice President. Electors are now but counters for the enumeration of the votes of the States, the John Does and Richard Roes of our political system. The constitution should be so amended that the election of senators should be taken from the State legislatures and conferred upon the people, to be exercised by them directly. Specific proof of the incapacity of the legislature to exercise electoral functions and of the capacity of the people to do so will be found on examination of the revised and amended constitutions of the older States and of the new States modeled after them. It will be sufficient for my purposes and tend to brevity for me to refer to the Constitution of the State of Illinois. That is, the original constitution of 1818, under which the territory of Illinois was admitted into the Union, and the revised constitutions of 1848 and 1870.

The Territory of Illinois extended from the Wabash to the Mississippi and from the Ohio to Lake Michigan. Almost the entire population was south of the present capital of the State, while the northern half was what in 1818 seemed limitless prairie. The population of the northern half was so sparse that as late as 1821 Chicago was described in a book of authority as a "village at the mouth of Calamick Creek in Pike County." The emigrants to Illinois Territory were the pioneers of civilization, chiefly from Virginia and the Carolinas, who had found their way through Tennessee and Kentucky.

Soon after they crossed the Ohio their migrations were checked by what seemed to them the dreary wastes of the central and northern portions of the Territory.

The people I have attempted to describe were beyond anything that we can now conceive jealous of executive authority, and therefore, by the Constitution of 1818, they reserved to themselves the election of a Governor, but surrounded him with a council of revision consisting of the judges of the Supreme Court, and then, apparently distrusting themselves, they provided that the justices of the Supreme Court and the judges of the inferior courts should be appointed by both branches of the Legislature. The Constitution further provided that the justices of the peace should be appointed in such a manner as the General Assembly should direct, and the Legislature was authorized to appoint the executive officers of the State Government, with the exception of the Secretary of State.

Under the Constitution of 1818 the Legislature was omnipotent, and it is difficult to describe the extent to which it abused its powers. It established a visionary system of internal improvements and elected commissioners to execute the contemplated public works, with authority to sell the bonds of the State in domestic and foreign markets, by which means a public debt was created so enormous that when the people in 1847 called a convention to revise the Constitution, poverty and distress prevailed on every hand.

The convention of 1847 made many valuable changes in the existing constitution. It prepared and submitted to the people a provision for the payment of the State debt, which the people, with the sturdy, rugged honesty and courage which have always characterized the people of Illinois, adopted by their direct vote and saved themselves and their posterity from the shame of repudiation. I hope I may be pardoned when I pause and say with feelings of pride that I assisted in the preparation of this proposition and voted for it as one of the freemen of the State, and that in 1869, while Governor, the currency of the country being then depreciated, Illinois paid its debt in gold.

The convention of 1847, however, did more, for it deprived the legislature of all electoral power; it provided for the election of governor and all the executive officers of the State and the justices of the Supreme Court and the judges of the inferior courts by the direct vote of the people, and further provided that no office, whether created by the constitution or by the laws, should thereafter be filled by the legislature. I confess that, as a member of the constitutional convention of 1847, I submitted to the plan proposed for the election of the justices of the Supreme Court by the people with reluctance. It was an experiment then which has vindicated itself, and the judges of the Supreme Court of Illinois, elected by the people, have justified the highest hopes of those who favored the innovation.

If it were possible it would be wise to incorporate in the constitution of the United States many of the reforms to be found in the improved constitution of Illinois and other States for the protection of popular rights. I ought now to say that in the election of senators the legislature of Illinois is subject to such criticisms only as may be fairly directed toward the conduct of the legislatures of other States. It is true that it has been charged at different times that the votes of members have been controlled by federal appointments given to members of the legislature very soon after they had voted for a successful candidate, and in one memorable case a long struggle in the State legislature was determined by the death of a member of the house of representatives, who was a supporter of one of the candidates and the election of a member who supported his leading competitor.

It has been charged by one party and confessed by the other that the vacancy was filled by an ingenious trick practiced upon the very large democratic majority. It has never been claimed that the representative from the Thirty-fourth district of Illinois represented the people of that district; nor has it been denied that if the people of the district had known he was a candidate he would have been defeated. The vote of the member from the Thirty-fourth District elected one of my most distinguished predecessors. It also "gerrymandered" the State in the adjustment of the Congressional and Legislative districts, and for this a remedy seems impossible. But if the constitution is amended to permit the election of Senators by the direct vote of the people then the "gerrymander" will no longer influence the choice of Senators, but will in that respect at least pass into "innocuous desuetude."

I confess that I doubt whether the legislative districts in any State are so adjusted as to allow a fair and just expression of the popular mind in the selection of representatives in either branch of the State legislature. I do not by this intend to assail the conduct of any political party, for while States are "gerrymandered to serve the purposes of political parties," other causes have operated to produce unfair apportionment in State legislatures. The President, in his late annual message, called the attention of Congress and the country to one instance which he apprehends may operate to defeat the popular will in one of the States in the choice of Presidential electors. The words of the President are entitled to the most profound respect.

The election for the choice of presidential electors, the election of members of the Legislature who elect Senators, the election of members of the House of Representatives in Congress, are alike influenced and often controlled by the unfair arrangement of districts. If the amendment to the constitution which I propose be adopted the members of the Senators of the United States will be chosen by the direct vote of the free people of the several States, and the Senate will be, what it never yet has been, the popular branch of the Congress of the United States.

There is one additional consideration to which I call the attention of the Senate. In 1787 the property of the country was of small value; in 1892 its value cannot be expressed in terms which can be comprehended by the ordinary mind. In 1787 it was believed by many that the security of property would be endangered by the direct participation of the people in the election of Senators; now the rights and the liberties of the people are threatened by the overwhelming and all-pervading influence of property. It is not necessary, in order to make myself understood, that I should assail or denounce those who control the enormous aggregates of either fixed or speculative property; it is enough to point to the irresistible logic of interesting conditions. The property, or, to use more expressive words, the wealth invested in commerce, in manufactures, in the railways, the forests, and in the myriad forms of organized activity demands legislation for its protection or its benefit, and its political power, whether employed in the Congress of the United States or in the State Legislature, rarely fails of success. Organized as it is, it is so related that it can direct its influence to the attainment of any desirable end.

Mr. President, the property to which I have alluded has now nothing to fear from the aggressive action of the people or from their direct influence upon the government. All that they can gain by the amendment to the constitution I have proposed will be enlarged powers of self-defense. Senators hereafter to be elected by the people by their direct votes will be their true and exact representatives, and will defend their homes and their property from unequal and expensive burdens. They will dignify the States, for the people are the States. They will recognize their responsibility to the people who elect them, and they will find their reward in the approval of their fellow citizens whom they have faithfully served.

Mr. Chandler asked Mr. Palmer if he had any objection to allowing his resolution to remain on the table for a few days longer, so that he (Mr. Chandler) could submit some remarks on the subject.

Mr. Palmer replied that this would be in entire accordance with his views.

Mr. Chandler intimated that he was inclined to take a conservative course, and was of the opinion that we might be able to stand by the constitution for a little time longer. In any event, he had reached a conclusion that the constitution had better not be amended in this respect in the year 1892.

The Religious Difficulty.

Gourville, the French Ambassador, waited on the Duchess Sophia of Brunswick, for the purpose of ascertaining if her daughter, aged 12, would make a suitable match for the dauphin.

"How exceedingly beautiful!" he exclaimed; "she is worthy of the highest rank and position. May I ask in what religion the Princess has been educated?"

"In none up to now," replied the Duchess; "as soon as we get to know what prince she is going to marry, we will have her instructed in his religion."—Lubbener Kreisblatt.

JAMES PARTON used to tell how, early in his career, he was itemizing for a weekly paper; and he noticed that a large share of the news was devoted to exposing human frailties. Thereupon he resolved to make a reform in journalism. He began to collect matter for a new feature in his paper: "Good Deeds Done Lately." During the first week he picked up only a few paragraphs for it, but he wrote a flourishing introduction, and gave good earnest of the future. But the next week the stock was still smaller. MUST WIN AT ANY COST

IS THE REPUBLICAN WATCHWORD IN OHIO.

Democrats to Be Defrauded Out of Their Representation in Congress—A Pending Gerrymander the Most Infamous in Political History—Will It Succeed?

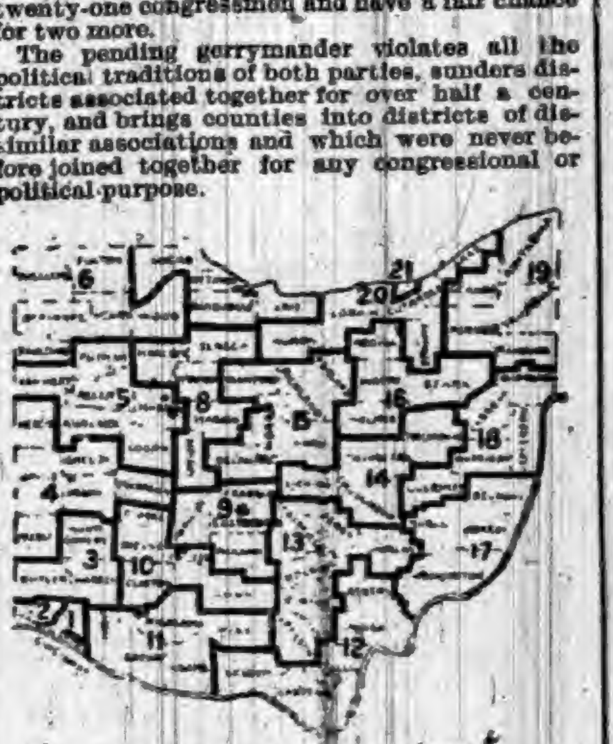
[Columbus (Ohio) Correspondence.]

The congressional redistricting bill now before the Legislature is exciting much comment here and throughout the State. It is regarded by Democrats as the most outrageously unfair measure of apportionment ever contemplated in this or any other State, and is designed to defraud the people of their just representation in the lower house of Congress.

The bill makes sixteen of the twenty-one districts absolutely Republican, and gives but five to the Democrats for their 425,000 votes in the State.

In the present Congress there are fourteen Democrats to seven Republicans in Ohio under the gerrymander the Democrats made two years ago, and under it with the 22,511 Republican plurality McKinley received last fall the Republicans could easily elect eleven of the twenty-one congressmen and have a fair chance for two more.

The pending gerrymander violates all the political traditions of both parties, sunders districts associated together for over half a century, and brings counties into districts of dissimilar associations and which were never before joined together for any congressional or political purpose.

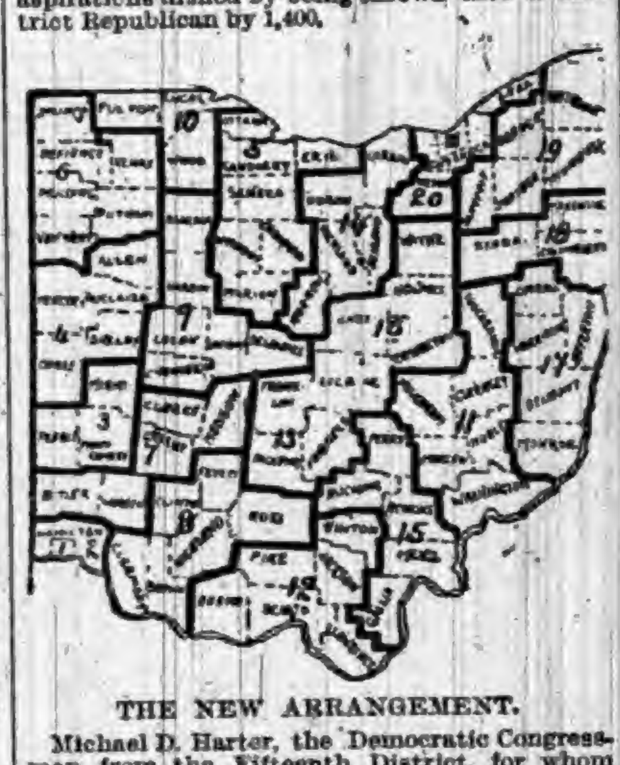


THE OLD ARRANGEMENT.

Of the present Democratic Congressmen the following nine are knocked out by being put in strong Republican districts, viz: Third District, George W. Houk; Fourth District, Martin K. Gantz; Seventh District, W. E. Haynes; Eleventh District, John M. Pattison; Thirteenth District, Irvine Dungan; Fifteenth District, Michael D. Harter; Sixteenth District, John G. Warwick; Seventeenth District, Albert J. Pearson; Twenty-first District, Tom L. Johnson. The districts of the other five present Democratic Congressmen are so changed by taking in and cutting off counties that hardly more than two of them can get nominations from their new constituencies owing to their want of acquaintance with the people upon whom they are thrust so unwillingly.

Leaving out the two Republican Congressmen from Cincinnati, whose two districts are not very much disturbed, the other five present Republicans in Congress have their districts so changed that they will all have to make a big fight for the nominations, and then some of them will be left. Of these Ezra B. Taylor represents the old historic Reserve District on the "Western Reserve," which in the eighty-nine years of the State's history has never been represented but by five Congressmen—Elisha Whittlesey, Joshua R. Giddings, James A. Garfield, John Hutchins and Mr. Taylor. Under the new gerrymander it is so slightly changed that Mr Taylor will likely be returned, though ex-Speaker Thompson is a candidate for the plum.

The old Third District, that used to boast of a representative in a Thomas Corwin, Robert C. Schenck, C. L. Vallandigham, Lewis D. Campbell and his nephew, ex-Gov. James E. Campbell, and which of late years has been reliably Democratic, is tinkered and doctored so as to be 700 Republican. Warwick's district is made strongly Republican and includes the home of Gov. McKinley, so he can return to Congress if defeated next year for a re-election to the gubernatorial chair. The great silver orator, Gen. A. J. Warner, has his future congressional aspirations dished by being thrown into a district Republican by 1,400.



THE NEW ARRANGEMENT.

Michael D. Harter, the Democratic Congressman from the Fifteenth District, for whom Senator Sherman voted as his townsman and who of all Ohio Democrats is the most opposed to free silver coinage, is cast into a district of 1,700 adverse majority. Congressman Outhwaite (Democrat) of Columbus, has his party majority so increased in his district by change of counties as to invite such competition that his fourth nomination this year is made uncomfortably hazardous. The only reason the two Cincinnati districts were at all disturbed was to make one of them stronger Republican, so ex-Gov. Foraker can go to Congress this fall if the Republican nomination for President at Minneapolis does not open up to him a more assuring future than now appears from Mr. Blaine's declination.

The Toledo district was purposely made 3,100 Republican to shut out Frank Hurd, whose free trade Democratic friends in Ohio are now arranging to send him as a delegate to the Chicago convention for Grover Cleveland.

The Twenty-first District, that Tom L. Johnson, a Cleveland-Mills Democrat, carried by 3,200 majority, is made largely Republican in hopes he cannot dig out.

James W. Owens, a warm supporter of Hill for President, has his present Fourteenth District changed to the Sixteenth and made stronger Democratic, and he will likely be returned, as he is backed by Senator Hill and Ohio's famous "whip," Ike Hill, of the House Sergeant-at-armship.

Of the five Democratic Congressmen saved by being put in Democratic districts Owens and Layton will unquestionably be returned. Hare will no doubt be dumped for a renomination, while Outhwaite and Donovan will have an equal chance to succeed, although in Republican districts, Vincent A. Taylor, Joseph D. Taylor, John A. Caldwell, and Robert E. Doan will have hard sledding to get back to Washington, while Gen. Enochs, E. B. Taylor, and Bellamy Storer, from their commanding ability and surroundings, will beyond doubt be returned.

The Republicans predicate under this gerrymander their getting sixteen Congressmen to McKinley's 22,511 plurality, but Mr. Blaine's declining to run for President may upset all this prognostication and even under this bill give the Democrats a majority of one and perhaps three.

The probability is that the bill will go through and become as great a boomerang as the one the Ohio Republican Legislature passed in the winter of 1861-62, when the popular disgust made itself manifest by returning a strong Democratic delegation.

The Foraker men will aim to modify it in the House, but it looks now as though it would pass, in which case some of the Foraker men swear they will get even with Sherman's tactics when the November election comes.
